Roosevelt To Take Helm In Drive to Aid Business

White House Talks Planned on Return From Trip, to Restore Confidence

President Roosevelt's first task, on returning Saturday from the Caribbean cruise, will be to take charge of the general Administration effort to promote business recovery, it was learned yesterday.

After Saturday's joint session commemorating the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the convening of the first Congress is over, he will turn his attention to the problem of stimulating business out of its present sluggishness, which threatens to blast hopes for a sustained forward advance in 1939.

Means for putting into concrete form the Administration attempt to restore business confidence, it was learned, will be the subject of a series of White House conferences with Government officials and business leaders.

Considers Regional Hearings

Other developments in the business situation were:

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, chairman of the President's Monopoly Committee, revealed the committee was considering regional hearings to determine needs of the little business man for funds to buy equipment and expand plants. Plans for the hearings are part of a general Administration attempt to aid small business.

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins invited 100 leaders in the business, labor and educational fields to help select questions to be asked in the 1940 decennial census of population, manufacturing and distribution.

Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., told the House Ways and Means Committee that if the Administration is to succeed in its effort to restore business confidence, it must translate assurances into budget-balancing and other definite measures.

Senator Mead (Democrat), New York, announced that he and Representative Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, would increase legislation authorizing individual banks or groups of banks to organize affiliates for the purpose of making loans to small business. Congress, in the 1933 banking act, forced banks to dissolve security affiliates which formed a large part of the machinery of the capital markets.

Curtis B. Dall, former son-in-law of the President, in Washington conferring with Securities and Exchange Commission officials regarding a new financing corporation which he will head, declared that Secretary of Commerce Hopkins' "friendly ges-

Boy, 14, Found Dead of Gunshot; Called Suicide

Baltimore, March 1.—A boy found shot to death in a field was identified late today as Charles G. Roderick, 14, a student at Franklin Day School, who had been missing from classes since Friday.

Coroner Harry D. Kirkwood gave a verdict of suicide after examining the body, found with a .22-caliber rifle between the legs and a note on the gun stock reading:

"I shot myself."

Kirkwood said the boy had been dead several days. Police reported no motive for the slaying.

Goldwyn to Ask Court: 'Include Me Out' of United Artists

CHARLES CHAPLIN | MARY PICKFORD | DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

Producer Says Chaplin, Pickford And Fairbanks Do Little Work But Get Most of Profits

By Louella O. Parsons.

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Hollywood, Calif., March 1.—A Hollywood lawsuit will be filed in New York within a few weeks that will involve some of our biggest and best known names.

Samuel Goldwyn will sue United Artists for cancellation of his contract, which means that Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks, United Artists stockholders, will be defendants in a hard-fought legal battle.

Today Goldwyn confirmed the report he would file suit, but added, "I cannot talk to you, or give you any information at this time. My legal counsel, Max Steuer and his associates, have advised me not to discuss the matter."

The battle which started at the last meeting of the United Artists stockholders, was said to have been precipitated by Goldwyn's feeling that he was making too many pictures and getting too little reward in return, that Miss Pickford was inactive, that Fairbanks had not been producing, and that Chaplin had contributed only one picture in five years.

To offset this, the stockholders claim that they furnish the distribution setup and the studios for the Goldwyn-United Artists production.

Miss Pickford is traveling with Buddy Rogers, her orchestra-leader husband. Douglas Fairbanks, at the Twentieth Century-Fox Studio, said:

"I understand that it is true Mr. Goldwyn is suing United Artists and I am sorry to hear it. The real trouble, I'm afraid," said Doug, "is that Mr. Goldwyn wants to run the entire business. He makes, I believe, only one-third of United Artists' product. . . . ."

Charlie Chaplin was working on the script of his new picture, "The Dictator" and didn't want to be bothered about such mundane matters.

A few years ago Darryl Zanuck and Joseph Schenck withdrew from the United Artists and formed the 20th-Century-Fox.

Goldwyn is himself a stockholder in United Artists and in that case would be a defendant as well as plaintiff in his own law suit.

2 Men Arrested In Attempt to Fix Hines Jury

Dewey Accuses One Of Approaching Wife Of Talesman in Trial

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 1.—District Attorney Dewey brought charges of attempted jury tampering today against Henry J. Ficke and Salvatore di Sabio as a sequel to the conviction last Saturday of Tammany District Leader James J. Hines for policy racket conspiracy.

Ficke and di Sabio were charged with embracery (unlawful attempt to influence a juror) and an attempt to approach a juror. Both, Dewey's office said, were accused of trying, without success, to "reach" Juror Harry Coon. The details of di Sabio's alleged attempt were not disclosed. Ficke, said Dewey's office, told Mrs. Maud Coon, wife of the juror, that "if the verdict was all right on behalf of Hines it would be worth Coon's while."

This remark was alleged to have been made on February 1, during the early days of the second Hines trial, which ended in his conviction on 13 counts. He was accused by Dewey of having acted as the hired political "fixer" for the old Dutch Schultz policy racket.

Mrs. Coon's report to Judge Charles C. Nott, jr., led to the action against Ficke.

New Vice Squad Personnel to Be Kept Secret

Hazen Will Transfer 8 Liquor Inspectors; 'Faces Too Familiar'

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen revealed yesterday the membership of the newly formed police vice squad—subject of a severe shakeup last week—would be kept secret.

The unprecedented move in the local police force of applying anonymity to members of a police squad and keeping their identity unknown "to all sources" was worked out last Tuesday between Police Chief Ernest W. Brown and Commissioner Hazen.

Capt. George Little, veteran head of the squad, will continue to lead the group.

At the same time, Hazen stated he would transfer eight inspectors serving the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, because "their faces have become too familiar."

"These men have done a very splendid service in revealing violations of the liquor laws, but they are so well known to licensees now that I believe it is for the good of the service they be transferred," he said.

He said the personnel of the inspection force would be changed from time to time and would also be kept secret.

"Too often members of the detective squads are recognized by law violators and therefore it is best we have new faces from time to time," he said.

Educators Oppose School Plan Only in Griffenhagen Report

Contending that the school system does not stand on the same footing as some of the more "mechanical and impersonal services" rendered by the city, the Board of Education yesterday adopted a report opposing the so-called Griffenhagen plan to set up a new department of education here.

The Board of Education, confining itself merely to that part of the Griffenhagen report dealing with the schools, said:

"The adoption of the recommendations of the Griffenhagen report relative to education would be detrimental and likely calamitous to the educational welfare of nearly 100,000 public school pupils in the District of Columbia.

"Nothing with respect to financial economy or educational efficiency in the public school system of the District of Columbia has been advanced in the Griffenhagen report that would justify the sacrifice of the traditional autonomous Board of Education for the untried and theoretical school plan proposed by Griffenhagen and associates."

The report, prepared by Charles D. Drayton, chairman of the legislative committee, said at the outset:

"For many years appointments to the Board of Education have been made by the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia (formerly the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia). Those appointed are required to be citizens of the District, presumably representative of the citizenry and with some knowledge of local needs. Previously this power of appointment had been lodged in the District Commissioners. It may fairly be assumed that Congress was con-

House Grants 17 Millions For TVA

Margin of 9 Votes Reverses Stand; Cash Will Be Used For Two New Dams

By a margin of nine votes, the House yesterday agreed to an appropriation of $17,206,000 to enable the TVA to proceed with work on the Gilbertsville Dam and the proposed Watts Bar Dam on the Tennessee River.

The vote of 184 to 175 reversed a prior House action eliminating the TVA dam construction.

The vote came on adoption of a conference report on the $1,898,000,000 independent offices bill. The Gilbertsville and Watts Bar appropriations had been retained in the bill by the Senate, after a bitter battle, and the conference report recommended House acceptance.

Woodrum Leads Restoration

Leading the fight for restoration of the TVA item, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, argued that funds already invested in the TVA program must be protected, and said the House should not "throw away" $5,000,000 already spent on the Gilbertsville project.

Woodrum, chairman of the subcommittee which handled the measure, said it was too late to vote merely on the merits of TVA or the Gilbertsville dam, because Congress voted last year to start work on the dam and work is well underway.

Brisk debate on the issue brought a running fire of opposition from a Democrat-Republican anti-TVA coalition which warned against committing the Government to additional construction running into many millions.

Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, a leading opponent, declared the Government could afford to lose money already spent on the Gilbertsville project rather than make new commitments, and Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, called it a "destructive" project that would flood fertile acres.

Goes Back to Senate

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, contended approval of the item would commit the Government to an auxilliary program ultimately totaling $392,000,000, and asked the House to wait for "another look at TVA." Dirksen said the House was "capitulating" to the Senate on TVA.

The bill now goes back to the Senate for action on two minor amendments on which the House insisted.

Criticizing prior House action in rejecting the TVA dam's outlay, Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, coauthor of the original TVA bill, charged members with going on a "sit down" strike against the program. He charged "millions of your constituents are paying 100 per cent over-charges to the power trust."

But Representative Johnson (Democrat), of West Virginia, asserted that coal, railroad and other industries would be "ruined" finally by TVA, with resulting unemployment.

Japanese Arsenal Blast Kills 200; 8,313 Homeless

By the Associated Press.

Osaka, Japan (Thursday), March 2.—A death toll of unknown proportions was taken by an army arsenal explosion at suburban Hirakata which spread fire and destruction through a wide residential area Wednesday, the war office in Tokyo announced this afternoon.

Police said probably 200 persons were blown to bits and burned to death.

The war office said 472 persons were injured.

It added that 800 houses were destroyed by the spreading explosions and fires and 100 damaged, leaving 8,313 persons homeless.

It was announced that a worker's carelessness caused powder to catch fire and set off munitions blasts.

Coast Police Find Witness Who Saw Slayer of Dancer

Los Angeles, March 1 (AP).—Capt. Dalton R. Patton said today police had located a witness who saw the slayer of Anya Sosoyeva fleeing last Friday night from the Los Angeles City College campus, where she was fatally bludgeoned.

Capt. Patton said the witness was Joseph Glasband, 17, who described the suspect as a man about 5 feet 10 inches tall.

Miss Sosoyeva, blonde, 32-year-old Russian dancer, was on her way to present a skit in a night school production at the college when she was assaulted.

Anderson Ban to Be Reconsidered

School Board Group to Review Singer's Request For Auditorium

The Board of Education yesterday reopened the case involving Marian Anderson, colored contralto, after it had been asked to reconsider its decision of last week barring the use of Central High School Auditorium for her scheduled Easter Sunday recital.

Charles H. Houston, former member of the Board of Education and now legal counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, declared in a crowded meeting room at the Franklin School that the board's decision against Miss Anderson was a "travesty on democracy," and one that would "haunt" it unless corrected.

Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. in the District of Columbia, compared the board's action of last week with the treatment of Jewish artists in Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy. At the same time, he denounced the action of the Daughters of the American Revolution in denying Miss Anderson the use of Constitution Hall.

When Katz referred to the "old fogies of the D. A. R.," Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, admonished him to confine his remarks to the board.

Referred to Committee

After a five-minute recess, the Board of Education voted to refer the controversy to its committee on the community use of buildings. C. Melvin Sharpe, who was sworn in as a member of the board yesterday, is chairman of that committee.

The committee will meet at the Franklin School tomorrow at 3 p. m. to consider the transcript of Mr. Houston's arguments yesterday. Actually all members of the board who are able will attend the committee meeting, and a definite decision is expected to be reached by the board late in the afternoon.

At the outset of yesterday's meeting, Mrs. Doyle reviewed last week's action, pointing out that the use of Central High School, which is for white students, was denied for Miss Anderson's recital (1) because of the private profit motive behind it, and (2) because Congress has charged the board with maintaining a dual—white and colored—school system here.

Cites Profit Cases

Attorney Houston, arguing against the first contention, reminded the board that Rachmaninoff had appeared at Central for a profit, and likewise the New York Philharmonic Society. Tilden and Vines, the tennis stars, he recalled, had played in the McKinley High School gymnasium, with tickets selling for $1.65 apiece.

He had made a check, Houston said, and found that in the past applicants for use of school buildings were not required to make any statement with regard to the price

Texas Station Cuts Off Preacher Criticizing Garner

Fort Worth, Tex., March 1 (AP)—Radio Station KTAT, one of the key stations in Elliott Roosevelt's Texas State network, today cut a preacher off the air while he was criticizing Vice President Garner.

The speaker was the Rev. John Lovell, pastor of the Ranger, Tex., Calvary Baptist Church.

"As long as a bunch of bankers are for Mr. Garner, he will not make a good president," Lovell was saying. "If there's nothing else wrong with Mr. Garner, and I don't think there is . . ."

A studio announcer cut in with: "Circumstances beyond the control of this station prevent the continuance of this program."

Roosevelt Orders Cruiser to Take Saito Ashes Home

Miami, Fla., March 1 (AP).—President Roosevelt cast aside diplomatic differences with Japan for the time being today and ordered a heavy cruiser prepared to take the ashes of Hirosi Saito, former Japanese Ambassador to the United States, back to the Far East.

Officials in Washington, where the popular little diplomat died last Sunday, said this would be the first time such honors had been paid a former Ambassador, although it was the custom when incumbent foreign envoys died at their posts.

Vast Arms Shortage Not Met by Record Bill, House Is Told

Goering Proclaims 'Unimaginable' Air Expansion to Face Democracies

By International News Service.

Berlin, March 1.—All limits to Germany's aerial expansion were hurled aside tonight by Field Marshal Goering, who as air minister, answering American and British rearmament, announced the Reich's air force "will be increased to an unimaginable extent."

Germany, said Goering, will spare no efforts to keep its present leadership in military aviation, and to "assure the advantage of invincibility over any air powers."

In case of war, Goering warned, action by Germany's aerial bombers and fighters would be swift and terrible.

Goering boasted that if, in the September crisis over Czecho-Slovakia, it had come to a fight, "a hell, an inferno, would have been waiting for the enemy, a quick blow and his complete destruction," by means primarily of air raids.

Peace may be safeguarded, Goering, a World War aviator, said, "only by the sharpest sword." The Reich's power in the air contributed largely to the democracies' capitulation in the Czecho-Slovakian crisis last September, he asserted.

"Must Hold Start"

Goering's full-speed-ahead signal to the aviation industry was accompanied by an appeal to the youth of the nation to join the aviation corps. Parents were urged to "abandon timidity" and give their sons for service in the air.

"I direct a glowing appeal to the youths who want to become fliers, 'Get out of your homes and come to us,' " said Goering in the first of two speeches on the fourth annual observance of the "Day of German Air Force."

"The air force already is the terror of our enemies, and it will remain so in the future," asserted Goering, "but we must hold the start we have over other nations—and because that leadership must be maintained, I summon you for service in the air force."

Physical Strength Immense

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 1.—The prediction that "we shall use all our power to increase our present 80,000,000 population to 100,000,000" was made today by Air Minister Field Marshal Goering.

In an address before Nazi military, naval, political and party leaders the No. 2 Nazi asserted Germany was one of the greatest powers the world had ever known.

He declared the physical strength of the 100,000,000 Germans of the future "shall be such as to withstand all fatigues and hardships they may be called upon to bear. Young men will stream in double and three-fold numbers into barracks. We intend to use every one of them.

"Germany is always represented as a scapegoat for its rearmament. The Fuehrer's suggestions for limiting armaments have been ignored.

"If our people, rightly led, concentrates all its forces we shall be absolutely invincible," Goering said.

The Essen newspaper, National-Zeitung, which is close to the field marshal, disclosed that "several hundreds of thousands of workers" were employed in "several tremendous" German airplane plants. The paper also reported that a "fully developed air defense zone" had been created on the western frontier during the September crisis.

Foreign Affairs Summarized

GREAT BRITAIN offered informally to discuss with Germany means of halting Europe's arms race, but continued her own rearmament by asking Commons' approval of an $800,000,000 army budget for 1939-40.—Page 4.

JAPAN'S ruling military clique supplemented regular budget estimates by asking approximately $4,000,000 a day to conduct the war in China for the next year.—Page 5.

PALESTINE JEWS were urged to use "force" in opposition to Britain's plan giving Arabs control of the Holy Land, and the plan struck new snags at the London conference.—Page 5.

Franco Asks Italians to Go, French Hear

Request Sent Duce Through Blackshirt Chief, Bonnet Says

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 1.—Gen. Franco already has asked Premier Mussolini to withdraw his blackshirts from nationalist Spain, Foreign Minister Bonnet told a closed meeting of the French Chamber of Deputies foreign affairs committee today.

Committee members said Bonnet's disclosure was the high point of a report on France's foreign relations in which he gave a "glowing description" of France's determination not to budge an inch in facing Italy's demands on her empire.

Franco's request that his review of Italian troops at Barcelona last week be their last appearance in Spain already had been transmitted to Rome by Gen. Gastone Gambara, Italian commander in Spain, Bonnet said.

Negrin's Surrender Asked

The foreign minister said certain Italian circles appeared to desire a prolongation of the warfare in Spain in the hope an excuse would be provided for keeping Italian troops there.

Therefore Britain and France were doing their best to bring the war to an end, he asserted.

Members of the committee said this meant London and Paris were trying to persuade Premier Negrin to surrender the Madrid-Valencia zone immediately.

To soften Negrin's resistance, the foreign minister was reported to have said France and Britain had obtained a promise from Franco that he would not strictly apply the "law of responsibilities" govern-

U. S. Perfects Gas Mask to Sell at $1.25

In event the rumblings do turn into war, involving this Nation, individual gas masks for yourself and family will retail at about $1.25 each

Maj. Gen. Walter C. Baker, chief of the chemical warfare service, so informed the House Appropriations Committee in testimony made public yesterday.

His service has perfected a mask whose specifications will be turned over to private producers in case of conflict, he said.

U. S. Can't Mobilize On $519,000,000, Committee Says; to Offer 2d Measure

Receiving the largest War Department supply bill in peace-time history, the House was warned yesterday that it would meet only a small part of the Army's deficiencies and cautioned of the need for the further arms provisions in the President's emergency defense measure.

Statements of America's military leaders, citing large arms shortages, were made public by the House Appropriations Committee following its approval of a half billion dollar Army bill. To correct the deficiencies, the committee promised a supplemental measure later in the session, based in part on the defense authorization measure now before the Senate.

Fiery debate over foreign policy occupied the Senate as that body concluded its third day of consideration of the $367,000,000 bill. Senator Austin, of Vermont, ranking minority member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, from the floor supported the Administration's action in selling planes to France and advocated fortification of Guam.

Lucas Attacks Nye

Late in the day Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, attacked the statement of Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, on Thursday, that there will be no war in Europe "unless the United States gives the word." Assailing Nye in as violent an assault as any heard in the Senate in years, Lucas said he "challenged the wisdom and questioned the motive" of any Senator to do deals so carelessly, so [illegible] and so loosely with the subject of cold and cruel war."

Denying foundation for the statement, Senator Lucas said "that one statement will do more to drag this Nation into the zone of war hysteria than any utterance by a responsible man in public life." He declared the present was no time to fire the imagination of the people by "loose, prejudicial, alarming and unsubstantiated statements," and asserted that they constituted "quite obviously" an inference that President Roosevelt and the Democratic Administration will be responsible for any war which may come.

Other Developments

Other defense developments included:

Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, declared in the Senate the Nation would be "shocked and stunned" to learn what President Roosevelt told the Senate Military Affairs Committee about foreign policy and defense several weeks ago.

Secretary of State Hull announced his unaltered opposition to a proposed constitutional amendment requiring a referendum before the United States could wage a foreign war.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee decided to consider a bill to establish seaplane facilities on the island of Guam. Provision for the base had been stricken from a naval air base measure in the House on the ground it would be provocative to Japan.

Plans for extensive Army and Navy maneuvers in the coming year were revealed. They involve a mock aircraft bombing attack on an industrial area with defense by antiaircraft guns, a "blackout" and warning net, and a joint landing force operation on the Pacific Coast.

Cardinal O'Connell Taken Ill On Eve of Papal Election

By the United Press.

Vatican City, March 1.—The 62 cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church tonight were imprisoned in barely furnished cells, where they prayed for divine guidance in electing a 262d Pope who will be able to turn the world away from its "contempt of Christian life, social disorders and hatred between nations."

Tomorrow morning the princes of the church, one of whom will be chosen to sit for the duration of his life upon the throne of St. Peter in succession to the beloved Pius XI, will begin balloting in the heavily guarded secrecy of the Sistine Chapel.

The ceremony of isolating the cardinals in a triangle of the Vatican, bounded by the courtyards of St. Damasus, marshal and holy office, was completed at 6:08 p. m. after the last rich rituals of opening the solemn conclave, including the mass of the Holy Ghost in the Pauline Chapel.

Then came the oath of secrecy, a pledge not to reveal any of the proceedings of the conclave under pain of excommunication.

The cardinals, garbed in purple robes of mourning, marched to their cells and the deliberations on the successor to Pius XI, who died February 10, were under way, with three cardinals from the United States participating for the first time in the church's 19 centuries of existence.

Vatican joy over the presence of the American cardinals was dimmed, however, by concern over the health of William Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, who won a long race across the Atlantic to be present but was so fatigued upon his arrival that he

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

(Though virtually every Senator is reputed to have Presidential or Vice Presidential aspirations, there are only four or five regarded by others as Republican prospects for the White House in 1940. Senator Taft, of Ohio, a President's son, is one of the four. In his guest column today Mr. Taft discusses the air of unreality he finds in the Capital—HARLAN MILLER.)

A SENATOR PINCHES HIMSELF

BY ROBERT A TAFT
SENATOR FROM OHIO

Before coming to Washington, I didn't realize that a Senator might aspire to be a columnist. But that is not the only respect in which the whole job still seems slightly unreal, and very different from what I am sure is the average man's view of a Senator's work.

Sen. Taft
. . . it seems unreal

* * * *

It doesn't seem real to me to have people saying "Yes, Senator," "No, Senator," "Senator, this—" and "Senator, that—" It doesn't seem real to go to the Senate and hear people making speeches that don't resemble speeches at all. My idea of a speech is a talk directed at somebody, intended to interest and perhaps convince him.

* * * *

Most speeches in the Senate, up to date, are addressed to thin air, or possibly to constituents back home. Certainly the gentlemen addressed don't regard them as real, because very few remain in the Senate Chamber, and even fewer listen to what is said.

A Senator's mail doesn't seem to be real mail. There was a time when I took an interest in opening letters, and a considerably greater interest in opening telegrams, but after I received 25,000 letters and telegrams in two days, there isn't much life or interest left in correspondence.

* * * *

I suppose the telegrams and letters I receive are sent by real people, but they seem a long way from Washington. They have to be handled in a routine way, because it is impossible ever to read every letter which arrives, and still do the work a Senator is elected to do.

* * * *

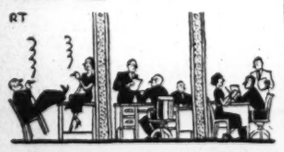
During the campaign in Ohio, I traveled all over the State. I knew I was meeting real people, with definite opinions and views of public policy. Down here in Washington it is hard for anybody to feel confident whether the opinions he hears expressed are purely synthetic or actually held by any considerable number of the people back home.

* * * *

Pressure groups are organized for the special purpose of trying to create the idea that a public opinion exists on this subject or that subject, when probably nine-tenths of the people of the State never heard of the subject and don't care what happens.

* * * *

I even find the New Deal a little unreal. I spoke and talked against planned economy and Government regulated economy so beautifully outlined by New Deal writers. But as a matter of fact, every little independent department seems to operate in a water-tight compartment, interested in its own special and narrow task.



"—each bureau is insulated"

Instead of one great machine, there seem to be about as many private departmental machines as there are automobiles in the city of Washington, each one operating under its own power, without any brakes. Machinery is whirring in every direction, but without any balance-wheel.

* * * *

The situation isn't made any more real through the attempts of columnists to reveal what the situation is.

Every one of them has different opinions, and gives a different picture of what is going on.

There must be a real Government operating in Washington. There must be real statesmen passing on real and momentous questions.

* * * *

But after spending eight weeks legislating, without passing any legislation, a new member feels vaguely uncertain whether the doings in Washington have any active relation to the people of the United States.

2d Firm Indicted As Pay-Hour Violator

The second indictment obtained under the Fair Labor Standards Act was filed in the Federal court at Boston against the Gerber Shoe Co., Lawrence, Mass., and Nathan Gerber, Administrator Andrews announced yesterday.

The company was charged with failure to pay the required minimum of 25 cents per hour, falsification of and failure to keep adequate records, and shipping shoes in interstate commerce that had been produced by employes paid less than the minimum wage.

U. S. Launches Fertilizer Trust Inquiry

'Uniformity of Prices' Held 'Compelling' Quiz By Justice Dept.

The Justice Department announced yesterday it had launched an investigation of the fertilizer industry with a view to breaking up monopolistic combinations.

The inquiry, the department said, is the result of complaints received over many years from farm organizations, co-operatives, fertilizer dealers and mixers, and various unorganized groups of farmers.

Aside from dissolving combinations which may be maintaining excessive prices for fertilizers, one purpose of the investigation will be to remove a threat to the national defense, the department declared. Nitrate of soda, an imported Chilean fertilizer, is a strategic war material.

Meanwhile, William T. Kelley, chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, told the President's monopoly committee that sections of the Clayton antitrust act were "susceptible of easy evasion."

Submits Report

He submitted a report covering the last seven years showing allegations of unfair trade and monopolistic practices in the food processing, machinery, tin plate, building materials and alcoholic beverages industries. A report on the steel industry is in process of preparation and will be filed later.

Uniform fertilizer prices, the department said, "have been maintained with such uniformity as to compel this investigation."

More than 50 investigators have been assigned to the job of running down the complaints, it was reported.

"Dangerous Consequences"

The inquiry is expected to furnish information which may form the basis of "such Congressional action as may be necessary in the interest of farmers and consumers."

"The dangerous consequences, from the standpoint of national defense, or permitting monopolistic control of fertilizers," the department declared, "was made apparent during the World War when the United States was compelled by the Chilean monopoly to pay three and four times the normal price for nitrate of soda."

Farmers of the country use each year about 8,000,000 tons of mixed fertilizers for which they pay approximately $200,000,000.

Murphy Pledges His Department Will Help Dies

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Murphy pledged the support of the Justice Department yesterday to the Dies committee on un-American activities.

He wrote Representative Dempsey (Democrat), New Mexico, a committee member, that while the department could not assign regularly a group of investigators, it probably would help out on specific requests for aid.

"If the committee will indicate what sort of work it has in mind," Murphy said, "it may be possible to designate a member of my staff who could be relieved of his duties in this department and be employed by the committee for the time being."

House Vote Backs Census Building

By a vote of 158 to 172 the House yesterday refused to concur in the Senate amendment which struck the $3,500,000 census building from the first deficiency bill. The proposal now goes to conference.

The building would house approximately 7,500 workers during the 1940 census. Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, contended the Government could find enough empty rooms in structures already built.

Rep. Schulte Offers 2 Anti-Pistol Bills

Two bills introduced yesterday by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, would regulate the use of firearms in the District. One would make a five-year jail term mandatory for anyone engaging in any crime of violence in which a weapon was used. The other would set a $1,000 fine and a year's prison term for dealers selling guns to anyone without a permit.

McNinch Plan for FCC Called A Threat to Basic Liberties

Purpose of Bill Is to Create Dictator of Radio and Communications, Rep. Wigglesworth Says in Broadcast

By James D. Secrest.

Characterizing the McNinch-Wheeler bill to set up a three-man communications commission in place of the present seven-man FCC a "challenge to freedom of the air," Representative Wigglesworth (Republican), of Massachusetts, last night entered the growing row over what broadcasters see as threats of censorship.

Wigglesworth asserted that the purpose of the bill is to create a "dictator of radio and communications" and that it constitutes a sinister threat to freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and freedom of religious beliefs.

While blaming Chairman Frank R. McNinch of the FCC for drafting the measure, Wigglesworth said "it is generally supposed to reflect the views of Messrs. Corcoran and Cohen."

FCC Breach Widens

Wigglesworth's address, carried over the Mutual network, followed the issuance of a statement of McNinch which further widened the breach within the communications commission.

Obviously angry because of published reports that the FCC had refused to face the radio censorship issue, McNinch attacked Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, who had filed a minority report, for issuing what he termed an "alarmist statement."

"Commissioner Craven, by implication," he said, "attacked the intelligence, the integrity and the motives of the other six commissioners, to execute a grandstand play of devotion to free speech and opposition to censorship."

"Clarifying" Procedure Adopted.

McNinch stated that the commission had merely adopted a "clarifying" procedure for handling program complaints. Craven, in his dissenting report, had stated substantially the same thing and complained that it still left the power and threat of radio censorship in the hands of the commission.

"It is true," McNinch added, "that Commissioner Craven goes much further—miles further than was asked or expected in the commission's direction to the committee." Consequently, he said, the commission recognized "this overstepping" and rejected the vote, 6 to 1.

Craven declined to comment on this unprecedented formal attack on him by the chairman, but he intimated he may have a statement to make later.

Named as "Trouble-Shooter"

Wigglesworth, in his address, complained that McNinch had been sent to the FCC by President Roosevelt as a "trouble-shooter" and not as a "trouble-maker."

Explaining the background of the McNinch-Wheeler bill, he cited a story in The Washington Post of December 7 forecasting the legislation to scrap the FCC and substitute a three-man agency.

Although McNinch denied knowledge of the report during House hearings on the FCC budget, Wigglesworth added, "the bill introduced in the Senate only a few days later complied exactly with the prediction."

Wigglesworth, who has introduced a resolution calling for a broad investigation of the FCC and the radio industry, said he believed the reorganization plan "is advanced at this time in the hope of concealing from Congress and the country facts which they are entitled to know."

Reiterates Monopoly Charge

The proposal to scrap the seven-man FCC, Wigglesworth said, seems to have been desired by Chairman McNinch because "certain members of the commission have consistently insisted on voting as their consciences dictated and refused to act as rubber stamps."

"Sincere differences of judgment and minority opinions are apparently not welcome in dictatorial fields," he added.

Reiterating charges of radio monopoly and trafficking in station licenses, Wigglesworth cited the FCC approval of the purchase of Station KNX, Los Angeles, by the Columbia Broadcasting System for $1,250,000 although the replacement value of the equipment was only $217,000.

Fahey Says Need to Insure Housing Loans Has Vanished

Two Federal agencies dealing with home mortgages stood at odds in a Senate banking subcommittee hearing yesterday, when Chairman John H. Fahey, of the Home Loan Bank Board, opposed extension of certain activities of the Federal Housing Administration.

Fahey attacked a bill that would continue FHA's present power to guarantee loans on existing structures and would double the amount of mortgages on which FHA can hold insurance at any one time, boosting the sum to $6,000,000,000.

An ample amount of mortgage money is now available, Fahey said, adding that the increased authorization would not be necessary if the FHA were forbidden to insure loans on existing buildings.

Says Need Has Vanished

"The necessity for insuring loans that are being made on housing has disapeared," Fahey asserted. He declared the primary reason for Government insurance of mortgages was to stimulate employment by promoting new home construction, but now savings banks, commercial banks, insurance companies had adequate funds to meet these needs at low interest.

However, Fahey said, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board has no control over interest rates which savings and loan associations in the system charge to home owners and builders. Loans guaranteed by FHA cannot, under the law, carry an interest rate greater than 5 per cent.

Fahey submitted to the sub-committee a letter from T. D. Webb, vice chairman of board, to F. J. Bailey, assistant to the Director of the Budget, which contended that:

"The continued supply of Government credit to underwrite existing mortgages and the expense to the Government involved in the operation, in our opinion, is no longer necessary. Furthermore, the continuance of the insurance of refinancing mortgages is tending extensively to induce mortgage brokers and others to solicit the refinancing of loans, many of which are already properly made and held by existing institutions, and the result in a great number of cases is to impose substantial brokerage, title examination, appraisal and other expense upon the home owner."

FHA Supports Bill

The FHA has supported the bill, which, besides doubling its authorization and continuing its right to insure loans on existing buildings, extends indefinitely its power to insure up to 90 per cent of the appraised value of new construction not exceeding $6,000.

The FHA has been criticized on the grounds that its guarantees have induced commercial banks to enter the field of home financing in competition with savings and loan associations, while critics of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board have charged that it tends to maintain interest rates on home mortgages at an unnecessarily high level.

Tobin Declines Place as Labor Unity Conferee

Decision of A. F. L.'s Chief Peace Advocate Surprises Green

By the United Press.

President Roosevelt's latest effort to reunite the warring American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations struck a temporary snag last night when Daniel Tobin, the A. F. of L.'s chief peace advocate declined to serve on the federation committee.

Tobin, president of the powerful Teamsters' Union, declined appointment as one of the A. F. of L.'s three negotiators in a terse telegram to Federation President Green.

Green Is Disappointed

Green, obviously surprised and disappointed, said he would seek a new committee member immediately and that he hoped to announce the selection tomorrow.

Tobin, whose peace efforts were noted by Mr. Roosevelt in his dramatic labor unity plea last Saturday, told Green it was "absolutely and utterly impossible" for him to serve "because of the enormous amount of work involved and innumerable wage contracts expiring" in his union. His organization is the largest in the federation.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, earlier in the day, had announced she expected to call the A. F. L. and C. I. O. conferees together within a week, possibly at the White House, after Mr. Roosevelt returns to Washington March 4.

Conference Date In Doubt

It was not revealed whether the Tobin development would delay the conference, date for which Miss Perkins was expected to announce at a press conference Friday.

C. I. O. President Lewis, who heads his organization's peace committee, also refused comment. Other C. I. O. negotiators are Vice Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman. The two remaining A. F. L. negotiators are Vice Presidents Matthew Woll and Harry Bates.

Tobin made his greatest public bid for labor unity in an appeal to the A. F. L.'s Houston convention last October. He threatened to lead his own union out of the Federation unless it authorized new peace overtures.

Green Will Not Serve

It was learned that Green, himself, does not plan to serve on the committee in place of Tobin. The latter's refusal to serve coincided with revelations that some A. F. of L. unions are opposed to the Wagner act amendments sponsored by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, at the request of Green.

The International Association of Machinists, with approximately 190,000 members, and the Pattern Makers League of North America, with about 8,000 members, have served notice on A. F. of L. officials that they will fight some of the most important amendments.

C. I. O. officials said at the same time that they were pressing their campaign to stir up rank-an-file A. F. of L. opposition to the amenments.

Senate committee hearings on the amendments have been postponed as result of the labor peace move and Green has protested vigorously.

McNary to Head G. O. P. Broadcast

The Republican National Committee announced last night that Senator McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader in the Senate, would head four speakers to be heard on the air March 4 in connection with national observance of the 150th anniversary of the convening of the first Congress in 1789.

The other speakers will be Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican leader in the House; Representative Wadsworth, of New York, and Gov. Bricker, of Ohio. All but Bricker will speak from Washington, the Governor speaking from Columbus. The speaking, over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Co., will begin at 8 p. m.

4th Held as U. S. Charges Plot To Muzzle Press

Mobile, Ala., March 1 (AP).—A fourth man was held today and more arrests were in prospect while the Federal Government extended its drive against persons it accuses of attempting to "muzzle" the Mobile Press Register.

Peter V. Crolich, saloon keeper, surrendered to District Attorney Francis Inge today and was held under $7,500 bond on a charge he conspired to deprive Henry P. Ewald of his rights of free speech and the exercise of a free press. Miriam and George McKenzie and Sam Powe, political figure, already were in jail on the same charge.

Ewald resigned Saturday as executive editor of the Press Register, a job in which he had directed the paper's fight against the lottery racket. Inge said Ewald was enticed to the McKenzie woman's home and there entrapped and beaten.

House Votes, 137-93, to Permit Andrews To Administer Wage-Hour Funds

The House yesterday voted, 137 to 93, to place expenditure of $850,000 for the wage-hour law administration under Administrator Elmer Andrews.

ANDREWS

Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, author of the move, argued that Andrews, instead of Secretary of Labor Perkins, should administer the fund since it was for his division. House Majority Leader Rayburn, of Texas, said "an embarrassing situation was created by the motion" because the wage and hour division is under control of the Labor Department.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, suggested that the House action dispelled "any doubt of what the House thinks of Miss Perkins."

President Roosevelt sent to Congress a supplemental estimate of appropriations of $16,474 for the architect of the capitol. The bulk of the amount was requested for repairs of the Capitol and congressional office buildings.

Penalties ranging up to one year's imprisonment would be imposed for the wearing of uniforms by persons engaging in foreign propaganda in this country, by provisions of a bill introduced in the House by Representative Gavagan (Democrat), of New York. Gavagan bitterly assailed the presence of "uniformed Nazis" at a recent German-American Bund rally in New York.

Representative Thomas (Democrat), of Texas, introduced an amendment to the wages and hours law, exempting all office clerical workers, writers and newspaper reporters on annual wage basis, from its maximum hour provisions.

Completion within six years of the proposed $200,000,000 Florida ship canal was urged before the House Rivers and Harbors Committee by Brig. Gen. Edward Markham, U. S. A., retired former chief of Army Engineers, and leading exponent of the project.

Gen. Markham bettered the suggestion of President Roosevelt, that the canal construction be spread over 10 to 15 years.

"I believe I could syndicate contractors and bond them to put through this canal for $160,000,000, make a profit of $20,000,000, and have ships floating in six years," he declared.

Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans affairs, warned the House Committee on Veterans Affairs that extension of pension benefits to widows and children of World War veterans who died of non-service connected injuries would increase pension costs by $89,000,000 in 1940.

New England hurricane relief funds were boosted from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 when the House voted 203 to 147 to approve a Senate amendment to the first deficiency bill.

Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, sponsored the amendment. The fund is to be used to eliminate fire hazards from fallen timber in New England forests following the hurricane last fall.

Figures on Accidents Show 8,500 Lives Saved Since 1937

Chicago, March 1.—Highway deaths declined in January for the fifteenth consecutive month, the National Safety Council reported today, with a resulting saving of 8,500 lives since November, 1937.

Traffic fatalities totaled 2,500 in January, a 6 per cent drop from the total of January, 1938, but below the rate of improvement in highway safety that prevailed throughout 1938.

The council listed three points in the January record as exhibiting the need for a continued aggressive traffic accident prevention program. They were:

The percentage of improvement in January was well below those recorded in other recent months. The monthly reductions from 1937 to 1938 ranged from 13 to 25 per cent, as compared with the 6 per cent cut this January. Even in November and December the decreases from 1937 to 1938 were 18 and 13 per cent, although there already had been declines of 10 per cent in those months from 1936 to 1937.

The decrease in traffic fatalities from December to January was only 23 per cent, whereas the average decline between those two months for the last five years has been 27 per cent.

The decreases were not so universal as in earlier months. Of 37 reporting States, only 20 showed reductions, while 15 had more deaths this January than last. In 5 of these 15 States the increase was 30 per cent or more. Two States showed no change.

Many Killed In Homes

Hartford, Conn., March 1 (AP).—Home and recreational activities take a greater accident toll than the automobile, it was disclosed today in a five-year survey by the Travelers Insurance Co.

Automobile accidents accounted for 23 per cent of all claims, while accidents about the home accounted for 35 per cent.

Strike Holds Up Substrato Planes

St. Louis, March 1 (AP).—Work on Curtiss-Wright's new 30-passenger substratosphere transport and other planes under construction at the company's St. Louis plant was halted today by a strike of about 500 to 600 production employes.

The plant also had been making structural parts for 100 military planes being assembled by the company at Buffalo, N. Y., for the French government, but the work was virtually complete.

Miss Perkins Seeks Union Of Job Agencies

Secretary Emphasizes Need of Co-ordination At Senate Hearing

Union of the United States Employment Service and the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation under one head was urged before a Senate committee yesterday by Secretary of Labor Perkins, as she indicated that she would like to see both agencies in the Department of Labor.

Asserting that Chairman Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board, has said that the two bureaus should eventually be joined in the Labor Department, Miss Perkins observed, "I'm inclined to think I agree with him."

The Employment Service is now in the Labor Department and the Unemployment Bureau is in the Social Security Board.

Miss Perkins asserted there was an "integral relationship" between the employment service and other branches of the Labor Department, including the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Children's Bureau and the Bureau of Conciliation.

Pointing out that she was deeply interested in the success of the unemployment benefit program, Miss Perkins assured the committee that unemployment compensation would be "sympathetically promoted" if Congress decided to hand it over to the jurisdiction of the Labor Department.

The Secretary partly attributed lack of co-operation between Employment Service and Unemployment Compensation officials in some localities to faulty personnel. There should be "drastic changes," she said, where "full co-operation" has not been achieved.

Miss Perkins said she thought reemployment the most important feature of governmental relief activities. She said that 7,500,000 persons are currently registered with the Employment Service, of whom about 3,000,000 are required to register because they are on relief.

Jury Indicts Kansas City Hot Spot Operators

County Officials Accused of Corruptly Allowing Claims

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, March 1.—Some of Kansas City's brightest and "hottest" night spots were involved in 110 indictments returned today by the Jackson County grand jury, when it was disclosed their operators had been indicted on liquor law charges.

Revelation that the jury had pried into Kansas City's gay life-after-dark followed by a day the arraignment of Charles Carrolla, named by Federal Judge Albert Reeves as the "big man" of the city's gambling industry, and two county officials who gained office with the backing of Boss Tom Pendergast's Democratic organization.

The county officials were accused of corruptly allowing claims against the County Court—an administrative body.

The liquor law indictments likewise reached into "high places"—in the night life field. Among those arraigned were Gus Gargotta and Tudie Lusco.

Gargotta, an operator of the Chesterfield Club, is a brother of Charles Gargotta, who, until recently was charged with assault with intent to kill Sheriff Thomas Bash. The case was dismissed last December and it was this dismissal action that prompted Gov. Stark, intra-party foe of the Pendergast organization, to state conditions in Kansas City "smell to high Heaven."

Lusco, an owner of the Stork Club, is a brother of Joe Lusco, former North Side factional leader.

The jury's attention to detail was illustrated in the indictment of John A. Schueszler, Class A patrolman, on charges that he "did unlawfully play at a game of chance commonly known as 'craps' with two cubes or dice."

'Indifferent' Enforcement

Philadelphia, March 1 (AP).—Political domination of the police department by Mayor S. Davis Wilson and other city officials has resulted in an "indifferent" enforcement of laws against gambling and vice, a special grand jury reported today.

The final presentment of the grand jury was submitted to Judge Curtis Bok with the request that it be made public.

Mayor Wilson was indicted earlier this week at the request of the grand jury for misbehavior in office and failure to suppress gambling and vice. He was accused of intimidating the police by transfers, promotions and demotions.

Of the mayor's control of the police department, the report said "he actually so directed it that organized vice could and did flourish unmolested in Philadelphia, particularly in the summer of 1937."

Blaming Secret Marriage, Woman Ends Life With Gas

Note Tells Manager Of Apartment House Bills Will Be Paid

A romance that began three years ago ended in death yesterday for Miss Annie F. Moffat, 37, who was found on the bed of her gas-filled apartment at 1133 Thirteenth street northwest.

She left a note stating that she had rented the apartment last month with Alvin E. Pacheo, an automobile salesman to whom she was married, under an assumed name, because she did not wish her family to know of her marriage.

Pacheo told police that he and Miss Moffat were not married, but were in love and had been keeping company for "quite a while."

Notes to Father, Manager

Notes were left to her father and the building manager of the apartment house in which she met death. The latter note said:

"We came here and registered as Mr. and Mrs. A. Paterson, the real name is Pacheo; we registered this way due to the fact that we did not want my people to know of our marriage until we were settled in our apartment, but many things have happened since then. I'm sorry this had to take place in your hotel—but please notify my husband—you will find him at the Nash Motor Co., 2156 Champlain street northwest, or 4923 Fourth street northwest, Ge. 4297. The account owed this hotel will be taken care of.

"Good-by."

The note was signed Mrs. A. E. Pacheo.

Certificate Says Suicide

Gilbert S. Keckley, assistant manager of the apartment, discovered the body on a bed not far from the kitchen stove, three jets of which were open. The woman was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital ambulance doctor. She appeared to have been dead for about 12 hours.

Harris & Ewing.
ANNIE F. MOFFAT,

Police would not reveal the contents of the other notes, which they said were personal, but Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of the detective bureau, said that their contents revealed that she had been unhappy about her romance and because of financial difficulties.

Miss Moffat had been an employe of the Potomac Electric Power Co. for 17 years until several weeks ago.

Coroner Macdonald issued a certificate of suicide.

They Never Knew 'Mikado,' So, Don't Mind When He Swings

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 1.—The testy William Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan may be twisting in their graves, but their classic, "Mikado," was swung tonight by 125 rollicking colored singers under the auspices of the United States Government—and New York liked it.

As the tradition-bound Savoyards of the London d'Oyly Carte Company purveyed G. & S. with the approved niceties of diction and meter only a few blocks away, Uncle Sam's successful venture in the drama, the Chicago WPA Company that private producers tried vainly to buy, made its bow to a packed and enthusiastic house.

There were bursts of applause even before the curtain rose when Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt entered, followed by Mayor LaGuardia with Mrs. James Roosevelt and Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, former WPA administrator.

The colored version is not just a stunt, explained Harry Minturn, the veteran actor-producer, who conceived the idea, executed it and saw it through a five-month capacity run in Chicago.

"They give it a certain unction of honesty of interpretation I've never seen before," he said. (And he played in the "Mikado" for years.) "With white actors, there's always a pronounced tongue-in-cheek atmosphere, whereas with Negroes you get spontaneous fun—just the comic note that Gilbert and Sullivan implied."

The "Swing Mikado" is played 'straight," as originally written, throughout—barring characteristic accents and mannerisms—and the syncopation, swing and jitterbug dancing are brought in on encores, so that even ancient G. & S. disciples might applaud heartily.

The cast, which rehearsed three months, is composed mainly of persons without previous theatrical experience. However, several principals and a group from a "Green Pastures" road company that folded in Chicago several years ago are experienced performers.

The show is booked officially for only six weeks, but when it sold out for the first week nearly as soon as the box-office opened, they started thinking more in terms of months.

The D'Oyly Carte Company was challenged to a box-office battle—the Chicago company having netted more than $35,000 so far—but replied with some disdain that their business needed no competitive stimulation.

But they did accept an invitation to a special matinee of the colored rendition.

Girl, 12, Said to Have Been Assaulted by Drunken Slayer

By the Associated Press.

Vandalia, Ill., March 1.—State's Attorney Floyd Sonnemann said tonight Clifford Redmond, 27, had signed a written confession in which he admitted slaying his former employer, Paul Brand, and Mrs. Brand, during a drunken birthday celebration.

He denied criminally assaulting their 12-year-old daughter, Gloria Ann.

At Edinburg, Ind., Coroner Walter L. Portteus said a physicians examination showed an attempt had been made to assault the girl.

The double killing near Edinburg, was disclosed at dawn today when the frightened girl left two younger children in bed and ran to a neighbor's home for help.

Arrested in Pool Hall

Redmond, arrested this afternoon in a pool hall at Ramsey, Ill., waived extradition and was returned to Indiana tonight.

The lanky farm hand was quoted by Sonnemann is saying there was no motive for the killings.

Dressed in overalls and showing no sign of nervousness, Redmond reconstructed the slayings as follows:

He sold his dog for $5 to buy whisky with which to celebrate his birthday. About midnight he went to the Brand home. He crept into the bedroom of Mr. and Mrs. Brand, shot them to death with a borrowed .22-caliber rifle, then beat their bodies with the weapon until it snapped in two.

Escapes in Auto

He escaped in Brand's automobile.

The hysterical gloria told officers she recognized the farm hand as the intruder who shot her parents and then came into her room where she was sleeping with her 3-year-old sister, Judith, and brother, Tommy, 10.

Gloria said she and the other children were too frightened to leave their room until daylight. She sobbed out a story of how she heard a loud report, then some scratching. She said everything became quiet until a man stalked into the room and attacked her.

Officers found the body of Mrs. Brand, 43, in her bed. On the floor lay Brand's body, wrapped in several blankets.

Hugh Walpole Tells of Papal Election Rites

Pageantry Goes Back to Middle Ages, He Says

By Hugh Walpole.

(World Famous Novelist.)

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Vatican City, March 1.—Today I saw 62 cardinals as I shall most certainly never see them again.

And I think that perhaps, although it was entirely unexpected by me, I caught this afternoon a greater sense of the pageantry that is truly of the Vatican than on any other occasion—yes, even at the funeral itself.

Yet it was in a sense a very simple thing that I witnessed—the passing of the cardinals through the Sala Regia in procession from the Pauline chapel into the Sistine chapel.

Take Allegiance Oath

In actual fact all that occurred was this: A procession formed in the Pauline chapel, where a brief mass was said, then, to the most beautiful chanting of the hymn "Veni Creator," the cardinals walked to the Sistine chapel, where severally they took the oath of secrecy and allegiance to the church.

Thence they passed into their cells, and this evening the doors were sealed.

These are the bare facts, and it would be simple enough to say that all I personally saw was the procession of these cardinals from one chapel into another.

I saw, in fact, a great deal more than this. Never before in my life have I been both spiritually and physically swung back so completely into the Middle Ages.

No Change in Ceremony

It is true that pressing around me were priests and visitors and a few others who were permitted to enter the Vatican. Here, you might say, was the modern world, and on all sides of one, as the cardinals passed, could be overheard speculation as to this possibility and that.

But as soon as the noble guards, magnificent in their gold helmets, their uniforms thick with gold, took their places on either side of the narrow passage, time stood still, and I knew that there was no change in what I was witnessing from the ceremony of 500 years ago.

It was, in fact, more remarkable because the great painting immediately behind the men is a famous representation of the Battle of Lepanto, and the multitudinous figures represented there seemed to involve in their company the noble guards, the Massare—the magnificent gentlemen in high white ruffs who stood at the doors at either end of the Sala, and the distant figures of two Swiss guards in their orange and red just outside the great doors.

From that moment until the procession actually began, I knew that the curiosity and excitement I felt had been felt in just the same way through hundreds and hundreds of years, as this spectator or that waited for this last procession—the last procession that anyone in the world would see while there was yet no Pope.

Pacelli Walks Alone

Then, with a sudden warning to the guards to stand at attention, Cardinal Pacelli, attended by his secretaries, walked alone past me into the Pauline Chapel.

There was again a long pause, then the choir appeared, led by the most famous living composer of religious music, Lorenzo Perosi.

Then, behind a golden crucifix, and between rows of noble guards who stood with swords drawn, came the cardinals. They walked so close to me that I could have touched any one of them on the shoulder.

For the first time, I felt deeply the extraordinarily different characters of these men. It seemed almost impossible that men of such different personalities should be brought together for this one common purpose.

I was struck also by the sense of weariness and strain that many of the faces showed.

In their robes, and wearing their crimson hats, the cardinals all had a timeless look, and once again I felt that I was watching a procession of 500 years ago.

None Walked Buoyantly

Some were very old. Almost none walked buoyantly. The lips of one or two moved in prayer, but all looked straight ahead of them, and it is seldom that I have seen a procession in which the principal actors were so little conscious of the spectators, or of whispered comments.

After it was over, and the strains of the "Veni Creator" had died away, as I was descending the steps of the Vatican I heard something of the exhortation made this morning by Mgr. Bacci to the assembled College of Cardinals. It seemed a fitting epilogue to the vision of that parting procession.

I shall only say that he pleaded with impassioned eloquence for the choice as Pope of a man of purity and strength.

He spoke especially of the danger to the youth of many nations today, who are being taught contempt of Christianity, and especially of hate and differences among nations.

He concluded with a prayer for Pius XI, invoking celestial aid and protection for his successor.

But his emphasis on the necessity for a spiritual Pope seemed to many people today to point very directly to Cardinal Pacelli.

I know that I, myself, as I went out into St. Peter's Square and into the town's silent but ever-dangerous traffic, had to shake myself vigorously before I could escape from the atmosphere of that medieval scene.

Percy Crosby Sued For Divorce in Va., Married 10 Years

PERCY CROSBY

Percy L. Crosby, cartoonist, received notice yesterday that his wife, Agnes Dale Crosby, is suing him for divorce after ten years of married life. Mrs. Crosby has applied for an injunction restraining him from "assaulting or molesting her."

Notice was served on the cartoonist when he returned to his home at Langley, Va., from Florida, that his wife would move in the Fairfax County Circuit Court on March 20 for suit money, alimony during the litigation, and allowance for maintenance of their four children. Crosby also was enjoined from making any attempt to molest his children, regain possession of them, or bring suit in any other court.

Refugee Board Accepts Nazis' Exodus Plan

Program to Remove 150,000 a Year Halts Racial Laws

By the Associated Press.

London, March 1.—The Intergovernmental Refugee Committee definitely accepted today a German plan for the emigration of Jews from the Reich.

The project calls for sending young Jewish wage earners from Germany as soon as possible, the creation of a trust fund out of Jewish property in Germany from which Jews would be permitted to draw in proportion to their wealth, and a guarantee to older Jews against further Nazi anti-Jewish legislation while the emigration plan was in operation.

The committee hopes to find new homes for 150,000 young German Jews within a year. It authorized on February 14 the establishment of a private international corporation to finance a five-year $300,000,000 Jewish emigration plan.

(Estimates of the number of Jews in Germany vary between 400,000 and 450,000.

Since details of the emigration plan were announced during a committee meeting two weeks ago, Nazi officials have decreed that Jewish leaders in Berlin must submit to officials 100 names daily of Jews who could emigrate within a fortnight.)

Chile to Admit 68

Montevideo, Uruguay, March 1 (AP).—Sixty-eight Jewish refugees were promised a haven in Chile at the last moment tonight as they were about to be returned to Europe.

The party was disembarked after Italian Line officers of the Conte Grande had delayed sailing for seven hours. The Chilean Embassy said visas would be granted tomorrow.

The Uruguayan cabinet had canceled the party's visas on grounds of irregularity. A haven at Buenos Aires likewise was refused.

Aid Planned for Children

New York, March 1 (AP).—Clarence Pickett, executive secretary of the American Friends Service Committee, announced today the formation of a "nonsectarian committee for German refugee children" which would seek to bring into the United States during the next two years up to 20,000 refugees under 14 years old.

The committee's first action would be to seek passage of the Wagner-Rogers bill, which asks admission of up to 10,000 children this year and another 10,000 next year.

The committee co-chairmen included George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago and the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, dean of Washington Cathedral.

Britain Invites Nazis to Discuss Arms Race Halt

Germans Told, However, Not to Bring Loaded Pistol to Conference

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, March 1.—Prime Minister Chamberlain tonight delegated one of his cabinet ministers to invite Germany to sit down with Britain at a conference table and discuss a halt to their arms race, and other matters of common concern to the two countries. Germany, however, was requested not to bring a loaded pistol to the peace parley.

This unusually frank and outspoken offer to Reichsfuehrer Hitler was delivered by Lord Zetland, secretary of state for India, at the annual dinner of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce. His talk, which had the approval of the prime ministers may be taken to represent Chamberlain's views exactly.

Up to Germany

"Let us make this clear beyond all possibility of doubt," Lord Zetland began, "Germany has it within her power to bring this insane race in armaments to an end, by the simple expedient of crying a halt to her own feverish concentration on rearmament.

"She wants equality; well, so do we. She will find us more than willing to discuss with her at the conference table all such matters as are of common concern to our respective countries."

The British, he said, had no wish to attack anyone else, but if the British are attacked, "we shall hit back hard. We have got the machines, and we have got the men and our strength in both machines and men is increasing with every day that goes by."

The insensate competition in armaments threatens Europe with bankruptcy, not only in money, but in intelligence and moral sense as well, according to Lord Zetland, who added:

"What is humanity coming to? Is civilization indeed to be submerged in one vast agonizing orgy of destruction?"

$757,325,100 Army Bill

In preparation for the "orgy," if it must come, the British government plans to spend $757,325,100 on the British army in the coming fiscal year, an increase of $219,555,800 over 1938. These gross estimates were submitted to Parliament today by the War Department.

The arms expansion provides for an establishment of 185,700 men, compared with 170,000 last year. In addition the army reserve will be raised to 139,000.

Mechanization of the army is proceeding rapidly. In 1914 the cavalry required 28,742 horses as compared with only 4,455 in the coming year.

Other aspects of the preparedness for the war of the future were disclosed to Parliament by Sir John Anderson, civilian defense minister. He said his department had ready 50,000,000 gas masks for free distribution and an additional 1,000,000 respirators of a superior type for issuance to A. R. P. workers. Also orders had been placed for 1,400,000 of a special respirator for the protection of babies and 1,300,000 more respirators for young children of 2 years and upwards. Delivery of these is to be completed in the next few months.

127,000,000 Sand Bags

For protection against aerial bombardment of government offices and other important buildings throughout the country, the government expects delivery of 127,000,000 sand bags from the bag industry in Dundee and has ordered a further 200,000,000 sand bags from India.

The government is proceeding with its plan, Sir John said, to evacuate about one-third of the people from vulnerable areas, and to billet them in country homes at the outbreak of war.

Zionists Urged To Use Force Against Arabs

Secret Broadcast By Extremists Raises Palestine Tension

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, March 1.—Tension in Palestine was heightened today when a secret broadcasting station urged Jews to resort to physical force as the only remaining method of holding fast to hopes of an independent Jewish state.

Leaflets also were widely distributed by Jewish extremists who, clamoring for armed resistance to a reported British plan to make the Holy Land an independent Arab state, called upon Jews to use "active force" against "enemies."

The Palestine Jewish Assembly authorized its national council to call a general strike if necessary to demonstrate Jewish solidarity against the British suggestions.

The council urged an increase in the fund for improving Jewish defenses and issued a manifesto rejecting the British plan, broached at a London conference of British, Arabs and Jews, because it would "'impose a minority status." The council, which includes all sections except extremists, threatened to withdraw from co-operation with Britain if the plan were put into effect.

Steel-helmeted troops in armored cars patrolled Jerusalem streets after week-end disorders. An estimated 220 have been killed and 265 wounded since the first of the year.

To See Chamberlain

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, March 1.—Jewish delegates to the Palestine conferences are expected to make a final appeal to Prime Minister Chamberlain tomorrow for withdrawal of the British proposal for the eventual creation of an Arab-dominated state in the Holy Land, linked to Britain by treaty.

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the Jewish agency, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, it was understood, will demand abandonment of the British scheme in its present form and call attention to the adverse effect it has already had on Jewish and other opinions, particularly in the United States.

In event of a breakdown, the British government will assume complete liberty to impose its own solution on Jews and Arabs alike.

Even the Arabs, who were filled with joy when they were given an outline of the promised Moslem state, have grown critical of the British plan, which they think does not go far enough to meet their demands.

Japan to Spend 4 Million Daily In Chinese War

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 1.—Japan is preparing to appropriate an officially estimated $4,000,000 daily for fighting in China during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1940.

Army and Navy authorities today fixed the probable expenses of the conflict for 1939-40 at 5,270,000,000 yen (currently $1,438,710,000). This so-called special military budget, plus additional accounts, is to be submitted to Emperor Hirohito tomorrow and presented Friday in the lower house of Parliament, where approval seems assured by tradition.

(The regular 1939-1940 budget, as approved December 2 by the cabinet, was the largest budget in the empire's history, and totaled 3,694,752,000 yen—$997,583,000.

(The supplementary military budget for the Chinese conflict in 39-40 was $37,060,000 more than the sum sought for 1938-39.)

Of the new requested appropriations, the army would receive 3,140,000,000 yen and the navy 850,000,000 respectively $857,220,000 and $232,050,000). Another part, 650,000,000—$177,450,000—would be earmarked for a reserve fund, and the remainder would be placed in what are called additional accounts.

$519,000,000 for Arms 'Far Short,' House Committee Promises an Additional Bill

Defense

that the Army has but 879 fighting planes ready for defense of the United States.

The War Department announced Gen. Arnold will take control of training and other functions of the General Headquarters Air Force, heretofore an independent unit under the chief of staff.

Senator Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico, demanded the United States give recognition to the Franco government in Spain to forestall offending Latin-American countries.

Estimates Are Cut

The House Appropriations Committee cut the Army budget estimates by $20,447,832 in recommending a bill providing $499,857,936 in actual funds. However, in permitting the War Department to contract for additional sums, $519,363,924 will be available during the next year.

Declaring that the provisions made for arms and equipment were "'far short" of those necessary for the Army's mobilization needs, the committee published testimony by Secretary of War Woodring, Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, and Gen. Arnold, to show how short the service is in fighting equipment.

Gen. Craig testified that of the 227,034 semiautomatic rifles required by the Army under its "protective mobilization plan" only 12,500 are on order and 25,000 provided in the present bill. Approximately half the requirements for mortars and antitank guns will be provided by next year, it was indicated, while at that time only a third of the Regular Army and about one-sixth of the National Guard's needs for medium tanks will be met. Shortages in antiaircraft guns, searchlights and locators will continue, it was said.

In explaining existence of these shortages, the House committee said that the supplemental bill, planned for later, will provide for 30 per cent of the deficit.

The Army bill, allowed $1,028,000 additional for the National Guard, provided for a year's training for 150 additional reserve officers and restored a cut made by the budget in C. M. T. C. training. In practically eliminating an item for modernization of the French 75 mm. field guns, used since the World War, the committee revealed that an improved gun of 105 mm. will soon go into production.

Guam Plan Held Commercial

Declaring that many National Guard and Reserve officers were too old for active service in their grade, the committee suggested that they be denied reappointment.

Secretary Hull, in opposing the war referendum plan, declared experience showed the representative form of government best calculated to keep us out of war.

Chairman Walsh, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, in announcing the group's decision to consider the Senate naval air base bill containing the Guam base rather than the bill passed by the House without it, said that there is "much confusion" over the Guam proposal. Declaring it was "a commercial development," he predicted that "'when the facts are known" the country will favor it. Open hearings on the measure will start on Monday.

In the Senate debate, Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, attacked the Administration's Guam proposal, declaring that it would cost "billions and bankrupt the Nation." Senator Austin took issue, stating that "as long as we are in the Orient, I'm in favor of a base at Guam."

The controversy over the sale of military planes to France cropped up again in the debate, when Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, charged that he had been told "by a major in the Military Committee room" that all of the copies of the secret testimony on the deal taken by the committee had been destroyed. Later, however, Chairman Sheppard corrected this impression and handed him a copy.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, came to the defense of the Administration and urged Bridges and Lundeen to tell "any deep, dark secrets" they might have learned.

Bullitt Debated

A reported statement by the American Ambassador to France, William Bullitt, that the United States was preparing to drop isolation, led to an exchange between Senators Austin and Borah.

"I wish to say that I think there is nothing about this particular bill, in and of itself, that indicates the United States has changed in the least degree its foreign policy," said Austin. "My own notion about it is that we have never at any time in the history of this country had an attitude of isolation."

Borah declared Ambassador Bullitt is "sadly mistaken" if he is "undertaking to say that the United States is preparing to adopt a policy under which we would make treaties and tie this country into another country's possessive policy in case of war."

As the session opened, Republican Senate Leader McNary, of Oregon, and Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, jointly introduced a resolution requesting the President to negotiate with foreign nations for transfer to the United States of nearby foreign possessions and acquisition of strategic war materials as part payment on defaulted war debts.

Air Training for Colored

Senator Bridges proposed an amendment to the defense bill for the War Department to provide at colored colleges all training now available at the Army's air training center.

The House Merchant Marine Committee approved an Administration bill to provide a Coast Guard air and cutter base in Alaska, seaplanes and three large cutters mounting 6-inch guns.

Publication of the hearings on the Army supply bill revealed testimony by Gen. Arnold indorsing the sale of planes to France as an aid in perfecting the warcraft and increasing plant pay rolls.

Other matters revealed by Arnold included:

Plans for private industry to manufacture bombs by a newly developed method from which greatly increased production is expected.

A request to manufacturers for bids on a training plane to be made of plastic materials. Arnold said he hoped that eventually planes would be "poured" like concrete.

Experiments with stainless steel and welding in the hope that the present use of 40,000 to 50,000 rivets in each plane may be discontinued.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. —Adv.

Secret Reports Sold to Russia, U. S. Charges

Powerful German Acid That Eats Ship Hulls Revealed

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, March 1.—Information concerning alleged co-operative German-Japanese-Mexican espionage in the United States and a German acid so powerful that it eats through a ship's hull was included in secret naval intelligence reports sold to Russians by a former agent of the Intelligence Department, the Government charged today.

U. S. Attorney Benjamin read to a jury hearing espionage charges against Mikhail Gorin, Soviet Intourist agent; his blonde wife, Natasha, and Hafis Salich, Russian-born former naval intelligence agent, from 21 of the 69 confidential reports that Salich allegedly admitted selling Gorin. Salich purportedly got $1,700 for revealing the documents he was sworn to guard, and was promised "more."

Salich's reports included one that according to "reliable reports" a number of "German, Mexican and Japanese people are tied together in espionage activities in this country."

Mysterious Fishing Boat

The acid report involved a mysterious Japanese "fishing" boat that alternately flew American and Japanese flags and carried such a powerful radio that it communicated directly with Tokyo.

This boat, the Flying Cloud, said the report, in June, 1937, landed some large gasoline-type drums which it took from the German freighter Edna in the Port of Ensenada, Lower California.

"These (drums) were stored in a warehouse run by an Italian and kept guarded there day and night," said the report.

"In September, 1937, the contents of one of these drums were obtained. It was not gasoline, but an acid which, when mixed with salt water, formed a solution a little way under the water and would eat into any kind of metal."

The Flying Cloud, intelligence said, "is reported to do very little fishing. It refueled from the Sendai Maru (another Japanese vessel). It flies the American flag when it comes near shore, but flies the Japanese flag at sea."

Japanese Does the Work

An American radio operator is stationed aboard as required by U. S. maritime laws, but he was said to be required to do no work, his duties being performed by an "expert Japanese operator."

A Japanese freighter and three Japanese fishing boats, all unarmed, were accused of carrying on espionage by taking pictures of United States fleet units.

The Government charges that Salick was employed to procure only United States secrets on Japanese armament and espionage. He reportedly considered Japan a "common enemy" to the United States and to Russia and said he was violating no laws in furnishing data to Gorin. The Government charges that Gorin instructed Salich to "lay off" counter espionage reports on Germany, that this matter was being handled in another way from Moscow.

Italy and Poland To 'Collaborate' On Foreign Policy

Warsaw, March 1 (AP).—The foreign ministers of Italy and Poland today agreed on a "friendly collaboration" between their countries which diplomats interpreted as indication of Polish sympathy with Italy's colonial aspirations and the five-nation anti-Comitern pact.

A joint Italian-Polish communique was issued shortly before Count Ciano, Italy's foreign minister, boarded a train for Rome after a five day visit with Polish Foreign Minister Beck.

Italy, Germany, Japan, Hungary, and Japan's dependency, Manchoukuo, have signed the anti-Comintern pact, Ciano was understood to have refrained from insisting on Poland's signing.

Wife a Nervous Wreck as Boy Gets 'Telephonitis'

Minneapolis, March 1 (AP).—Mrs. Caroline Buesen had jangled nerves—door bell nerves—tonight after two days of running to the front and back door. And yesterday was wash day and today ironing day.

Men came bearing chow mein, liquor, and groceries, or to fix the radio or refrigerator and deliver fuel and three loads of coal she hadn't ordered. She said 150 called in all.

Detectives picked up a 15-year-old neighbor. Liquor dealers in the classified section of his telephone book were checked off and pages were folded back at the grocery and electrical repairs sections.

Police said tonight the youth, confined three days with the flu, had a bad case of "telephonitis."

U. S.-British Union Urged Against Totalitarian Menace

English Author Suggests Check on Dictators

"Anschluss between the United States and the British Commonwealth is the only answer" to the menace of the totalitarian axis, Dr. George E. G. Catlin, English author and lecturer, said here yesterday.

"I don't mean American entanglement in Europe, but British disentanglement from Europe," he explained in his suite at the Wardman Park Hotel. "We aren't going to accomplish anything in this world today without boldness and imagination."

Ten years ago, he added, "anyone would have thought Hitler's present central European bloc a ridiculous impossibility. But what Hitler has done to solidify 80,000,000 people can be done with 500,000,000 people, who would be a rather more substantial factor in deciding the worlds' destiny."

Dr. Catlin, who has traveled extensively in the United States and the British Empire, calls England "that section of the British Commonwealth which has the misfortune to be on the fringe of Europe."

"What really matters," he said "is Canada, Australia, South Africa—and your country. I'm much more interested in New England than the British colony of Nigeria."

was compelled to drop out of the conclave procession and had to be assisted to his cell.

Prelates expressed concern over the health of the 79-year-old Archbishop of Boston who leaned heavily upon his cane as his nephew and secretary, who accompanied him from the United States, assisted him to cell No. 54 in the new wing of the Vatican.

The conclave doctor said the cardinal was in good health but needed rest after his journey.

The main body of the cardinals marched into the conclave area at 3:30 p. m., to remain behind sealed doors and whitewashed windows with about 200 aides administering to their needs until a white whiff of smoke arises from the chimney of the Sistine Chapel, announcing that a successor to the papal throne has been chosen.

There will be two voting sessions each day, with two ballots cast at each until a two-thirds majority has been reached.

It was generally expected that a new Pope, probably one of the Italian cardinals and a "religious" prelate rather than a "political" one, would be elected by Friday or Saturday and crowned ceremoniously on Sunday, March 12.

The challenge to the 62 cardinals on the enormity of the task facing them was contained in the sermon of the mass of the Holy Ghost in the Pauline Chapel by Mgr. Antonio Bacci, secretary of the Latin priest who spoke solemnly of obligations due to "the present world situation."

It was announced that the cardinals would take a double ballot at each of their two daily sessions, beginning Thursday morning.

If the first ballot is inconclusive a second will be taken. If the second also shows that no two-thirds majority has been obtained the ballots of both castings will be put together in the silver-painted stove, mixed with wood shavings and burned, to produce black smoke.

When a pontiff has been elected only the ballots will be burned, producing a feather of white smoke.

Thus, although there will be but two smoke signals a day, each will carry the report of two ballotings.

Britain Offers Haven

[A British government spokesman in Commons today made a guarded offer of shelter for Spanish Republican leaders, saying their applications for admission to England would receive "sympathetic consideration."—Editor's note.]

To strengthen France's diplomatic representation at Burgos during the critical months ahead, committee members said, Marshal Henri Petain, 82-year-old "hero of Verdun" in the World War, had agreed to become ambassador to Nationalist Spain.

His name was expected to be presented at a cabinet meeting tomorrow.

Planes for Africa

Bonnet said reinforcements had been sent to Tunisia to meet Italy's increased forces in Libya.

At Marseille an unstated number of fighting planes were loaded aboard a plane carrier which left tonight for Algeria. The cruiser Jean de Vienne left Toulon Monday for Casablanca.

Bonnet told the deputies French influence had greatly increased in the Netherlands, Denmark, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Poland.

The Polish foreign minister, Joseph Beck, had convinced him, Bonnet said, that Poland remains faithful to her French alliance.

The foreign minister also cited President Roosevelt's stand on sale of planes to France as an indication Washington was taking a position alongside London and Paris.

New Loyalist President

Madrid, March 1 (AP).—An official communique tonight tonight announced that Diego Martinez Barrio had assumed the Presidency of the Republican government of Spain, succeeding Manuel Azana, who resigned.

Martinez Barrio has been President of the Cortes (Parliament). (Martinez Barrio had indicated he would not accept the post of President.)

The communique was issued after a cabinet meeting in a small unmapped village near Alicante in eastern Spain.

The statement added that, "in accordance with the constitution, Martinez Barrios has taken over the executive post."

[In Paris, Martinez Barrio, who has consistently opposed continuation of the war, said he would not accept the office until he had consulted Spanish leaders already in France, the United Press reported. —Editor's note).

Reichsbank Agrees To Underwrite German Exports

Berlin, March 1 (AP).—A new impetus was given Germany's "export or die" drive today by a Reichsbank agreement to stand all losses German exporters may suffer as a result of sudden changes in foreign exchange rates.

Rates at which exporters obtained credit for their business were lowered February 1 to enable them to better fight competition in markets abroad.

Roosevelt To Discuss Aid To Business

Business

tures" to business would do much to stimulate recovery.

President Roosevelt is expected to confer next week with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Undersecretary Jones regarding the plans to revamp the corporation tax structure to remove "deterrents" to business.

The effort to bring about a truce between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor fits into the general effort to correct trouble spots in the economic structure.

O'Mahoney said the monopoly committee had not definitely acted on the proposal for regional hearings. They will be conducted, presumably, by a special group of committee members.

It was learned, meanwhile, that a bill introduced by Mead and Allen authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to insure loans to small business up to $1,000,000 after the manner of the Federal Housing Administration plan is widely supported by Administration, Congressional and business leaders. SEC officials are said to be particularly interested.

Would Bar "Over-Regulation"

It is regarded as doubtful, however, whether Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC will support the proposal, which would direct the corportaion to insure up to 80 per cent of the risk. Jones previously has opposed plans of this kind.

O'Mahoney said small business would have to be protected from "over-regulation" by the Government. Safeguards also must be set up, he declared, to prevent practices in restraint of trade by big business which would have the effect of crushing small business.

Testimony before the monopoly committee, he said, shows that Congress has been "wabbling from one side of the road to another in its attempt to regulate commerce."

Hopkins will confer with business leaders on March 10 and 11 with regard to plans for the census of manufactures. Further conferences will be held March 14 and 15.

Swope, testifying on the proposed changes in the Social Security act, urged adoption of the Wisconsin plan of plant reserves as a means of stabilizing employment. Under the Wisconsin plan, he said, most of the unemployment compensation tax paid by an employer is placed to his credit, instead of being pooled in a general fund. If the employer keeps unemployment down, his tax is reduced next year.

"Confidence is not a thing of hasty growth," he said. "I don't think you can assure business today there will be no further punitive measures or heavy taxes. It is by your acts that we shall know you, not your promises; and we shall have to wait."

Swope insisted that the Wisconsin reserve plan would assure a minimum annual wage to thousands of workers.

Mead said details of the bank affiliate bill had not been worked out, but that banks would be permitted to guarantee debentures of affiliates. The debentures would be sold under Government regulation. He suggested that the affiliates might pay 4 per cent for money and charge 6 per cent for loans to small business, leaving a 2 per cent margin for operating costs and losses.

Jones announced, meanwhile that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation authorized $6,099,782 in loans to industry in January, bringing to a total of $294,803,707 the amount advanced for private enterprise in the past five years.

There remains $78,671,179 available for loans to industry, Jones said.

3-Car Crash Hurts Washington Boy, 4

John Murphy, jr., 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, of Washington, was cut about the head yesterday in a three-car accident 1 mile from Warrenton, Va.

A car driven by Mrs. Carolyn Gaither, of Atlanta, Ga., skidded, turned over and rolled down an embankment. Murphy stopped to render aid. His car was struck by a third machine driven by Thomas O'Neil, of Wilmington, Del.

Those injured in the accident were Mrs. Gaither, Joseph Youman and Mrs. Edna Youman, of Swarthmore, Pa.; O'Neil and the Murphy child.

Percy Byron, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Byron, of Rockville, suffered a fractured pelvis yesterday when he collided with a truck while coasting in his wagon.

The accident occurred in front of Reed Bros. Garage at Rockville. The child was taken to the Montgomery County Hospital at Sandy Spring.

Rails Indorse Bill to Save Bankrupt Lines

Measure Would Allow Roads to Reorganize Without Receivership

By the Associated Press.

Railroad leaders yesterday urged passage of legislation permitting distressed roads to adjust their debts within the shelter of the Federal courts but under their own managements.

Witnesses, headed by R. V. Fletcher, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, told of their satisfaction with a bill by Representative Chandler (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee conducting the inquiry.

Under Chandler's proposed amendment to the bankruptcy reorganization act, railroads not now reorganizing under section 77 could seek adjustment of their debts with approval of a three-judge Federal Court.

ICC Consent First Step

The railroad would seek first the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission for a new issue of securities or a reissue. (Fletcher suggested an amendment to require assent of 25 per cent of creditors.)

If ICC consent were obtained, the railroads would need then the approval of two-thirds of their creditors (in aggregate claims) to petition the Federal Court for relief under the act.

The three-judge court would hold such hearings on the program of debt adjustment submitted. Submission of a plan of adjustment having the consent of three-fourths of the creditors and meeting the approval of the court would be necessary before the end of a year.

No Receiver Necessary

No receiver would be necessary under the setup and the railroad's operation would not be disturbed, sponsors of the legislation said.

Fletcher described the proposal as "economical and sound" and added that it offered every protection for minority creditors.

His sentiments were echoed by Henry W. Anderson, counsel for the Baltimore & Ohio, and Luther W. Walter, attorney for a group of railroad investors.

Southerner after Southerner arose yesterday before Congressional committees to reiterate the charge that the freight rate structure is damaging to Dixie, but most of them declared that remedies should be applied only after painstaking and thorough study.

Otherwise, they said, new injuries might be inflicted on the economic system in their section and in other areas.

Witnesses included C. E. Widell, traffic manager of the Tennessee Products Corporation, Nashville; C. B. Bee, representing the Oklahoma Corporation Commission; J. C. Murray, Little Rock, Ark.; Ernest O. Thompson, member of the Texas Railroad Commission; P. A. Frye, secretary of the Louisiana Public Service Commission; E. L. Hart, secretary of the Atlanta Freight Bureau, and E. R. Tanner, traffic manager of the El Paso (Tex.) Chamber of Commerce.

Methodists to Burn $150,000 Mortgage On Home Sunday

There will be a blaze in the pulpit of Foundry Methodist Church Sunday night when the $150,000 mortgage on the Methodist Home will be burned.

Part of a mass meeting sponsored by the Home's Board of Managers, of which Mrs. Harry Hoskinson is president, the ceremony will be a highlight of the institution's golden anniversary.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church will speak. Dr. G. Ellis Williams, District superintendent, will preside, and music will be provided by the Hamline Methodist choir.

House Committee Called to Consider Reorganization

First meeting of the House Reorganization Committee on the new Cochran reorganization measure has been called for today to ready the bill for early House action.

Although some Republican opposition was anticipated, Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, expressed confidence the revamped measure would receive support from a House majority.

Chief criticism to date has been aimed at changes in the rules of both houses to permit vote on the President's merger plans before they become law within 60 days. The Wheeled amendment, requiring affirmative action by Congress on all merger plans, may be proposed in the Senate as a substitute.

$20,850 Alimony Judgment Granted

Mrs. Frances Scheer, of 5500 New Hampshire avenue northwest, yesterday was granted a judgment of $20,853 in back alimony, against Julius Scheer, manager of a Washington clothing store.

The alimony judgment, one of the largest ever obtained here was on a petition filed by Jean M. Boardman, attorney. The couple were divorced in 1923. Justice Bailey's order reduced future payments to $15 a week, since Mrs. Scheer's daughter, Beulah, is now married.

Howard Chandler Christy Calls 1939 Girl Level Headed

Being Out in the Open Hasn't Hurt Their Looks, Either, Famous Painter of Portraits Confesses

Only one thing is worse than a bad mural, in the opinion of Howard Chandler Christy, the artist—and that is a bad portrait.

"When a portrait stops short of good, it is the most terrible thing in the world," the man who has painted enough pretty faces to launch maybe a million battleships, declared yesterday at the Mayflower.

During the past 16 years Christy has finished more than 300 portraits, returning only occasionally to the illustrations that won him fame.

"What I paint makes little difference to me, just so I paint. Landscapes, women, men, and children—I like them all. I like murals, too, if they are good; but I've never tried to do any," he said.

Although he refused to say whether he thinks the modern girl as pretty as the "Christy girls" which adorned magazine covers in the early 20's, Christy confessed that the girls of today are "pretty level-headed."

"Being out in the open so much hasn't done anything to their looks, either," he agreed cautiously. "But I think our grandmothers were lovely, too."

Let Girls Have Way at Once, Says President of College

That's How to Succeed in Educating Women, Says Chief of Stephens; 500 Pupils Following Him Here

If a man wishes to be successful as the president of a girls school the way to do it is "to do everything the girls want done, and do it immediately." Dr. James Madison Wood, who has headed Stephens College for Women at Columbia, Mo., for 27 years, said yesterday.

"That's the way to get along with women, wherever they are—in school or out," he declared.

Dr. Wood, whose school has 1,548 girls enrolled from 46 States and is considered one of the educational "bright spots" of the country, is in Washington clearing the way for 500 of his girls who will be here tomorrow.

"Extremely Personal"

The girls are coming on two special trains for the specific purpose of learning about the Nation's Capital "the only way girls can learn—at first hand."

"Girls are extremely personal in their reactions and always see things concretely, rather than in the abstract. That's the one basic truth about education for girls we had in mind when we started these national tours."

Ever since Dr. Wood became president of Stephens he has amazed the other educators of America. During his first year, when the school had but 52 girls and 106 years of finishing academy traditions, he announced he was in the market for a $10,000-a-year man or woman who could "do something about the religion of students in Columbia."

Hired Maude Adams

Since his salary was less than a third of that at the time and his other teachers were paid from $300 up to $500 a year, everyone gasped. He looked for the person for six and a half years and then took Jessie Burrall away from the National Geographic magazine to do the job.

The idea worked, just as most of the other Wood ideas have worked. Year before last he got Maude Adams for "$10,000 for ten weeks' work" in much the same manner.

Today he is looking for a philosopher who is a "real enough philosopher to teach people how to live now, rather than just handing out the theories of other philosophers who are dead." He's been looking for him for eight years, and knows he "will find him eventually."

"Almost everything we do at the the school is news because we believe women's education has been the weakest spot in our whole educational system and are unwilling to accept the old things that have helped to keep it so," he said.

Dr. Dodd's Trial In Hit-Run Case To Start Today

Hanover Courthouse, Va., March 1 (AP).—Dr. William E. Dodd, former Ambassador to Germany, will go on trial here tomorrow on a charge of hit-and-run driving and causing injury to Glois Grimes, 4-year-old colored child.

Dodd, accused of leaving the scene of an accident December 5 when the child was struck by an automobile on a highway near here, was indicted by a Hanover County grand jury in January. He pleaded innocent when arraigned.

The 69-year-old former college professor, at the time he appeared before Trial Justice Robert T. Winston several days after the accident, explained that he was not sure at the time that the child had been hurt.

The Grimes child since the accident has been in a Richmond hospital, where attendants said today her condition was fair.

District to Honor 250 Safe Drivers

Safety awards will be made by the commissioners to more than 250 drivers of District government vehicles, at a National Safety Council meeting in the departmental auditorium, Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets, tomorrow at 8 p. m.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer will preside. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, David McCoach, jr., Assistant Engineer Commissioner; Patrick H. Tansey and Charles G. Morgan, jr., manager of the division of operations, the American Trucking Association, will speak.

School Board Report Assails District Plan

Board

vinced by the process of trial and error that the power should be transferred to the court.

"Control and administration of the public school system in the District of Columbia are practically identical with that which has prevailed for more than half a century in the several States. This means a Board of Education for lay control and for policy-making purposes, and a superintendent of schools for professional management. This preserves the right of local self-government respecting a function most intimately associated with parental duty and guardianship—a function which has always been dear to the hearts of the American people and most jealously cherished. It will not be contended that the education of our children, as a function of municipal government, stands on the same footing as some of the more mechanical and impersonal services rendered by the city. These come more directly within the recognized functions of the government which properly and primarily have to do with the physical well-being of the citizens, whereas the moral and mental education of children at least theoretically is entrusted by Providence to parents and if that duty is to be taken on by the state it is still incumbent upon parents insofar as it lies in their power to see that the control is not too remote."

Functions Would Be Split Up

The board pointed out that, under the Griffenhagen plan, the functions now exercised by the Board of Education would be distributed among several departments, each having other duties unrelated to education. Thus, it said, the community center department would come under the department of parks and recreation; the school budget would be transferred to the department of finance, and the operation and maintenance of school buildings would be transferred to the department of public works. It continued:

"Even the boards of examiners of teachers, concerned directly with the professional personnel upon which the efficiency functioning of the school system chiefly depends, are to be transferred from the jurisdiction of the superintendent of schools to the department of personnel which cannot be presumed to be as well qualified to set up and maintain standards peculiarly adapted to the teaching profession."

"We believe that education constitutes a special case and involves functions definitely distinguishable from those connected with practically all other functions of municipal government. There is no statement of facts in the Griffenhagen report which tends to show that the purposes sought under the present organic act, setting up a board of education clothed with adequate powers, have not been attained.

On the recommendation of Supt. Frank W. Ballou, the board protested against the granting of a beer and wine license to an establishment near the Armstrong High School. It also voted to change the date for the competitive cadet drill from May 11-12 to June 1-2. Ballou explained that there were too many other activities in May.

Kennedy May Quit

Hearings on the Griffenhagen plan for reorganizing the District government were postponed yesterday until early next week as Chairman Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, disappointed over public reaction to the report, said he would resign from the House District Committee as soon as the fate of the proposals is decided.

Representative Kennedy, as chairman of the sub-committee on reorganization, had scheduled the inquiry to begin today, but he was compelled to accept the delay because of his inability to get the subcommittee together.

Kennedy, who just before Congress convened refused the chairmanship of the House District Committee, said he had reached the conclusion that he was wasting his time and efforts in behalf of the District but that because he had sponsored the Griffenhagen study he would see it through.

Obviously smarting under critical attacks that have been directed against the Griffenhagen plan, Kennedy said:

"This job doesn't help me politically back home. And, instead of appreciation, I get criticism from the pople of Washington. I am convinced that the Griffenhagen plan, if adopted, would save the taxpayers $3,000,000 a year and provide a more efficient and effective government.

"Yet already various interests and persons are shooting the program full of holes. Instead of approving the meritorious features of the plan, they are trying to wreck the whole plan just because some parts of it are objectionable to them."

'Friend' Admits Kidnaping Of Katz's 4-Year-Old Son

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Mitchell, His Pal for 20 Years, Pretended to Aid Him; Trapped By Police, He Names Accomplice

By the United Press.

New York, March 1.—George Katz said tonight he would never trust anyone but his wife again so long as he lives.

He was thinking of 20 years of friendship with Charles Mitchell, who confessed he had honored a trust by kidnaping Katz's 4-year-old son, Michael, for a $180 ransom. Mitchell named Sol Schwartz, 29, as his accomplice. They pleaded not guilty and were held in $50,000 bail in Brooklyn today.

Mitchell said he was the "intermediary" in the ransom payment. He told police a dime novel story of his encounter with the "kidnapers," in which mysterious voices, dark hallways and personal courage on the part of Mitchell were highlights. Katz beamed with pride in his old friend, tried and true in an hour of need. Mitchell said he would do anything for Katz. The police said they would check his story.

They found inconsistencies in his tale that Mitchell and Schwartz were friendly and that together they owed a total of $6,800 to bookmakers and loan sharks. The ransom demand was for $7,000. Both had been away from their jobs at the time of the kidnaping and both lied about the reason.

On top of all that little Michael contradicted his "Uncle Charlie" about the "rescue."

Mitchell had said that following the kidnapers' instructions, he went to a tenement house and on the second landing found the boy coming downstairs. H carried him down, he said. But the boy insisted:

"No, no! Uncle Charlie carried me upsairs!"

So last night police set their trap. They had estimated Mitchell's courage and decided it didn't weigh much. Capt. Frank Bals asked Katz's brother, Al, to telephone Mitchell and ask:

"Do you think Schwartz was mixed up in it?"

"No, he couldn't have been," Mitchell said. "He was working with me all that day."

Satisfied, police set out to pick up Mitchell and Schwartz, but before they could find them Mitchell telephoned. He blubbered that he was ready to give up.

John Philip Sousa Will Be Honored At Rites Today

John Philip Sousa's 87-year-old sister, Mrs. Catherine M. Varela, will be among those attending memorial services for the bandmaster in Congressional Cemetery at 4:30 p. m. today.

The Marine Band and Boy Scout Troop 10, first one organized in the city, will furnish music and a wreath will be placed on the musician's monument.

The memorial committee received word yesterday that his widow, Mrs. Jane Sousa, has been confined to bed.

SEC Aide Ordered Held in Desertion

Robert Ingraham Barry, 37, analyst for the Securities and Exchange Commission, yesterday was ordered returned to New York City to answer an indictment charging abandonment of minor children.

Chief Justice Wheat signed an extradition order surrendering Barry to Sergt. Frank C. Lyons, of the New York City police, following a hearing in District Court.

France Decorates Aide in U. S. Crash

Paris, March 1 (AP).—Capt. Paul Chemidlin, representative of the French Air Ministry, whose presence in a crashed United States bomber January 23 made him a key figure in the disclosure that France was negotiating for mass purchases of American planes, was promoted today to be an officer of the Legion of Honor. "For exceptional services."

Court to Guard Jury List for Warring Trial

Justice Laws Fixes April 24 for Third Conspiracy Hearing

Extra precautions to guard the names of prospective jurors for District Court as an outgrowth of the Warring jury-fixing scandal were revealed yesterday as Justice Laws fixed April 24 for the opening of the third income tax conspiracy trial of the Warring brothers.

Plans for guarding the jury lists were adopted following disclosure a member of the jury panel drawn for the first Warring trial was approached and asked to talk over the case a week before he was to answer in court his summons for duty.

The prospective juror did not sit in the first trial nor testify in the jury-fixing case, which resulted in a 26-month sentence for Emmitt Warring, 34, head of a $2,000,000 a year numbers racket; a 12-month prison term for John Underwood, former deputy United States marshal, and shorter sentences for three others.

Emmitt Warring yesterday agreed to withdrawal of Attorneys William B. O'Connell and Harry Whelan, who represented him in the first two tax cases; and substitution of F. Joseph Donohue. Donohue represented him in the criminal contempt hearings growing out of the jury tampering disclosures which halted the second tax trial last month.

Former District Attorney Rover, representing Charles Rags Warring and Leo Paul Warring, asked that the trial date be advanced to May 2, when a new jury panel will be drawn for District Court. Rover said "time is the only thing that will restore to any extent the poise and equilibrium of the people of this District in regard to the defendants." He said after May 2 the new jury could hear the case without "opening old sores."

Justice Laws ordered withdrawal of Emmitt's $50,000 bond, as the latter had been committed to the District Jail on four criminal contempt charges, and permitted reduction of the bonds for Leo and Charles from $50,000 to $5,000. Bond of Gordon L. Sadur, income tax expert, who faces trial for tax conspiracy with the Warring brothers, has remained at $2,500. He was not implicated in the jury tampering.

Government attorneys revealed they had discussed with the marshal's office plans to guard jury lists. Earlier, the lists, prepared by the jury commission, were available before jurors were summoned.

School Board Hears Protests Against Its Ban on Marian Anderson

A room in the Franklin School Building was crowded yesterday as the Board of Education heard protests on its refusal to let Marian Anderson, colored singer, use Central High School auditorium for Easter Sunday recital. At left, Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the local C. I. O., reads protest, while Charles Houston, legal counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and H. H. Long retain seats at table. At right—Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board

D.A.R. to Visit First Lady Who Quit as Member

Her Stand On Ban on Colored Singer Will Not Alter Plans

The Daughters of the American Revolution, some of whose policies so irked Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt that she resigned, will include a visit with her for the winners of its Nation-wide trip to Washington contest.

An Associated Press report from New York to the contrary was labelled "malicious publicity yesterday by a D. A. R. official here who said the routine of past years probably would be followed. Mrs. Roosevelt quit the society after efforts to obtain its Constitution Hall for a concert by Marian Anderson, colored singer, failed. Her resignation has not been confirmed by the D. A. R.

The contest winners, girls from 48 States, will come to Washington April 16 for a three-day tour. They are known as Good Citizenship Pilgrims.

In Berkeley, Calif., meanwhile, Dr. Elsie Reed Mitchell, honorary life member of the society, announced her resignation because she was not "in accord with the organization's action" in the Anderson matter. "There's nothing at all heroic in my attitude," added the 67-year-old great-granddaughter of a Revolutionary soldier.

In Washington, members of the society were described as "a bunch of old fogies" by Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. for this region.

Musicians Protest

Musicians of the Philadelphia Orchestra who played at Constitution Hall Tuesday night said they would ask the American Federation of Musicians to forbid its members to play in the building. C. C. Capell, head of the National Symphony Orchestra, said if the request is granted the National Symphony would be unable to appear in Washington since Constitution Hall is the only auditorium sufficiently large.

Mrs. Roosevelt, may be asked formally in the near future to join the Society of the Descendants of the American Revolution, liberal group, which last night passed a strong resolution condemning the Daughters of the American Revolution for prohibiting Marian Anderson the use of Constitution Hall.

A statement issued by the Descendants last night and signed by Susan B. Anthony, organization secretary stated: "We as Descendants of the American Revolution rejoice that the First Lady shares the common bond of Revolutionary ancestry with us. She has stood for principles established on this continent by our forefathers. The descendants of the American Revolution would welcome her to the organization."

Huey Long's Political Heirs Battle For His Kingdom in Louisiana

By Inez Robb.

Copyright, 1939, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.
(Distributed by International News Service.)

INEZ ROBB

Nearly four years after his assassination, his political heirs are girding to war among themselves to the death for control of the system and the machine the late "Kingfish" left as his legacy to Louisiana.

Battle lines are already forming. Each faction, in its fight for the spoils, invokes its right and might in the sacred name of Huey Long.

But not until 1940 will there be any decisive answer to the question on every tongue at the time of Long's death:

"Who will inherit the Long men and machine?"

The machine, which the powerful Kingfish created and strengthened with the aid of a rubber stamp Louisiana Legislature, remains intact for the uses of a strong man in the Long tradition. But Long's men are divided today. Though all still huddle beneath his magic cloak, there is dissension and war among them.

Gov. Richard Leche, elected in 1936 as the political heir of the great Huey, had used the machine created by the Kingfish to sabotage Long's plans and alienate Long's chief political henchmen, in the belief of many Long followers.

Political wiseacres, although they refuse to be quoted, believe Leche is grooming as his own successor one of Huey's bitterest enemies, Earl K. Long. Huey and Earl, now lieutenant governor, were brothers who quarreled so violently that they did not speak for years before Huey's assassination.

If Leche, who cannot succeed himself under Louisiana statutes, should choose Lieut. Gov. Long as his successor, it would be a direct repudiation of Huey Long, whose ghost he invoked for his election in 1936.

What is even more significant, Earl Long's designation by the Leche faction would be the one unforgivable affront to the old Long faction, still fanatically loyal to the memory of the political leader they venerate as the uncrowned king of Louisiana.

One of the late Senator Long's most trusted political henchmen, James A. Noe, now a State Senator, has already announced his candidacy for the governorship in 1940. There is a general belief here that Noe may be rallying point for the old Long supporters.

Noe, already involved in a row with the Leche administration, has been refused permission to photograph poll and registration lists of Orleans parish. Today he threatened to carry the matter to the courts to unmask "the real purpose of the State administration."

Hugh M. Wilkinson, one-time law partner of Huey Long, is another member of the old Long faction now scrapping with the Leche administration. Wilkinson has made public charges that certain members of the State bar are implicated in a tax racket to mulct the public treasury of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Although Wilkinson has made no public pledge of his support of the Noe candidacy, a coalition of the two men, plus the support of other faithful adherents of Huey Long, including Seymour Weiss and Abe Shushan, would form a powerful bloc in the impending fight for control of the Long machine.

At the moment, everyone is cagey; no one will talk. Alice Lee Grosjean, trusted lieutenant of Huey Long, refuses to discuss her recent removal from the puissant office of supervisor of public accounts by Leche. Even her husband was dismissed from his State job, in a clean sweep to remove from a sphere of influence the woman who was regarded as the most powerful figure in the State administration at the time of Long's death.

In the slugging match which will be the Louisiana State elections of 1940, it is the ghost of that saint and practical politician which will probably be the deciding factor in the free-for-all to capture his kingdom.

School Board To Reconsider Anderson Ban

Anderson

of tickets. So, he asked, if the profit motive was paramount in the case of Miss Anderson, why had the board been so lax in the past?

The Anderson recital, he continued, had to be looked at from the standpoint that it was one of a series of concerts being sponsored by the Howard University School of Music. True, a profit might be made on her appearance, he said, but very likely it would be used to offset a loss on another concert in the series.

Miss Anderson, he said, was to be paid $1,750, a fee $250 below her usual minimum. It was impossible to accommodate the crowds that wanted to hear her in the Howard chapel or the Armstrong High School aduitoriums, he said, and he reminded the board that 50 per cent of those who wanted to attend were white persons.

"Suppose," he said, "that Miss Anderson should give a free concert. Would the board then allow her to use Central High School? I am trying to find out just what the board's ground is."

Attorney Houston, turning to the argument of the dual school system, pointed out that the students at Central leave there at 3 p. m., and Miss Anderson's recital would not begin until 8 p. m. Did a school have to carry a white label at all hours, even after its educational functions had been fulfilled, he asked. He reminded the board that many white persons attended entertainments at the Armstrong School and expressed the hope that they would continue to attend in large numbers.

Mrs. Virginal R. McGuire, a member of the board, was unable to be present yesterday, but sent a letter which said in part:

"Our rules and regulations must be elastic enough and administered in such a democratic manner that lack of facilities in one section of the school service will not hamper the educational and cultural program of the community when these facilities are available in the other section of the school system. At all times even the most underprivileged groups should have their opportunity for educational and cultural growth and thereby be made to feel that the Board of Education is responding to the finest sentiment in the community and is operating in accordance with our American ideals of fair treatment for all citizens, regardless of race, color, or religious affiliations."

Attorney Houston submitted petitions bearing 3,000 names. He also read a telegram from Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, urging reconsideration of the Anderson case. Many noted artists also had protested, he said, among them Lawrence Tibbett and Geraldine Farrar.

John H. Wilson, colored member of the board, spoke out yesterday on a question of "personal privilege" to deny that he left last week's meeting early in order to avoid a vote on the Anderson case. He insisted he had a previous engagement. He said newspapers of his own race had condemned him for his action.

Wilson voted yesterday for the motion to turn the controversy over to the committee on the community use of buildings. Col. West A. Hamilton, another colored member voted against it. He previously had made a motion to rescind last week's action, but he failed to get a second to his motion.

Rains Are Forecast Today, Tomorrow

March rode into Washington with only gentle breezes yesterday but skies will be cloudy today with rain this afternoon or tonight, the Weather Bureau reported last night. The forecaster said there would be little change in temperature and predicted rain tomorrow.

The mercury yesterday hit a low of 47 degrees at 8 a. m. and rose to 50 at 2 p. m.

New Jersey Firm Dismisses 200 Sit-Down Strikers

Newark, N. J., March 1 (AP).—In what is believed to be the first large-scale action of its kind by an employer since Monday's decision by the United States Supreme Court, 200 or more employes of the J. E. Mergott Co., who recently staged a sit-down strike in the firm's plant, have been dismissed, it was learned tonight.

Notices of the dismissals were mailed to the employes yesterday. Alan Underhill, president of the company, declined to admit or deny that the Supreme Court decision outlawing sit-downs had led to the dismissal of the strikers.

The Newark headquarters of the Congress of Industrial organizations said, "We are not going to pay any attention to the letters of dismissal. This is a strike and we're going to win it."

House Committee Opens Gallinger Hearing Today

Health Officer George C. Ruhland and Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, today will explain the basis of complaints against the municipal hospital as public hearings open at 10 a. m. before a sub-committee of the House District Committee.

The sub-committee, of which Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, is chairman, yesterday decided in an executive session to hear health department and hospital officials and other interested parties before making a report to the full committee.

Following the testimony of Dr. Ruhland and Dr. Bocock, which is expected to deal chiefly with the complaints against administration policies, the sub-committee will hear employes who have complained of long hours and bad working conditions.

Phoning Pickus Has Plan to End Conflict in China

Abe Pickus, Cleveland manufacturer, who calls presidents and dictators by transatlantic telephone, said yesterday he had obtained from the Japanese Ambassador a four-point basis for ending the Sino-Japanese war. This, he said, was:

Co-operation between Japan and China.

Permanent peace and order in Asia.

Communistic penetration in China must be stopped.

"But," said Pickus, "the Japanese Ambassador said his country could not let other nations arbitrate because Japan does not trust arbitrators."

Man Loses Job; Walks Backward; Puzzles Doctors

Denver, Colo., March 1 (I.N.S.).—Psychologists tonight were studying the strange case of a man forced by some mental twist to walk backwards.

Pedestrians gaped in amazement as John Bollinger, 35, walked in reverse down the street, occasionally looking over his shoulder to chart his course.

Physicians expressed the opinion he was a victim of a nervous ailment. They thought his condition might have been induced by his despondency at losing his job as dishwasher.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Secrecy Abandoned

As Secretary Morgenthau stated to the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, it is essential that a certain amount of secrecy should surround the operations of the Stabilization Fund. If detailed day-to-day records of its activities were published, speculators in exchange would be the chief beneficiaries, as he says. And even if publication of the details of daily operations were withheld for a time, past records would help the speculators to trace current activities, with the result of impairing the fund's effectiveness.

However, no harm is done by abandoning a policy which has kept Congress as well as the public in complete ignorance of what the fund has done and how much its operations have cost. The general resume now made public, together with the fund balance sheet and a statement of profits and expenses, will be of no use to speculators, but it will do much to propitiate critics who have objected to the unnecessarily secretive policy heretofore followed.

Reasonable publicity will also make it easier to secure Congressional approval of the Treasury's recommendation for extension of the life of the Stabilization Fund. Such extension is undoubtedly essential under existing conditions, although there is a certain irony in the fact that, after five years of operation, stability of exchange relationships seems farther away than ever. During recent years, the United States and the rest of the world have become increasingly dependent upon government controls of various sorts to maintain such currency stability as exists. Indeed, efforts today are directed primarily toward mitigation of the violence of exchange fluctuations.

Deprived of the automatic exchange controls of former days, reliance now has to be placed, as Mr. Morgenthau says, "chiefly upon the day-to-day decisions of governments adapted to the continually shifting economic, political, and monetary conditions." Under such circumstances the best that can be done is to give the Stabilization Fund a longer lease on life.

It also seems expedient to assent to the request to extend the President's authority to alter the gold content of the dollar, relying upon Mr. Morgenthau's assurance that there is "neither desire nor intent" to use this power "except under circumstances which clearly demand such action." In other words, it is made clear that the power to devalue the dollar further is regarded merely as a weapon held in reserve, to be used only as a defensive measure in a serious emergency.

Policy Of Vacillation

British statesmanship has hardly been at its best in dealing with the problem of Palestine. Only too often when firmness was required, as during the recurrent waves of terrorism that have swept the Holy Land in the years since 1929, the policy pursued has been one of vacillation and indecision. Ill-considered opportunism has more often than not been the order of the day. It is not surprising, therefore, that the Palestinian situation has gone from bad to worse.

In a new effort to cut the Gordian knot, the British government has recently suggested a new Palestinian plan. It would abandon the earlier proposal to partition the country into a Jewish and an Arab state, with a British mandate over the holy cities and a corridor from Jerusalem to the sea. It would also abandon operation of the mandate on its present basis. What the Chamberlain government now proposes is an independent Palestine, with much the same status as Egypt or Irak, tied to the present mandatory power only through an alliance.

Such a plan would involve more than a termination of the mandate. It would also mean scrapping the obligations which Great Britain assumed, in the Balfour Declaration, to help establish in Palestine a Jewish homeland. For while the Jews now in Palestine would be guaranteed in their status, and protected in their rights, such guarantees and protection would, in due course, become the responsibility of the new Palestinian state in which the Arabs would be dominant. Not surprisingly, therefore, the Jewish delegates to the London conference have denounced the proposed plan.

As a result of this opposition the British government will probably scrap this scheme, as previously, because of Arab antagonism, it scrapped the plan of tripartite partition. Unfortunately, however, the suggestion alone may cause harm. It inevitably tends to confirm the Arab belief that London will abandon the Balfour Declaration if sufficient pressure is exerted. So it may well be more than a coincidence that publicity for the British suggestion was promptly followed by renewed Arab violence in the Holy Land. Weakness encourages aggression. That is as likely to prove true in Palestine as elsewhere.

Russian Justice

The Russian government is entitled to claim some credit for its current prosecutions of local officials who are revealed as having fabricated charges against innocent persons during the recent purge era. But the moral which stands out much more clearly is the ease with which such horrible abuses of justice can be committed in the Soviet paradise.

In at least one city, it is now revealed, police agents brought charges of "Fascist terrorism" against children 10 years old. The object was to improve the reputation of the local officials for "vigilance against enemies." Because they did not understand what it was all about the children were easy to convict, and the more convictions the greater the hope of reward and promotion for the prosecutors. There is ample evidence, in trial testimony which the Russian government has itself published and distributed, that it is not difficult for a Communist court to get "confessions" in political cases.

How many miserable children have been convicted in Russia on the charge of being dangerous "counter-revolutionaries" nobody pretends to know. Nobody even knows how many Soviet officials of high and low degree have themselves fallen victims to the Stalinist terror. Nobody, outside the inner circle, seems to know exactly what fate befell Vladimir Romm, former correspondent of the Tass Agency in Washington, or Alexei Neymann, former first secretary of the Soviet Embassy here, or even what is now happening to Ambassador Troyanovsky.

But what one does know, and what the current revelations confirm, is that under the Communist system it is entirely reasonable to expect the worst for anyone haled before a Russian court. If there is justice under the Russian system it is largely a matter of accident. A ruthless dictatorship holds power there by wholly terroristic practices and the best way to curry favor with those who have power is to denounce one's neighbor, or one's neighbor's child, as an "enemy of the state."

For this condition neither the Russian temperament nor Communist economics is to be held primarily responsible. It is, on the contrary, the logical if not the inevitable result of the principle of dictatorial government by a single group or party. Such a system begins by crushing all opposition, proceeds to a framing of innocent people by those underlings who crave more power, and ends by swiftly destroying every human liberty, every safeguard against injustice, which mankind has laboriously built up through centuries of concerted effort.

From this viewpoint Communism, Fascism and Naziism are identical, regardless of their essentially superficial differences. In each system a single party is supreme; its dominant members, vile though they may be, are ipso facto privileged persons. All who are not of the elect are without rights, safeguards or reliable protection of any kind. Outright slavery, which at least placed a premium on preserving the individual's physical well-being, was by comparison a civilized system.

To the believer in democracy there is equal absurdity in the Communist denunciation of the Nazis; the Nazi condemnation of the Communists. Both march roughshod toward the same total destruction of human liberties, the same elevation of individual tyranny as the goal of human progress. To advocate a "popular front" between democracy and either of these "isms" against the other is to indorse perversion. The battle is against the totalitarian philosophy, wherever, whenever and however expressed.

Fighting Rackets

It may be only coincidence that a number of cities are now turning the spotlight of public investigation upon gambling rackets and alleged corruption. There is a strong indication, however, that the salutary examples set by New York in the Hines case and by Washington in the Warring case are bearing fruit.

Crime-ridden cities have seen that it is not at all impossible to break up gambling rackets and to convict interested politicians who seek to paralyze the arm of the law. Wherever an alliance between crime and political machines can be exposed, therefore, indictments and prosecutions may be expected in the months ahead. It is unfortunate that such house-cleanings are undertaken only when demanded by an aroused citizenry. But it is far better to have periodic assaults upon corruption than continued apathy.

Kansas City is the latest municipality to strike out against alleged corruption supposedly centering in the gambling racket. A grand jury has brought in more than 90 indictments, including four against a judge of the county court. It may be that Boss Tom Pendergast's machine is about to go through the wringer as has happened in the case of Tammany Hall. Public-spirited citizens throughout the country will join in the hope that more prosecutors like Thomas E. Dewey will be found available to press the issue wherever indictments are shown to be justified.

Philadelphia is likewise receiving publicity in this field. Mayor Wilson has been reindicted by a grand jury charging misbehavior in office. Four other bills of indictment have been returned against four policemen on charges of failing to suppress gambling. Of course, no conclusions are to be drawn from mere indictments. But these investigations certainly indicate a healthy determination to trace down suspicions of corruption and lax law enforcement.

Washingtonians will be especially interested to note that in every case gambling rackets appear to be connected with the conditions against which these investigations are directed. Games like "numbers" may seem harmless enough in themselves. But when they lead to widespread violation of law, to the financing of large criminal gangs and finally to corruption of the processes of justice, they must be rigorously stamped out.

It is well to remember that in Washington, as in many other cities, achievement of that end has only just begun.

To Relieve Congress

Representative Kennedy's decision to resign from the House District Committee will be regretted by every Washington resident familiar with his conscientious service in this capacity. It is gratifying to note that he will not take this step until Congress has disposed of the Griffenhagen plan for reorganization of the local government.

Like any other diligent member of the District committees in Congress, Mr. Kennedy finds his service to the Nation's Capital to be a burden. He must pass judgment upon numerous municipal problems that should never be carried beyond the District Building. To serve the District well he must give a large part of his time which he reasonably feels should be devoted to affairs in which his constituents are more directly interested.

In no sense of the word is Mr. Kennedy's problem unique. Virtually every member of the District Committee has similar difficulties. The less conscientious members simply neglect local affairs, and diligent legislators sometimes serve the District to their own detriment.

As much in fairness to its own members as to the District, Congress ought to recognize this situation and shift responsibility for local government where it belongs. The simple fact is that municipal business cannot be forced through the complicated process of national legislation without creating all sorts of maladjustments. So long as Washington was a small and relatively inactive community and the pressure of national affairs was not great, the present system was tolerable. But to continue using our hard-pressed National Legislature as a city council under present conditions would violate every aspect of reason.

It is in behalf of Congress as much as the local community, therefore, that Representative Kennedy has led the movement to set up here a municipal corporation which could, under general statutes enacted by Congress, handle routine local affairs. The Griffenhagen plan sponsored by Mr. Kennedy has aroused opposition on some points of detail. But it does not appear that there can be any reasonable objection to a proper division of this local function from the national function of Congress.

Mr. Kennedy's complaint that his efforts to serve the District in this way have met with more criticism than appreciation is a challenge that local civic agencies should not ignore. The time given to this movement is undoubtedly a sacrifice on Mr. Kennedy's part. It calls for better response from the community than it has yet been accorded. If our present hodgepodge government is to be modernized, every interested group will have to make some concessions. This statement from the chairman of the subcommittee before which hearings will be held might well serve as a signal for the pooling of support for those features of the Griffenhagen plan that the community in general seems to favor.

Streamlined Game Warden

From the Hartford Courant.

The usual conception of a game warden as an official who wanders aimlessly through the woods during the hunting and fishing seasons checking the sportsmen's game bags and creels is hopelessly inadequate. Today he is busy the year round. In the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1938, for example, the wardens investigated and formally reported the killing of some 345 deer—of which, incidentally, only 41 were killed illegally. They checked the licenses and bags of 62,652 sportsmen. They killed nearly 10,000 predators, among which were more than 25 tons of snapping turtles. They planted fish and game, supervised field trials, arranged leases and posted land, investigated hunting and fishing accidents, lectured on conservation, made pond and stream surveys and performed half a hundred other duties, all with less friction with the public than a single one of the old deputy county wardens could cause in a week.

The streamlined warden makes mistakes, but he makes far fewer than did the ill-trained, sometimes undisciplined part-time employe who preceded him.

Warns Of Fire Trap

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Eight hundred Annapolis children will continue to go to school in a fire trap whose old and rotten oil-soaked floors constitute a perpetual hazard. In case of fire, there is no outside fire alarm and no means of getting modern fire-fighting and rescue apparatus to the building—due to its location on a high bank situated on a narrow street.

There is an effort locally to "cooperate" in whitewashing the hazardous condition of the building and to give the erroneous impression that the impartial experts (appointed by the National Board of Underwriters) are now satisfied with the building. A group of laymen, knowing little or nothing of fire hazards, has published a "whereas" resolution—pronouncing the building "as safe as possible" in spite of the fact that the following recommendations of the fire experts have not been carried out:

1. The erection of a new building, or, if the present building continues to be used, the installation of a sprinkling system.
2. An outside fire alarm.
3. A means of getting fire-fighting and rescue apparatus to the school.
4. Placing of fire stops in the building (fireproofing to prevent the rapid spread of fire).
5. Installation of eight smoke and fire doors and two smoke housings (these would prevent rapid spread of fumes and smoke up stairways and thus cutting off exit).
6. Metal sleeves and asbestos protectors around some radiators still lacking, allowing contact of hot steam pipes with old oil soaked flooring and sweeping—possibility of spontaneous combustion.
7. Blind rooms (having only one exit) still lack emergency slides.
8. Transoms and door windows of classrooms too large, permitting passage of hot gases in case of fire; no wire glass in transom on door windows of these classrooms.
9. No colored exit lights (important because confusing maze of corridors may cause panic).
(10) New flooring has been put over some of the old rotten and oil soaked flooring. (If ignited, the old flooring would burn like tinder.)

Deportation Policy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial, "Justifiable Restraint" (February 10, 1939), you quote with approval, difficult to understand, the law-enforcement attitude of the present Secretary of Labor. She took an oath to "well and faithfully execute the law." Nowhere in the law is she directed to enforce the immigration laws "with restraint against executive absolutism in all cases where this tremendous power over human liberty and human life is exercised."

Only Congress, not Secretary Perkins, can write such a provision in law. There is no such discretion, as she admitted she exercises, to execute the law with what she thinks is a "due regard for historic safeguards," etc. She has been exercising some such unauthorized autocratic authority in staying deportations in thousands of so-called "hardship" cases and yet at the same time seeking it in the Kerr-Coolidge bills for six years. She has allowed "to remain" here alien lawbreakers the law expressly directs her to "take in custody and deport."

The exercise of such discretionary authority is a government of a person, instead of a government of written laws, and must necessarily and inherently result in an utter lack of equality and uniformity in law enforcement varying with a Doak or a Perkins. It must inevitably lead to suspicion of graft and corruption, that could not accompany an administration of definite written laws.

The Right To Fortify Guam

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of February 25 there appears in the column by Walter Lippmann this very extraordinary statement:

> Under the interpretation of the Washington treaties which the United States officially, insists upon in all its dealings with Japan, we do not have a legal right to fortify Guam. No doubt it is true that Japan has broken the Washigton treaties. But the position of the Administration has been and is that the treaties are still in force. That being our argument, it is our obligation to observe the treaties until by negotiation they are revised or by formal act they are abrogated.

So far as I have been able to tell from the papers, such a view—that we do not have a right to fortify Guam—is not held by the State Department, the Navy Department, the Congress (either by those for or by those against the development of Guam). It does not appear to be held by Japan. The only one I have known to express such an opinion is Mr. Lippmann.

The denial of the right to increase the existing fortifications of certain Pacific islands, including Guam, was made a part of the Washington Naval Limitation Treaty of 1922, in Article XIX thereof.

In Article XXIII of the same treaty provision is made as follows:

> The present treaty shall remain in force until December 31, 1936, and in case none of the contracting powers shall have given notice two years before that date of its intention to terminate the treaty, it shall continue in force until the expiration of two years from the date on which notice of termination shall be given by one of the contracting powers, whereupon the treaty shall terminate as regards all the contracting powers. Such notice shall be communicated in writing to the Government of the United States, which shall immediately transmit a certified copy of the notification to the other powers and inform them of the date on which it was received. The notice shall be deemed to have been given and shall take effect on that date.

In December, 1934, the Japanese government formally notified the United States Government of its intention to terminate the 1922 treaty, which would accordingly cease to be in force after December 31, 1936.

Now, to read Mr. Lippmann's assertion that the position of the Administration is that this treaty is still in force is startling. Such a position would appear to be definitely inconsistent with the present naval building program.

Perhaps Mr. Lippmann has mixed up this treaty with the Nine-Power Treaty, also a Washington treaty of 1922, which binds its signatories to respect the integrity of China, a treaty still in effect, but which has been violated by Japan, beginning in 1931.

Rev. Albert Marion Hyde

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A man who serves unselfishly all his life deserves suitable recognition when he dies. Such a man was the Rev. Albert Marion Hyde, D.D., who died suddenly in Lakeland, Fla., January 28. He was a minister, teacher, lecturer, executive, philosopher, prophet, Christian, friend.

Millions of people all over this country will recall the dynamic personality, the intellectual vigor, the culture, the big-heartedness, the energy, the human understanding, the sympathy, the eloquence of this man who at some time touched their lives for good. Dr. Hyde lived to inspire men. He lectured and preached from coast to coast. His personal magnetism and eloquence drew large crowds. He was a spiritual figure whose heart spoke to the hearts of the people and whose voice pleaded with them to take a deeper interest in the soul and the kingdom of God. Because there was something about him that reminded others of Christ he was successful in leading people in the footsteps of Him whom he himself faithfully followed.

Dr. Hyde was born in Orangeville, and reared in New Lyme, Ohio, the eldest son of Attorney Nelson G. and Laura A. Hyde. Early in life he became the family leader. He prepared for college at New Lyme Institute. He was graduated from Oberlin College with distinction at 20, was principal of the high school at Fremont, Ohio, for a year, then entered Oberlin Theological Seminary where he was graduated in 1894. He entered the ministry of the Congregational Church and served with distinction the following pastorates: Greenville, Mich., three years; the "Old First Church," Toledo, Ohio, nine years; the Porter Congregational Church, Brockton, Mass., nine years.

In 1914 Dr. Hyde became associated with Radcliffe Chautauqua System, Washington, D. C., as lecturer and field manager. For many years the Chautauqua gave him great audiences. He was a dynamo of activity, always planning and getting results. He burnt himself out prematurely with hard work. The law of his life was to serve others.

The need of this country is for men like Albert Marion Hyde. The whole country today is better because Dr. Hyde lived in it, now infinitely poorer that he is gone.

Cause for Thought

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You may be interested to learn that last night fascism extended as far south as Falls Church. The local dramatic organization after its regular business meeting presented a one-act play written by one of its members and acted by the group, based on newspaper accounts of what has befallen the Jews in Germany. It was a moving playlet, conceived and acted without hatred or rancor.

When the audience, still visibly affected, was filing out, it was met by two young men who handed out scurrilous, anti-Semitic pamphlets. Everyone expressed indignation about the incident and warned the strangers not to come back to Falls Church again.

The episode is unimportant in itself; it led to no marked social disturbance. However, it gives one pause to think about the probable degree of Nazi organization and penetration of the American scene if even a local, amateur, unadvertised presentation of the Jewish problem in Germany is apparently known to Nazi leaders.

An experience such as this brings closer the eventual decision to be made by the American people—if it is not too late—as to what price they are prepared to pay for the preservation of civil liberties if such liberties involve the deliberate sowing of seeds of hatred and suspicion in otherwise peaceful communities.

The Post Impressionist

Reunion

YES (said my friend who related this story), Bob and I were reared next door to each other. He was several years older than I, but that didn't make any difference to him. We played together all the time, mostly in the woods across the hill. The rabbits were thick over there on the hill, but mostly in the scrubby bottom beyond the hill. We used to watch them in summer, and in the winter we set snares for them. We'd go to the snares before school of mornings, then whoop back home to divide our catch.

We divided things unconsciously. There was no arrangement about it. I think that was why we were so close. We never had any arrangement about anything. It was simply a matter of understanding each other so well that we took whatever came along, good or bad, as mutually belonging to be suffered or enjoyed in company.

Well, as time went along we gave up the snaring, but not the woods. After school, of afternoons, we'd go out and find those flint arrowheads the Indians left behind. A flint quarry was by the creek in the woods and there the Indians must have fashioned the arrow points we found. Once at the quarry we found a perfect hatchet head. We rushed home to put it in the collection of all the arrowheads that were fastened to cardboard in some imagined Indian design. Bob would keep the exhibit at his home a week, and for a week I'd have it. We did things like that.

We called these excursions into the woods our trips. This was a term that held on since our childhood when the word "trip" had, in our sheltered lives, a profoundly elusive meaning. It meant the freedom of any place beyond the path to school and the yard barriers. You know, of course, what horizons are in childhood.

About then, the damn war came along. Bob had finished high school and wasn't doing anything much. One day on a trip, he told me that he was going into the army. His father was on one of those war committees and was full of excitment and vinegar. He told Bob to go on. We'd lick the hell out of the Germans in a couple of months anyhow, he said. The afternoon before Bob left, we took a last trip in the woods.

Out there I got the gloomiest damn feeling. At first we pretended that nothing unusual was happening, that we were just exploring about as was done a thousand times. We kicked the rabbits out the bushes and laughed as they helled it away. But it didn't work. So we started talking things over. Bob laughed then, and said it wasn't anything. There'd be other trips, he said. But, 15-years-old, I knew then that a period of my life was closing that day. There wouldn't be other trips. He'd come back too wise for the woods. The dividing line was plain to me. Few boys ever experience the close of boyhood so clearly and in one day.

Bob went to France and was killed. But the shock of his death had somehow been absorbed for me in that leave-taking in the woods when everything that was he and I and boyhood had dissolved in an afternoon.

In 1920 I had been to sea as a sailor in merchant ships. I had jumped one ship in New York and was looking for another when somebody said the United States Army Transport Line was making trips to Brest, bringing back the war dead and taking over regulars for service on the Rhine. I made the Princess Matoika and sailed out. It was merry with the shipload of soldiers, and we gambled all the time. It was the first time I ever was paid at sea.

But coming back was bad, something like converting that floating night club into a funeral establishment. At Brest and St. Nazarre they lined the coffins on the piers, long rows of them, each with a flag. These copper-lined caskets were heavy stuff, but the steam winches hoisted them over the side and soon they were swallowed up below.

There it was, piers full of caskets, and the gray fogs that always were deep on the French harbors. Between the caskets, live soldiers being sent home from the Rhine on hospitals, walked, some of them with war brides. Finally the live men and the dead cargo was on and we'd put to sea again. But the dead cargo stayed on everybody's nerves. I kept thinking of it, all the dead kids in boxes, packed like sardines in the hold. The sailors used to kick about going below, saying the bodies gave off a poisonous air.

That was imagination and excuse. They didn't want to go down because they felt the cargo too much. You don't feel a cargo of automobiles, wheat, sugar, coffee or even coal. This thing made you want to hurry up to look over the sea, that would be running strong and clean with life.

I imagined all sorts of things: that here was the most universal cargo a ship ever carried. Maybe every State was represented in the hold. All across the Nation people were hurrying now to New York to see the ship come in and claim the bodies of their kids. And sometimes the long swells of the waters washed the sides so softly I felt the sea in a mood of lullabye for the cargo already asleep.

After the third trip I had enough. I was ready to quit when the telegram came. Bob's people had wired, asking me to come down and be a pallbearer. His body, they said, was arriving on the Princess Matoika. The fact was, I had already been a pallbearer, then. And we had taken another trip together, just as he predicted in the woods that day.

A Blast At Gigli

IT IS TIME to destroy the superstition that because a man or a woman can shriek louder and a little less sharply than most human beings, that person's views on politics, economics or cultural topics deserve reporting in the papers and editorial discussion.

At the moment Beniamino Gigli, the Italian tenor, is maiming print in Italy and here with the observation that "an air of extortion and corruption" prevails in the United States. For that reason, among others, says he, he probably will not return here.

His remarks will earn Gigli certain credits with Mussolini, and their merits need not be argued. He speaks the truth, of course, and it may be said, further, that after long familiarity and patience with official sin the people of this country have only recently heard of yet more loathsome and arrogant abuse of trust in the Federal courts and in the local affairs of many cities.

Views Of Gigli Of Little Import

FOR THE FIRST time in the Nation's history Americans are beginning to toy with the idea of capital punishment for thieving judges and for the almsgiving, church-going, honest-John type of political rascals whose careers are more dangerous to the people's liberties than Communist and Nazi-Bolshevik combined.

To be sure, such a criticism of this country comes with poor grace from a native and citizen of Italy, considering not only that Italy has been the main source from which we learned the arts of extortion and corruption, but considering also the character of the Fascist government itself.

However, the point to be considered is whether the fact of his being an operatic singer imparts special value to Gigli's views on matters beyond the opera. Obviously, it does not. As a singer he speaks with no more prestige on nonartistic topics than any chestnut vender or apple shiner under the "L."

Pegler's Opinion Of The Profession

SINGING, it should be kept in mind, is the lowest and most vulgar of the arts. Its masters, as a class, are jealous, silly, childish, vain, petulant, grossly ill-mannered. Any stranger who has ventured around behind during the squawking of an opera must always remember the impression made upon him by the chorus of gargling, barking, spitting and other disgusting sounds emitted by the artists in preparation for their moments on the stage.

They know little beyond the roles, which they must learn as children learn Christmas recitations, and they are so overbearingly vain that when they are doing rotten work and know it themselves they sometimes stomp off, pouting and sulking like brats, if a customer happens to yawn. Actors are more polite and incomparably more game under conditions of distress.

Feminine Voices Deemed Natural

THE ILL MANNERS and poor sportsmanship of operatic people probably can be traced to the fact that opera is native to a land which is notorious for its impudence, inconsiderateness and muckerism in all its relations with other nations—political, artistic and athletic.

Singing, of course, should be women's business. Feminine voices and the voices of little boys are light and birdlike and suited to the art. It is not a natural or happy art for males, and in no case is it a creative art, except to the extent that one singer emits a special gurgle, grunt, gasp or snuffle and calls that an orginal creation. Otherwise the singer only steps out and brays, moos or yowls the music which has been written down for him by the composer, who, of course, is a creative worker if not always necessarily an artist. The singer's function can be likened to that of a train-caller in the North-Western Station in Chicago.

Italian Tolerance Is Negligible

OPERATIC SINGERS always have enjoyed more reverence or awe in the United States than they command in European countries, because few of us know anything about opera, and even our most intelligent press does not bother to challenge this harmless sentiment. In Italy if an opera singer is lousy—and they often are—the customers will pelt them with hunks of sausage and even knives and chairs, Italian manners and chivalry being, as suggested before, sharply inferior to the American, and Italian tolerance negligible. Actually, Americans wouldn't be likely to know whether a singer was good or bad and would prefer him fairly punk, because sour notes are the sound of native music which Americans like, such as jazz and swing.

Gigli may return if he likes, but it is hoped that if he does so he will not be quoted on any other topic than his knack, or if you want to be generous his art, of bawling and flouncing about a platform with lace on his cuffs and paint on his face, and bawling high tenor at that.

The Trade Pact

By Our Ottawa Correspondent

Nears Ratification By Canada

Ottawa.

THE DEBATE in the Canadian House of Commons on the new trade pact with the United States, which began on February 14, is now, after producing a generous flood of fiscal oratory, in its penultimate stages and a vote is expected early next week. It will be given approval by a handsome majority. There have been no dissentients among the ministerialists, who number almost three-fourths of the House.

While the two leftist groups, the C. C. F. and Social Credit parties, have declined to manifest any enthusiasm for the pact as offering any real cure for Canada's economic troubles, they have given it their restrained blessing and will not vote against it.

The only serious criticism has come from the Conservatives and for the most part it has been pitched in a comparatively mild key and has been directed toward specific details of the agreement rather than to its fundamental principle. The Conservatives are for the most part genuinely convinced that the pact is a bad bargain for Canada. But they realize that it would be a fatal move to repeat the tactics which they adopted successfully to defeat the Taft-Fielding reciprocity pact in 1911 and to adopt a filibustering policy or even to indulge in severe criticisms of the United States for using a position of advantage to force an inequitable deal.

THE DEBATE was opened by Premier Mackenzie King, who made an elaborate defense of the agreement and enlarged upon the great benefits which it would bring not only to a variety of Canadian producers but also to the consuming public. Dealing with the criticisms that too heavy a price had been paid for the tariff concessions granted by the United States, he declared that if the agreement were carefully examined it would be found that Canada had recovered ample compensatory advantages in the American and British markets and that for any locality or industry, the general result of the treaty and the parallel Anglo-American agreement vastly outweighed any possible adverse consequences.

But he laid even greater stress upon the international significance of the two agreements and argued that Canada had been in the happy position of being able to serve her own interests and those of the world at large by showing a spirit of accommodation and lending her good offices to the trade negotiations of the two great countries which were her best customers.

"WHERE," he asked, "would we have been if we had not played the part of which Canada above all others has an opportunity to play in this world today, namely, that of interpreter between those two great countries and so far as possible a conciliator of their differences. I say one of the greatest achievements any government has ever had to its credit is that of having been able to play a part in bringing about a new situation in trade relations between such a great group of nations as Great Britain, the United States and Canada."

Later he said:

"In the present each of us sleeps more safely in his bed because of the rapprochement between the world's two greatest democracies, a rapprochement that could not have been affected without the assent and co-operation of Canada. If this administration were to end tomorrow, it would have an honorable place in world history on this score alone."

"A Trade Pact Or Peace Pact"

DR. MANION, the Conservative leader who followed him, was not prepared to accept his roseate picture of the benefits which would flow from the pact. He was particularly sarcastic about Mr. King's claims on the score of its political benefits.

"The right honorable gentleman" said Dr. Manion, "talked as if this was not a trade treaty but a peace treaty. As I listened to him, I thought he spoke as if we have been engaged in a spectacular war with some great nation and had won a glorious victory; and as I waited for his peroration I watched to see the victims come marching up the aisles of Parliament."

He went on to maintain that the determination of the American Government and people to uphold the Monroe Doctrine and safeguard other countries in this hemisphere from attack was not dependent upon trade relations and that the friendship of the democratic countries had nothing to do with trade. So in his view all this talk about the agreement being instruments for world peace was simply "eyewash." Then he proceeded to a detailed and critical analysis of the pact and he summarized his objections to it under the following heads:

1. It makes for greater competition for Canadian industries on the part of American rivals.

2. It affords concessions to 31 favored nations, which give nothing in return.

3. It brings unfair competition from favored nations such as Germany, Italy and Japan as a result of low standards of living in these countries and the loss of all liberties to labor within their bounds without returning anything to Canada.

4. It is the beginning of the destruction of the whole British preferential system for which Canada had been struggling since 1897 and which had been built up in the Ottawa agreements of 1932.

5. It cuts into the British markets, our best markets, in wheat, fruit, lumber, etc.

6. It injures Canadian traffic and damages the transportation system—railways, steamships and so fourth—sending traffic north and south instead of east and west.

7. It gives too much in return for too little; in other words it is not an equalization of favors.

8. It will probably lessen revenues through the elimination of the 3 per cent special import excise tax and the lowering of other tariffs.

9. It will probably increase unemployment through the impact of greater competition for industries like coal mining, manufacturing, etc.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

New Administration Policy

IN MY ARTICLE on Tuesday I argued that the failure of the purge and the Republican gains in the 1938 elections marked the end of a political era. The New Dealers lost control of the Democratic Party, and the divided party is on its way to losing control of the country. But a political change of this kind must, of course, reflect some condition in the life of the people, and so we must try to understand what has brought the New Dealers to their present condition.

It is, I believe, that they have reached a dead end on the path they were following. Reduced to its simplest terms, they have established a system by which a substantial portion of the national income is being redistributed by political devices. The doubling of the Federal expenditures does not represent the whole of this political redistribution of the national income. In addition to the relief money, the farm subsidies, the public works, the social security program and the subsidies to State and local governments, there also is the wages policy, enforced through the trades unions, through the decisions of the National Labor Relations Board, and the Federal wage fixing.

GIVEN THE PRESENT national income, the Administration has gone as far as it can go in the political redistribution of that income. In fact, it cannot keep the distribution at the present level for any long time to come. That is why all the spokesmen of the New Deal, beginning with the President, are now saying that salvation depends upon raising the national income from 60 billions to 80 billions or even to 100 billions.

But when they look at business they find that the corporate directors are not making the investments of capital which would begin to produce this much larger national income. For a time the New Dealers tried to believe that enough Government spending would pump enough "purchasing power" into the community to create such a demand for goods that corporate investors would find it profitable to expand. This has been the theory of Mr. Eccles. But it does not work because the profits that Government spending offers are not great enough to overcome the risks that investors fear.

These risks are of two kinds. There is the risk of new political measures which will create new burdens. And then, there is the fact that even if men were enterprising and took real risks the Government will seize the larger profits by taxation if they win but will give them no relief if they lose.

THE DILEMMA of the New Dealers is that they cannot continue to redistribute as much national income as they are now redistributing unless they can induce corporate investors to enlarge the national income. But it is very difficult to induce the investors to invest.

And the reasons are: First, that the investors believe that the New Deal system of redistributing income will enlarge itself under political pressure. Second, that they think the careers of the New Dealers are founded on the willingness to cater to these political pressures. Third, that even if they ignored these apprehensions, and took the risks that could yield large profits, the existing tax laws, particularly the capital gains tax, mean that they cannot hope to enjoy any considerable part of their profits.

The Administration is now trying to resolve this dilemma. It is seeking to assure the investors that the New Dealers who set up the system will not, at least for a time, enlarge it. In my article on Tuesday I tried to show why these assurances are not likely to work unless there is a reorganization inside the Administration which places a fair share of responsibility and power in the hands of Democrats who are not New Dealers.

Besides the assurances, the Administration is toying with the idea of a reform of the tax laws that would permit men to take profits commensurate with the risks. This is the President's best hope and, if he is bold about it, I believe, the one and only chance he has to bring about such a big recovery that, without a political reorganization, the opposition will be quieted.

BY SPONSORING promptly the outright repeal of the capital gains tax, he may still at this late date be able to induce such a tide of speculation and investment that he can float his Administration off the rocks on which it is now foundering.

It would be a very bold stroke, and it is hard to say whether the New Deal stalwarts would stand for it or would regard it as a betrayal of the whole New Deal philosophy. But if the President is strong enough with his personal adherents to adopt it, this is the only measure now in sight which has enough energy in it to bring quick and great results.

It is the one measure above all others which could create a sufficient prospect of profit to overcome the deep inertia of businessmen and investors. Both because of its actual effect in dollars and cents, and because of what it implied as a general social philosophy, it alone might exert the kind of power which will unfreeze the great mass of capital now lying in the banks. It is the one measure which promises to make work what Mr. Eccles has been talking about. For only a great volume of new private capital expenditures can create the revenues to sustain the great volume of public expenditures.

IF MR. ROOSEVELT is still as bold as he used to be, he will see that half measures will not extricate him from the situation in which he now finds himself. The outright repeal of the Capital gains tax, accompanied by the modification of some of the other taxes, is not a half measure. It is a stroke at the root of his difficulty, and, though no one can guarantee that it will work, no other measure has much chance of working at all. It would be the kind of action which gave substance to the assurances now pouring forth from Washington.

Coming at a time when the danger of a world war is definitely less, it could give the country the breathing space of a period of high prosperity. Perhaps in that period the country could find a way to deal with its deeper difficulty: the difficulty of getting control over pressure groups demanding an indefinite and illimitable distribution by political devices of the national income of the people.

Perplexed Poland

By Barnet Nover

Warsaw's Second Thoughts

THE POLISH-GERMAN honeymoon which began with the signing of the nonaggression agreement of 1934 ended abruptly with the peace of Munich. Since then relations between the two countries have been strained. And they are likely to become more, rather than less so with the passage of time.

Oddly enough, the pact of Munich worked, at first, to Poland's advantage. Having submitted to the loss of the Sudeteniand to Germany, Czecho-Slovakia was unable to prevent the loss of additional territories to Poland and Hungary. Poland's share was the valuable region of Teschen, with its factories, coal mines and power plants.

On balance, however, Munich was a catastrophe to Poland as it was to all the nations on the periphery of the enlarged Third Reich. In the first place it destroyed Poland's usefulness to Germany and therefore any necessity on Hitler's part to placate the Warsaw government any longer. Secondly, it gave renewed impetus to the principle of self-determination. Munich style, a circumstance which threatens the security of the Polish Republic with its large Ukrainian minority. And, third, by demonstrating the unwillingness of France to defend her Czech ally, despite repeated promises to do so, it weakened the reliance which Poland once placed on the promise of French support.

THE 1934 agreement was useful to Poland. It relieved her of any immediate threat of attack from the west and thus enabled her to reduce her dependence on France, on the one hand, while reducing her fear of Soviet Russia on the other. But in the long run the ultimate disadvantages of this agreement may prove to outweigh the advantages by a very considerable margin.

The agreement with Poland was of enormous value to Hitler. Secured on his flank, he was safe from encirclement and free, therefore, to proceed with the execution of his expansionist program. He was quite willing to shelve the Weimar Republic's campaign for the elimination of the Corridor, the restoration of Danzig, Upper Silesia and Posen while he went ahead with the conquest of Austria and the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia. That took four years; they were years of respite for Poland. But the respite ended the day the Sudetenland was annexed to the Third Reich.

FOR POLAND the refusal of Germany to permit the partition of Ruthenia, easternmost segment of Czecho-Slovakia, so as to create a common frontier between Poland and Hungary was a warning sign. The corner of Ruthenia left to the truncated Czecho-Slovak Republic was of no earthly value to that unhappy state. But it was potentially valuable to the Third Reich since its Ukrainian inhabitants may serve as a spearhead of agitation for the creation of a Ukrainian nation under German domination, and containing the present Ukrainian populations of Soviet Russia, Poland, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia.

For the time being, the Ukrainian problem constitutes no immediate danger to the peace of Europe or the security of Poland. At present, Germany has other fish to fry. But the Poles realize that the breathing spell vouchsafed them is only temporary. It is quite possible that instead of moving east, as was anticipated after Munich, Germany may move west. The fact that Soviet Russia, which Mr. Chamberlain conspicuously ignored throughout the crisis leading up to Munich, is now being courted by the same statesman, reveals the doubts that have developed in London regarding the direction in which the Nazi cat will next spring. Should Hitler move west it would, of course, be useful to Great Britain and France to have Russia actively friendly instead of indifferent or even hostile. And similar second thoughts are apparent in France, where M. Bonnet, one of the principal architects of the Munich betrayal, has emphasized that France remains faithful to her eastern alliances.

EVEN SHOULD Germany move west, however, Poland's respite from Nazi pressure would hardly be permanent. The Corridor, Danzig, Upper Silesia—it is only a question of time before Germany may demand their return.

Not surprisingly, therefore, the last months have seen certain interesting changes in Poland's foreign policy. There has been a noticeable effort in the direction of a rapprochement with Soviet Russia; there has, concurrently, been a certain renewed interest in the French alliance not so long ago regarded as obsolete and valueless. And it is interesting that the recent student riots which occurred during Count Ciano's visit to Warsaw, while anti-German, were not in the least anti-Italian. The Poles, apparently, are drawing a distinction between the axis partners which they themselves show no inclination to draw.

SO FAR, the Warsaw government continues to regard the 1934 agreement as fully binding. It has no intention of throwing it overboard: that would be suicidal. But it has also no intention of assuming that it will operate as smoothly the next five years as it did the past. That is why Col. Beck, Poland's foreign minister and Europe's leading diplomatic tight-rope walker, having edged over between 1934 and 1938 to the German side, is now edging away from the Third Reich.

Unfortunately for him and his country, tight-rope walking, never easy, is more difficult now than ever. The danger of falling grows and there is no longer the net of the League and collective security to break the fall.

In a situation where it is every nation for itself and the devil take the hindmost, the plight of small, and even medium-sized powers, such as Poland, is not enviable.

Roosevelt 'Dramatics' Stir Fears

By Mark Sullivan

Latest Manifestation Deplored Here And Abroad

AS PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT returns to Washington on Saturday, there is a rule of conduct that he could impose upon himself and which, if he imposes it, might add to the general peace of mind.

While Mr. Roosevelt was on his way to his vacation, when he was at Key West, Fla., February 18, he said, as described in one of many news dispatches, "that he might return sooner than he expected because of continued reports of a disturbing nature from abroad. . . . Through his demeanor as well as by his remarks, the President displayed an obvious concern over the possibility of a new international crisis."

That report, coming when Mr. Roosevelt was only two days on his way and had not yet reached his destination, made a sensation, naturally. It was telegraphed back to Washington. There, newsmen hurriedly made inquiry of the State Department. The State Department had no knowledge, of any alarming developments in Europe. Newsmen turned to Senator Borah, who is well informed on foreign relations. Senator Borah had no knowledge, either.

'Mr. Roosevelt Fond Of Being Dramatic'

THE REPORT about the President was cabled to Europe. Newspapers in London printed big headlines saying President Roosevelt had "ominous reports" about conditions in Europe. Europe did not know what the reports could be but the European public was disturbed. Newsmen queried European statesmen. They had no more knowledge of any new developments than our own State Department had. At London it was stated that authorities were "completely in the dark" regarding what President Roosevelt meant. At Paris, authorities were described as saying they had "no idea what information President Roosevelt" could have received. Berlin had no knowledge of anything ominous. Rome had no knowledge.

So far as could be discovered, nobody had any knowledge. Still, Mr. Roosevelt may have known something. A caustic explanation, as put in words by one European observer, was that Mr. Roosevelt is fond of being dramatic.

And Mr. Roosevelt does like to be dramatic. His arrival in Washington next Saturday, after a two weeks' absence, offers opportunity for doing something dramatic. We shall expect something dramatic—but hope we will be disappointed. If Mr. Roosevelt just can't help being dramatic, let's hope he finds something other than foreign relations to be dramatic about. One more blast at our domestic "economic tories," for example, wouldn't hurt them any more than they have already been hurt and would not make the rest of us jittery about war.

Called Stirrer-Up Of Foreign Jitters

SOME EUROPEANS have come to think of Mr. Roosevelt as being, in spite of good intentions, a stirrer-up of international jitters. A distinguished English journalist said the other day: "We in England believe that the incipient war fires can be quenched. But you in America are making our task difficult. Your public men, with the mistaken idea of helping us, are always hurling insults at the dictatorship countries and always talking about the inevitable war between the democracies and the dictatorships. That keeps the dictators irritated, and when they are irritated they don't think. So your government is not helping us; it is only making war more probable."

And a correspondent of the Saturday Evening Post, writing from Switzerland, reports: "I have made one discovery that probably will shock Americans. A surprising number of Europeans . . . are more apprehensive today about the foreign policy of one particular country than of any other. That country is our own United States. . . . They have become fearful that the United States may precipitate that general war in Europe which Europeans have paid so dearly to prevent."

This deploring of American actions and utterances reflects one view that Europeans hold about Europe's present difficulties. It may be a mistaken view. There are many who think America's attitude has a salutary effect on the dictatorships. But the other view is tenable, and it is held by serious persons.

Silence And Calm Wanted From U. S.

THIS VIEW holds that what Europe is doing just now is something they have done again and again over the centuries. They are rectifying some boundaries and possessions that have become maladjusted through disproportionate growth of population and other causes. The process, as always, includes much threatening and blustering, and bluffing and sword-rattling and face-making, and also face-saving. Some European statesmen think they can manage it without actual war. What these most want from America is silence and calm.

For Mr. Roosevelt, the role of silence is not easy. As Mr. Arthur Krock puts it in the New York Times: "Restiveness is of the essence of this Administration from the President down . . . Probably never in Mr. Roosevelt's time will there be quiet along the Potomac."

In the present European situation, restraint by American exponents of opinion, including especially the President, can do no harm, and might help. If Mr. Roosevelt has any restraint left over after using what he needs for himself, he might donate some to Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

Debutantes Delight!

Almost every teen aged girl is a debutante at heart. Whether she makes her formal bow or observes the Number 1 debs from the sidelines, she craves the "expensive simplicity" in clothes which has become synonymous with girls of gentle heritage. Questions of slinky evening gowns and overdoses of sophistication are being raised at this moment by the young girl who is "trying her wings." The fact still remains that the debutante who dresses in the softer and more youthful trend is the one most admired, by her elders and—her beaux. The debutante fashions on this page are obtainable at local stores. Fashion information may be obtained by calling Marshall Adams, The Post Fashion Editor, National 4200, between 10 and 6 o'clock

Coming Out Party

Destined to be the belle of her own, and many other balls, is the debutante who wears the wisp, above. Whether she is planning on an early spring bow or is adding to her present evening wardrobe, this wistful organza and soutache frock will be an indispensable. In ice cream pink.

Beau Catcher

No debutante, with any kind of future before her, could live through the spring without a special "date" hat, such as the one, right. This togue is of white porcelain straw, in a rural hedge pattern. It is crowned and bow-ed with moire ribbon, in a luscious fuchsia tone. Designed by Hodge, a man who knows what debutantes like. His daughter is one.

Debutante's Choice

Outstanding debutantes of Washington have shown partiality for sentimentality in their evening fashions. That is sentimentality—plus streamlining. In the manner of New York's famous Brenda Frazier, several local glamour girls have remained loyal to their winter preference for strapless evening gowns. They may stick up their aristocratic noses this spring at hoop skirts, but the heart-shaped decollete and no straps should prove still in the swing for several months to come. Socially prominent Marsyl Stokes, Evalyn McLean and Eleanore Meem are defenders of this cause.

Orchidacious

A dashing little suit for the deb's shopping tours, matinees, boat christenings and for practically all her waking hours. It is nautical-looking in a nubby navy woolen, double-breasted and flaring of skirt. It gets dressed up with orchid-tinted gloves, bag and a Sally Victor turban of navy and orchid crepe. Luxurious foil for the orchid corsage.

Cosmetic Colors

Every debutante today prides herself on her good taste in cosmetics. The world is her color pot this spring as a result of cosmetic colors being used for not only her skin tones, but every type of accessory. At right is a handsome nail-studded open-heeled and toed sandal, in the same soft cosmetic tones of the fitted vanity bag. In cyclamen, illusion pink or prince's feather red.

City Slicker Costume

For big moments in a debutante's life is the sheer gray woolen ensemble, above. For the first luncheon with a new beau at the swankiest hotel in town. For tea dansants or little suppers minus the lavishly fox-trimmed waist-high jacket. Or for first glimpses of the World's Fair, of the Golden Gate show, if you're lucky.

Floral Tribute

Like a tonic to tired everyday suits is a new supply of spring handkerchiefs. Tone up with the dainty white lawn kerchief, above. Burmel, the designer, sketched a fresh garden of posies and then sprinkled dots around its scalloped border. In an equally flowery mood is the skullcap of posies.

Casual Hooded Charmer

A gay and light-hearted frock, one to charm both the debutante and her mother, for its fabric is a spongy blue-gray woolen, above. Which means it wears and wears and yet always gives the deb that just-from-the-cleaner freshness. The flattering hood pinch-hits for a hat during those casual country week-ends.

Sheer Loveliness

For sheer loveliness, few blouses could be more desirable than the one at right. It is in the peek-a-boo tradition, but not in the French Zaza or Nana manner. It fits into the American ideal of illusion plus youthful freshness. Of thin white batiste, finely tucked and edged with dainty Val lace.

Career Girl

No one personality has created so much attention for herself in recent years as the girl who goes out to business and makes a career of it. She may sit before a typewriter all day or merely look calm and lovely as someone's receptionist. Regardless of her weekly pay check or her load of official responsibilities, she manages to look like the boss's daughter from morning 'til night. With Washington's quota of glamorously and appropriately groomed career-girls greater than that of any other city its size, local stores are already giving much time and discriminating devotion to assemblings of business girl fashions. All of the selections on this page have been identified with Washington stores and specialty shops. Marshall Adams, The Post Fashion Editor, will give fashion information on these styles. Call National 4200, between 10 and 6 o'clock.

Check This One

Check this type of dress, above, on your list if you are a young business executive, an advertising copy writer or a stenographer in high and mighty places. It's flaring, shorter action-skirt and broader shoulders are important features. The black and white woolen Shephard's check, is ultra chic.

Suit-able Attire

Suitable to the every day rigors of the Government employes' life is the two-piece suit, above. Ann Morriss, buoyant Hollywood actress, chooses this for her own wardrobe in a rich fuschia woolen, but any local girl could make good in this in her favorite color selection. The dress is simply designed. The hip-length jacket is kind to all figures.

Basic Coat

Either trimly tailored dresses or cocktail-time frocks would look right under this vital spring coat. Its lines are news! A demure schoolgirl color contrasts with the shrugged shoulders, loose, comfortable sleeves and softly bloused waistline. In richly textured nubby woolen.

Fa-cile Comfort

The perfect all-around handbag for the career girl, above! It is of soft capeskin in delicious spring colors. Quite dressy enough for pretty afternoon frocks, it is also trim and capacious for even the business girl who isn't happy unless she carries her whole wardrobe to work with her each day. An invisible Fa-cile steel closure facilitates speedy opening and closing of this bag.

Change of Venue

If entire new wardrobes can't quite be managed this spring, there are devious ways of reviving last year's drowsy looking suits. One of the best is illustrated by Virginia Bruce, another film star who prefers that neat, tailored look. She wears a blazing red carnation, a fresh white organdie guimpe and snowy pique revers above.

Hits Nail On Head!

These clever suede accessories hit the nail on the head for the business girl who depends on "those little touches" to change the outlook of her one good office dress. Literally, nailed with nailheads are the belt and collar, hat, bag and flowers match, above.

Patent Patterns

Bright with patent leather patterns are these sparkling new oxfords. They are square of heel and so trim of cut and fit that they could quickly become your "favorite" shoes. Their pin-point perforations form a neat pattern contrast to the large black patent bag which has been squared off with neat stitchings.

The woman, above, wears a striped silk "backet" as a plastron over her simple wool frock. A little slight of hand and this wise matron reverses the back to the front. Presto, she has now an ascot and belt to add spice to her spring suit. This type of modified up-and-around coiffure, incidentally, is complimentary to the more mature face

Taffeta for Tea Time

Taffeta, rich in texture, but dull in finish, has always added subtle flattery to the woman past her twenties. The blouse, above, adapted from a Vionnet original, has infinite appeal as a feminizer of tailored suits. Double pockets, pinky buttons and a looped ascot are nice details

Fur Finery

Glamour girls may have their silver foxes, but any woman of mature years and discrimination will gravitate toward the quiet beauty of martens. Sauces Add Zest To Lenten Dishes, Chef Points Out

New York, March 1.

NOW THAT the churchly season of self-denial called Lent is in its second week, there is considerable discussion around here as to the best means of brightening up such bland and even dull foods as fish. After discussing the matter with some of our leading cooks, I find that they place their highest hopes in this regard on sauces.

It is generally felt that Lent is no longer such a period of strict fasting as it was several generations ago, but even so a large portion of the community restricts its diet at this season according to the regulations of its church. During this period of abstinence, fish, vegetable and egg dishes frequently appear on the daily menu—thus putting the burden of gastronomic proof on the sauce. All the authorities I consulted say that successful sauce-making depends upon a real "feeling for cooking," and that the average girl who can hardly fry an egg gracefully cannot be expected to confect the delicate and tasty sauces which do so much to dress up simple and homely fare.

Joseph Boggia, chef at the Plaza, told me that such a well-known sauce as Hollandaise is more a matter of good ingredients than of tricks. Boggia says that the use of the yolks of the best grade of eggs and of sweet butter make the most difference in concocting successful Hollandaise. All in all, my researches showed that this is a perfect time of year to practice up on sauces. A success with the mixing bowl and the cook stove can make all the difference between a really tasty dish and just another mess of dull grub.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Dorothy Thompson, one of my most famous columning colleagues, easily retains her standard as the most thorough and courageous haters of totalitarian rule. When the regal Dorothy was asked to leave a recent German meeting at Madison Square Garden for laughing at one of the speeches, she maintained her integrity as a foe of such goings-on. Her husband, Sinclair Lewis, told reporters that he was "proud of Dorothy." So were a lot of other people here, I may add.

With our World's Fair slated to open in a few weeks, its authorities are suffering the last-minute jitters customary on all such occasions. Grave doubts are expressed everywhere that the big show will be completely ready for the public on opening day—to which the obvious answer is, what World's Fair ever was? The latest note of cheer is the word that the King and Queen of England are expected out on the Flushing meadows on Saturday, June 10, immediately after a three-day visit with the Roosevelts. You can bet your new copper-toed shoes that our big show will be 100 per cent in order when it is time to greet George VI and his Elizabeth.

City slickers and everybody else are always on the lookout for new tidbits to serve at cocktail parties, as these afternoon orgies are ironically called. The latest to appear here is a miniature Mexican tamale sent here from California in tiny corn husks. Local hostesses can steam them for five minutes, and they are ready to serve. One local shop has a monopoly on these tamales at present, and is doing a mighty business among the ladies with guests on their hands.

GRILLED HAM SLICES

Select 1 pound of smoked ham, cut ¼ of an inch thick. Cut into serving portions. Place on a broiler rack or in a large hot frying pan. Cook quickly until well browned on both sides. Lower heat and cook for 10 minutes, or until ham is tender, when tested with a fork. Cook 2 tablespoons of boiling water, 2 tablespoons of chopped onions and ¼ teaspoon of paprika for 5 minutes, while the ham is browning. Arrange ham on serving platter and top with hot sauce.

Renoir's Works Noted for Wide Appeal

French Painter Sympathetic in Child Portrayal

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

This is the second of a series of weekly articles on "Art in The Home," in which Miss Boykin discusses famous pictures especially suitable for the average household.

Pierre Auguste Renoir (1841-1919) belongs to that group of modern French painters who revolutionized our theories of art and created an entirely new conception of the painter's role. But his pictures have a far wider appeal than does the work of many of his contemporaries. He has a particularly sympathetic feeling for domestic scenes and for children. His "Portrait of a Little Girl" illustrated here is a charming example. His colors are clear and distinctly individual, and he introduces gray frequently with incisive warm tones.

The son of a tailor at Limoges, France, he was apprenticed to a china manufacturer, where he became a skilled painter on porcelain. Later he earned his first money for studying art by painting fans and blinds. Color became a subject of intense study and concentration and soon he was an important member of the impressionist school.

His work is shown in most of the leading museums and in many famous private collections. He painted many different types of subjects and even turned to modeling toward the latter part of his life.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Tribute to Age

I like mellowed elderly women
so much better than their brittle middleaged daughters,

Who are forever prating of themselves, their houses and their families

Their Chinese screens, their Italian pottery and the quaint old highboys

They picked up at an auction; and who give themselves to long discussion

Concerning fur coats, watches, and refrigerators that their husbands did or didn't buy them.

And also how the maids all slight their work and act so bold and saucy,

And how the cliques within their clubs are doing all the things they oughtn't,

II

I like truly matured older women so much better than their callow granddaughters,

Who are so cocksure of themselves and who know all the answers,

Who see no life in neutral tints, no person in a third dimension.

Who are so bigoted, opinionated and intolerant of all their fellow creatures

Of other generations; and who live absorbed in rigid worlds all shut up tightly

III

I like older women because they as a rule have learned the lesson

How to "go softly" all their days and because they view the world about them

As pastel landscape with the good and bad so closely merging;

Also because they do not give that sense of rush and worry and futility,

But rather seem to say that after all they have discovered

IV

I like older women best because they seem—if they have really lived—to carry an aura

Of world invisible; and to have a delicate intangible comprehension

Of things in other people's minds—their longings and their problems;

Because they seem to sense and understand so much more than their daughters

The happenings about them, and because they have a transparency and prescience

Pearls Popular Jewel for Spring

Some of the most exciting news in the spring fashion picture deals with jewels. Pearls are the favored gem, with diamonds second, both in this country and abroad.

In London, Paris and New York striking new designs are being shown in natural Oriental pearls. Necklaces are larger; some have two rows at the back and three in front in festoon fashion, with a diamond motif on each side of the festoon. Snaps of other precious gems are popular.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Foolishly Fond Father Thwarts Conscientious Mother's Efforts to Train Child; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is a parent to do under these circumstances: We have an only child, a daughter now in her teens. From her babyhood, her father opposed any attempts at regular training. She was rocked to sleep all her babyhood because her father goes by emotion rather than reason. Although I proved to him once—by locking her bedroom door and keeping the key—that she would go quietly to sleep by herself if not taken up and petted, still he chose not to believe it.

She has been waited on hand and foot all her life. She started out with a naturally sweet and affectionate disposition. But all her training has been such as to make her consider her own desires before those of anyone else. During her early years I struggled against what seemed to me—from what I had read and heard—to be unwise handling. But this precipitated such domestic storms that I gave up, to a large extent.

Today I asked her to dry the dinner dishes. She did most of them, then walked off, saying that was all she would do. I work outside the home, run the house and do many things for her. Her refusal to finish the little job seemed to me too selfish to be overlooked. I showed her father, and we both told her she must finish the job or she could not go to the promised movies that afternoon. She refused.

When it came time for the movies her father lost heart. He wanted to go, but would not have enjoyed them if she didn't go. He sought her out, then came to see me and told me that she had said she was sorry, so therefore we could now forgive her and take her with us. I do not believe that she apologized, as I have never heard her admit that she was ever wrong. I told him I did not think we should go back on our word. It meant spoiling my afternoon as well as his if we kept it, since I, too, am a "fond parent," but it seemed to me we had to go through with it if our rulings were to mean anything.

This brought on a storm on my husband's part, in which he told her to see how much trouble she had made, since her mother was so obstinate, pigheaded, etc. In the course of the conversation between them, she calm and collected and he excited and violent, she assured him that I would be sorry (for being so stubborn) when I saw what it got me—no movies, no fun. What do I do? Step down as a parent? Or ignore everything and hope that her character won't be spoiled?

READER.

Exercise Diplomacy

DEAR READER: As has been said before now, there's not much point in banging one's head against a stone wall. And that's just about what your well-meant efforts to discipline your daughter amount to, under the circumstances. Since her father is so much the soft-hearted sentimentalist as to place her pleasure before her good, and tacitly to conspire with her in flaunting rules pertaining to prompt and unquestioning obedience, I think you have little choice but to fall in line.

If the girl has "good stuff" in her—in the sense of claiming a sound inheritance of mental, moral and social equipment—a certain amount of spoiling probably won't irrevocably ruin her life. Indeed, consistent spoiling might be preferable to making her character and personality the battleground of a parental tug-o'-war. Hard headed authoritarianism, as a parental principle, is hardly more productive of wholesome obedience than is the principle (if such we may call it) of pampered indulgence. And luckless indeed is the child who becomes the butt of both sets of theories at one and the same time.

Some astute observer has remarked that boy children are, for the most part, like bronze, in that their characters may be hammered into shape; whereas girls may be likened to vegetables (or flowers), in that they thrive best in a sunny atmosphere of relaxed and kindly affection. Thus it may be that in denying your daughter a generous measure of tolerance; in failing to take her rather more on trust, actuated by the assumption that she will, in time, naturally grow out of her childishly selfish ways; in pounding away at her ("forever ding-donging," as one of my youthful correspondents recently said of her parents), you are doing more to throw her character off balance than you are doing to mold it excellently. The very fervor of your desire to give her the most helpful sort of training may be causing you to defeat your own purpose, by overreaching yourself.

In view of the fact that you yourself seem to be possessed of a certain ingrained stubbornness—as witness the time you locked the baby's bedroom door against your husband—it is well to reflect that your daughter may have inherited a similar streak of obstinacy. And it is a generally accepted fact that while obstinate natures may be tactfully led or gently persuaded to do another's will, it is seldom, if ever, that they give ground permanently before a show of force. They may yield temporarily to inexorable pressure—but the moment that pressure is relaxed, they spring back to their original position, more stubbornly resistant than before.

Experts in child management constantly emphasize the importance of parents standing together and presenting a united front to their children, in matters having to do with training and discipline. And if, in this case, your husband cannot be made to see the wisdom (if wisdom it is) of accepting and indorsing your theories, the most feasible compromise (for your daughter's sake) may consist of your adopting his viewpoint. You have admitted that you are willing to take some punishment (as, for instance, the dutifully dismal afternoon at the theater without her) in order to serve her interests; and there is some possibility that you may strike pay dirt by taking that punishment in the form of playing along with her foolishly fond father, even against your better judgment. All things considered, it seems a reasonable risk, since you stand to alienate the affections of both in attempting to enforce a minority opinion. Remember that it is virtually impossible for one to exert any influence in the affairs of those who secretly or heartily dislike him.

I think it would be most unwise to take the attitude of "stepping down as a parent," however. All sorts of misleading inferences might be conveyed to your daughter's mind through such a step. For one thing, it would amount to a tacit confession of a battle's having been waged and lost—with yourself the loser. It might give your daughter the potentially harmful notion that rightful authority can be successfully defied. She might assume that, insofar as her family is concerned, she is the dictator and her parents the dictated-to. Moreover, you would be relinquishing claims to appropriate dignity and quiet self-respect in taking such a stand. You would be the self-crowned martyr and dishonorably abdicated mistress of your household.

Be big enough to put aside considerations of stiff-necked (and wounded) authoritarian parental pride and see if you cannot dissolve this conflict. It is preferable to trying to gain victory for your viewpoint. Since your daughter has a stubborn will of her own, try to work with it rather than provoke it into opposition. Deft diplomacy may prevail where all displays of force would fail. By making fewer and infinitely more tactful demands of the child, you may gain your point by indirection, through winning her voluntary and cheerful allegiance. Unless a child is essentially wayward, he responds (as a rule) in the most gratifying way to a consistent parental example of cordially courteous helpfulness. And even if he is wayward, he cannot be constructively ruled by the rod—or its equivalent—once he has reached his teens. He can only be influenced—not forced—into socially desirable patterns of behavior.

And here's one last thought: You say you have never heard your daughter "admit that she was ever wrong." In my opinion, that argues more against your management of her than against her own nature. It takes a really successful parent to win a voluntary confession of error from a child. When pitifully (because so defenselessly) submitted (and I do not mean sternly extracted) it is a child's beautiful testimony of his utter trust in his parent's capacity fully to understand.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Tall Woman Can Turn Her Height To Advantage Says Rose Bampton, Opera Singer

WE HAVE been stressing exercise to streamline the buxom, to fill out the thin and to stretch the short . . . and, as usual, nothing has been done about the tall girl who needs to be encouraged to live up to her height.

So we went over to see Rose Bampton, the Metropolitan Opera soprano, who is the loveliest example we know of the tall girl who makes height an asset. She is 5 feet 9 inches tall and doesn't mind in the least—and neither does anyone else! In fact, it's just the other way round. After seeing Rose Bampton, you are more than likely to long for a few more inches of height, because this star is justly famous for her graceful carriage and good figure.

What a contrast she offers to the tall girl who seeks to conceal her height by stooping! Can you imagine an opera star slouching on to the stage with her shoulders hunched over? That wouldn't take a fraction of an inch off her height. It would only call attention to an ungainly carriage.

Keep Mind on Walking

"The tall girl," declares Miss Bampton, "has only to take advantage of what she has." And the way to do that, she believes, is to keep your mind on walking, standing and sitting with head and chest up, tummy up and in, and back flat, until good posture becomes automatic.

If you have been making a habit of slouching, this firm believer in good posture for the girl over 5 feet recommends a set of exercises that she herself has found helpful. You will get excellent results from them.

Here is the first:

Stand with the heels against a wall and, keeping the knees straight, drop the upper part of the body forward at the waist, having it completely relaxed. Then, counting eight slowly, begin with the end of the spine and force the backbone, bit by bit, up against the wall. Finally, lift the chest and head, and try to flatten the back of the neck against the wall. Finally, lift the chest and head, and try to flatten the back of the neck against the wall. Hold the body erect for a moment, then relax forward again. Repeat four times. You couldn't find an exercise that would do more to strengthen the muscles of the back and tummy. Why not do it every day several times?

Don't Let Shoulders Round

In the second exercise, keep the head and shoulders erect and push up with the shoulders until they almost touch the ears. Then, still holding the shoulders up, rise on the balls of the feet and walk about the room to a count of four, lifting the legs high at the knees, but without bending the body at the waist or lowering the shoulders. Relax completely, and repeat. Be careful not to let the shoulders round forward when you hunch them up. The exercise will help you to straighten your shoulders and to develop poise.

The last exercise, Miss Bampton says, will help you to acquire a graceful walk. It is done to a count, and the movements should be rhythmical. Use either a count of four or a count of eight, so long as you can fit your movements into the rhythm. Begin by flexing the right leg, using the hip and thigh muscles, and at the same time push yourself forward with the left foot. Repeat the step with the left leg flexed, pushing with the right foot.

For Smoothing Sleeves

If you do not have a special board for pressing sleeves, here is a convenient substitute: Roll up a large magazine, fasten it with rubber bands and tuck it into the sleeve.

Cold Keeps Hostess From Society Concert

Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Unable To Attend Her Function for Friends Of Music; Busch Quartet, Serkin Heard

At the last moment, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge was unable to be present at the brilliant concert she gave last evening in honor of the Society of Friends of Music. Her velvet evening gown and black wrap with collar and cuffs of ermine were laid out for her to wear, when the doctor told her the cold she suffered must prevent her attendance.

Grippe kept a number of Washington's ardent music lovers away. Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who certainly would have been there, is the victim of a cold, and Mrs. Truxtun Beale decided her current cough would only disturb the listeners if she went. Mrs. Lawrence Townsend was another missed—she has left for a stay in the South.

However, the audience was a brilliant one, with diplomats, members of Congress, and residential society gathered in the Coolidge Auditorium donated to the Library of Congress by Mrs. Coolidge.

The late Nicholas Longworth was the first president of the Friends of Music when it was founded 10 years ago, and Mrs. Longworth is still one of the vice presidents. The Friends have several purposes, one of which is to provide funds for the purchase and gift of additions to the music collection in the Library of Congress, such as historical rarities, significant publications, and manuscripts, both old and modern. They also organize concerts for the members.

Harold Bauer, world famous pianist, is now president of the Friends of Music, and among the distinguished vice presidents is no less a musical personage than Leopold Stokowski.

Another vice president, Carl Engel, came from his home in New York to attend last evening's concert. Miss Grace Dunham Guest, the secretary, wearing black velvet, was in a party of friends which included Mrs. Hare Lippincott and Mrs. Frank West. Clarence Aspinwall, treasurer of the society, was also present. Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, another officer was present with Mr. Howe.

Several Dinners Precede Concerts

Senator Theodore Francis Green, of Rhode Island, who is very fond of music, was in the audience. Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Casper Miller had entertained the Charge d'Affaires of the Italian Embassy and Signora Cosmelli at dinner before the concert, but Mrs. Miller is currently one of the "cold" victims and did not go on to the library. However, the Cosmellis were among those present, Signora Cosmelli wearing a black crepe gown, simply made.

The Belgian Ambassador and lovely Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, who wore a striking gown of black lace, were accompanied by their older daughter, Countess van der Burch. She arrived recently from Belgium to pay them an extensive visit.

Others from the Diplomatic Corps included the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, and the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom. The latter wore black velvet, on simple lines, with a lace vestee.

Mr. and Mrs. Prentiss Coonley had a few people in for an early dinner, later taking them on to the concert. Mrs. Arthur Woods gave a small supper for a few intimate friends after the program.

Busch Quartet, Serkin Play

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., the latter gowned in black crepe with a large gold buckle, were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John Carter Vincent. Others present included Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Robert Brookings, Miss Christabel Hill, with a party of friends; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., who recently returned from a trip to Canada; and James Pennfield.

Performers were the famous Adolf Busch string quartet, and Rudolph Serkin, pianist. The chamber music consisted of a Beethoven and Haydn quartet and a Brahms quintet.

Artists of the quartet are Adolf Busch, first violin; Gosta Andreasson, second violin; Karl Doktor, viola; and Hermann Busch, violoncello.

SOCIETY - GO - ROUND: Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt will entertain at luncheon on Saturday in honor of Miss Louise Boyd, noted explorer and geographer, who will arrive tomorrow to be her house guest and to attend the stunt party of the Women's National Press Club tomorrow evening . . . the Military and Air Attache of the Polish Embassy, Lieut. Col. Andrzej Chramiec, will entertain at dinner on Monday evening . . . the Counselor of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Eduard Feer will give a dinner on Thursday, March 16, at their home on Rodman street . . . Mrs. George Grant Mason, jr., will return today from a brief visit in New York . . . Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer, wife of Brig. Gen. Keefer, leaves today for San Antonio, Tex., where she will spend this month . . . Miss Ruth Jones will entertain at a small, informal luncheon on Saturday in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Paul Jones, of Cleveland; Mrs. Edward Cary, of Aurora, Ohio, and Miss Constance Enslow, of Chicago, all of whom are coming to Washington to attend the press club stunt party tomorrow night.

Mrs. Truxtun Beale Entertains for Congressional Set

Mrs. Truxtun Beale entertained yesterday afternoon at her home, Decatur House, on Jackson place. Her guests were more than a score of Congressional women who had gathered to organize in the interest of the National Symphony.

Among those present were Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, Mrs. Chester Bolton, Mrs. William M. Whittington, of Mississippi; Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Harry Engelbright, of California, and Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, of New York.

Mrs. William Bayly Entertains Niece

Mrs. William Hamilton Bayly has as her guest at the Hotel Roosevelt her niece, Mrs. Herman L. Barnes, of Canton, Ohio.

Other recent guests have been Mrs. DuBose Heywood, of Charlestown, S. C.; Mrs. Bayly's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kuhns, of Canton, Ohio, and H. L. Barnes.

Mrs. Charles M. Lea Gives Two Parties

Mrs. Charles M. Lea entertained at two dinners last evening—one at the Sulgrave Club for younger people and another at her residence for Senator and Mrs. Charles McNary.

Her dinner at the Sulgrave Club was in honor of her grandson, H. Lea Hudson, of Valley Forge, Pa., and Mrs. Hudson.

Night Club Jobs Expensive, D. C. Society Girls Find

WASHINGTON society girls who have taken jobs singing or dancing in night clubs this winter are discovering as the season ends that their glamorous memories are more or less offset by a mountain of bills. While so far none have followed the example of Adelaide Moffett, bankrupt night club warbling daughter of Millionaire James A. Moffett, most of them find that despite the generous salaries paid them, this night club singing can be an expensive business.

Austine McDonnell, who has just terminated an engagement at the Raleigh, admits that if her parents hadn't paid for her evening dresses she couldn't have made both ends meet. Her partner, Larry Baker, says that nobody paid for the many pairs of dancing shoes he needed except himself, and so he was able to clear practically nothing.

THERE'S the item of orchestra rehearsals, which mounts to a tidy sum if one is an amateur and needs lots of practice. Miss McDonnell spent more than she made during her early winter engagement at the Heigh Ho, mostly on the orchestra. Then she has her hair done every day or so, takes taxis to and from work, and buys an occasional song orchestration, all of which mounts up.

Miss McDonnell expects to leave soon with her parents to rest up from night club work in a tour of the gardens at Natchez, Miss.

MRS. HENRI DE SIBOUR, who sang for several weeks at the Pall Mall room, found that singing lessons took practically all her earnings. Junia Culberstson, now warbling there, says "you can't break even on short engagements." She is luckier than most, as she has had professional experience, hence can go easy on the expensive rehearsals. She has also had dramatic lessons, an advantage over Miss McDonnell, who had to put part of her salary into being taught such fundamentals. Miss Culbertson would be well ahead of the game if she didn't take singing lessons, but since she would continue those anyway, job or no job, she considers the whole thing well worthwhile.

Most of the New York girls who sing at the Stork, Ambassador, and other night haunts, find that most of their pennies go for expensive orchestrations. Competition there is so great—much heavier than in more conservative Washington—that unless the gals have a novel way of presenting their songs, they won't get very far.

SO FAR, the Washington deb who has prospered most in the night club singing business is Peggy Townsend. Her mother says she would have garnered even more if she weren't a bit inclined toward extravagance. A debutante this year, she naturally had a pretty large wardrobe with which to start her career at the Cafe Caprice. She has been there far longer than any of the other Capital warblers have stayed at night clubs. Yesterday Peggy flew up to New York for lunch and back again to keep her nightly date at the Caprice.

SPEAKING of night club singers—Anne Kieess, of Washington, who has been trying her luck at this career in New York, is quoted as saying casually there the other day that she hadn't heard from her supposed fiance, Manuel Trucco, since he sailed December 17 for South America. She further stated that if she hadn't heard by yesterday from the son of the Chilean Ambassador, she was going to break the engagement—which so far has never been announced.

JUSTICE AND MRS. OWEN J. ROBERTS will be joined the middle of the month by their daughter, Mrs. Charles Hamilton. Washington has seen little of the former Elizabeth Roberts since her marriage last summer. She and her husband live in Green Farm, Conn., near Bridgeport.

The Rev. Ford On Mexico Trip With Family

Leaving Washington yesterday, the Rev. and Mrs. John Ford, of Takoma Park, are making a leisurely journey by auto to Mexico City, and then on to Vera Cruz.

From Vera Cruz they will go on by train for a vacation visit with Mr. Ford's brother and sister-in-law, the Rev. and Mrs. Orley Ford, in Guatemala City, Guatemala.

They are accompanied by their two sons, John and Robert Ford, and expect to be away for about three months.

Justice, Mrs. Laws Feted at Dinner

Dr. and Mrs. William F. Burdick entertained at a dinner last evening at their home on Meadowbrook Lane, Chevy Chase, in honor of Justice and Mrs. Bolitha J. Laws.

The other guests were Representative and Mrs. Harold J. Flannery, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Diebert, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Charest, Mrs. John Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hill, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Ong, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Kline, Mr. and Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Wiegester, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Kaspar, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Davis and Mr. and Mrs. George Brabson.

Minister, Mme. Loudon Due From Cuba March 9

The Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon will arrive in New York next Tuesday from a stay in Cuba, where the Minister is also accredited, and will return to Washington on Thursday, March 9.

The Minister and Mme. Loudon are expected to leave late this month or early in April for a visit to the West Coast.

Not to Be "At Home"

Gov. Maybank, Wife, Of South Carolina, To Be Guests Here

The Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. John Monroe Johnson have issued invitations to a dinner next Thursday at the Chevy Chase Country Club in honor of the Governor of South Carolina and Mrs. Burnet Maybank.

Gov. and Mrs. Maybank will arrive here that afternoon and will be guests of honor at a reception to be given on Friday, March 10, at the Shoreham by the South Carolina State Society. Edgar Morris, president of the society, is in charge of arrangements.

Joseph A. Roneys Planning Party

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Roney will entertain a large group of their friends at a supper party following the Evelyn Davis dance concert on Saturday. The recital is being sponsored by the Washington Alumnae Association of Phi Mu, of which Mrs. Roney is a member.

Among the guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Donald F. Christy, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Sandstrom, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eckles, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Houghton, Capt. and Mrs. H. S. Bishop and Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Burmeister.

Several dinner parties will be given preceding Miss Davis' concert. Among those entertaining will be Mrs. Donald F. Christy, Mrs. William Bradford and Mrs. H. S. Bishop. The concert will take place in the New Theater at 1742 Church street.

From Ohio

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Hanrahan, of Lakewood, Cleveland, Ohio, are at the Shoreham for a few days, after which they will go to New York.

76th Club Stages Oregon Trail Party

Wives of New Congressmen Launch Social Season With Luncheon; Airline Sends California Flowers

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Seventy-Sixth Club, composed of wives of newly-elected members of Congress, formally launched its social season yesterday with an Oregon Trail luncheon at the Roosevelt Hotel. Pussy Williows from Oregon, acacia, avacados and oranges from California and scenes "along the trail" forming centerpieces for each table, gave atmosphere.

The acacias were the gift of an airline company. Mrs. Carl Hinshaw, of California, chairman of the committee on arrangements, called attention to the contrast in transportation now, when it is possible to have flowers on the table in Washington which have been picked in California the day before and in the days of the Oregon Trail. Then it was a hazardous eight months' journey overland from Independence, Mo., to Oregon.

Jessie A. Arndt

Guests Progress Between Courses

The luncheon guests progressed by twos to other tables between courses, as a means of becoming better acquainted and of carrying out the Oregon Trail theme.

Mrs. Joshua Johns, of Wisconsin, is president of the club, which was organized only a few weeks ago. She presented as the guest artist for the occasion, Miss Marjorie Brett, soloist of the a cappella choir, of which Mrs. Ruby Stahl is director. Miss Brett sang, with Mrs. Stahl accompanying her.

Assisting Mrs. Hinshaw on the luncheon committee were Mrs. Henry Dworshak, of Idaho; Mrs. Homer Angell, of Oregon, Mrs. Leland Ford, of California, and Mrs. John Anderson, of California. Mrs. Thomas R. Ball, of Connecticut, treasurer of the club, was in charge of tickets at the door.

Many Present At Luncheon

Others attending the affair included Mrs. Fred Bradley, Michigan; Mrs. Clarence Brown, Ohio; Mrs. William Burgin, North Carolina; Mrs. William Byron, Maryland; Mrs. Robert Chiperfield, Illinois; Mrs. Cliff Clevenger, Ohio; Mrs. Robert Corbett, Pennsylvania; Mrs. Robert Grant, Indiana; Mrs. George Gillie, Indiana; Mrs. Butler Hare, South Carolina; Mrs. Ben Jensen, Iowa; Mrs. Karl LeCompte, Iowa; Mrs. John McMillan, South Carolina; Mrs. L. L. Marshall, Ohio; Mrs. Thomas E. Martin, Iowa; Mrs. William Miller, Connecticut; Mrs. W. F. Norrell, Arkansas; Mrs. Joseph O'Brien, New York; Mrs. Thomas V. Smith, Illinois; Mrs. Lansdale Sasscer, Maryland; Mrs. Havre Tibbott, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. James Van Zandt, Pennsylvania; Mrs. William Wheat, Illinois; Mrs. Alexander Wiley, Wisconsin; Mrs. Carl Curtis, Nebraska; Mrs. Clyde Ellis, Arkansas; Mrs. Thomas Eaton, California; Mrs. George Williams, Delaware; Mrs. Leonard Hall, New York; Mrs. John Danaher, Connecticut; Mrs. John Vorys, Ohio; Mrs. Albert Gore, Tennessee; Mrs. Karl Mundt, South Dakota; Mrs. J. Federation Sentiment Favors Entry of 10,000 Refugee Children

Speakers on Radio Forum Declare Wagner-Rogers Bill Excellent Provided Proper Homes Be Found for Group

Sentiment favoring the Wagner-Rogers bill providing for admittance of 10,000 refugee children from Central Europe to the United States, was expressed at the headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, where a group gathered to hear the federation radio broadcast on "Why Is There a Refugee Problem?" Expressions in favor of the blil were qualified by emphasis on the necessity for a well-organized plan for the placement of the children in homes where they would be readily assimilated as American citizens.

Dr. Charles Pergler, former Czecho-Slovakian diplomat, who is now dean of the law school of National University, summarized the radio talks and declared in favor of the Wagner-Rogers bill, which was referred to in the radio forum. Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the general federation, who was hostess at the "radio party," likewise favored offering refuge to as many of the children as the country could care for adequately.

Three Speakers on Radio Program

The radio speakers, presented by Mrs. Harold B. Milligan, of New York, chairman of radio for the General Federation, were Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the University of Newark; Dr. Emily Hickman, professor of history at the New Jersey College for Women, and Raymond Gram Swing, noted writer and news commentator.

Dr. Kingdon declared the Hitler regime was blanketing its whole program of cruelty by singling out the Jews and distorting their position in the world, although the persecution is by no means confined to them.

"Educational and religious leaders who have refused to bow down to the Nazi government suffer the same fate," he said. "The threat of totalitarianism is not only to the liberties they hold dear, but is a threat to the Christian way of life which vitally concerns us as a freedom-loving people, he asserted.

"The refugee counts not his own life dear, for the sake of freedom," said Dr. Kingdon, "the refugee is not a problem. He is our opportunity to show the love of freedom still lives in us."

Dr. Hickman described persecution of the Jews which she witnessed in Austria last summer, and discussed this country's part in a solution of the problem. In connection with the Wagner-Rogers bill she mentioned the fact that homes already had been offered for 4,000 of the 10,000 children it would admit to this country.

Mr. Swing, following her on the program, pointed out that the 10,000 children would actually add but a small fraction to the total population, and taking them in was "a mere pittance of what we might do."

"It is more than merciful. It is an avowal of the cardinal principle of Americanism," he declared.

Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer Presides at Meeting

Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer, chairman of radio for the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, presided, and Dr. Pergler led the lively forum discusion which followed.

Among those present were Mrs. Viola Baker, Mrs. Jennie Esmond Wright, radio director of the Chevy Chase branch of the League of American Pen Women; Mrs. J. A. Mendelson, a former president of the Women's Club of Tientsin, China; Miss Thomas Petticord, Mrs. Edward Boyd Kay, Mrs. Hugh Butler, who is starting another term of her public speaking class Monday, open to club women; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt, former chairman of radio for the general federation; Miss Vella A. Winner, editor of the Clubwoman GFWC; Mrs. Margaret Worrell, Mrs. Frederick Mills and Mrs. Lucian Greathouse.

Hospital Board Plans Election

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the woman's board of George Washington University Hospital, who recently returned from an extended visit on the Pacific Coast and in Florida, presided yesterday at the March meeting of the board, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. William H. Aspinwall was appointed cochairman, with Mrs. Williard H. Yeager, of the nominating committee to prepare a slate for the May election. Other members were Mrs. G. Louis Weller, Mrs. Watson W. Eldridge and Mrs. Frank B. Steele.

The treasurer's report showed that this year the board had disbursed for the benefit of the hospital $2,500, a substantial increase over last year, when the amount was more than $1,700 and the year previous, $1,400.

Following the business meeting, Mrs. Grosvenor described her experiences in Hollywood, where she went to be present during the filming of part fo the picture on the life of her father, Alexander Graham Bell, and his invention of the telephone. Mrs. Grosvenor will entertain the board at luncheon at her home, Wild Acres, Bethesda, Md., for its April meeting.

Sorority to Aid Zucker Fund

The second annual dance for the benefit of the Flora Alpert Zucker Memorial Fund will be held at Wardman Park Hotel, Continental Room, Saturday from 10 to 1.

This fund was established in 1937 by the Washington Alumnae Club of Phi Sigma Sigma Sorority in memory of the first deceased alumnae of the George Washington University chapter. The fund is non-sectarian, and was created when it was learned there was urgent need for special medicines and corrective medical appliances for children of indigent parents.

Orthopedic shoes, special powdered milk, injections of grandular extract, replacement of missing front teeth, as well as more than 30 pairs of eyeglasses, are among the many urgent medical needs supplied children through the fund. Cases are brought to the attention of the administrator of the fund, Mrs. A. Palma Aaronson, by social service workers in clinics of various hospitals, school nurses, Juvenile Court officials, school attendance officers and private agencies, and are cleared through the hospital permit bureau of the Health Department.

Persons interested in the work being done are making contributions to the chairman of the dance, Mrs. Sidney Kolker, 5353 Twenty-ninth street.

Among the many patrons and patronesses for the benefit dance are, Dr. and Mrs. Harry Bernton, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Cafritz, Dr. and Mrs. William Chase, Dr. and Mrs. Leopold Freudberg, Mr. and Mrs. Christian Heurich, Mr. and Mrs. E. Jury Indicts Harris as Bribe Seeker

Quijano Says He Was Asked for $50 To Prevent Testimony

Sydney Harris, 27, yesterday was charged with seeking a $50 bribe from Juan R. Quijano, Washington attorney, for not testifying in the latter's trial on numbers charges last month. Harris was charged in one of 49 indictments presented by the grand jury to Justice Adkins in District Court.

Quijano was cleared after a three day trial. Harris was subpenaed as a Government witness and arrested shortly before the trial.

Quijano told the grand jury Harris offered to get out of town for $200 two days before the trial opened.

William J. O'Brien was indicted on three charges of forging checks, totaling $25, with the name of E. J. Welch, deputy superintendent of Lorton Reformatory, in September, 1937. O'Brien, who served two prison terms in Lorton, is now in a Boston jail serving a six-months sentence for larceny.

Funeral Today For T. H. Reid, 69; Stonecutter Here

Funeral services for Thomas H. Reid, 69, of 1449 Harvard street northwest, veteran stonecutter, will be held at 10 a. m. today in Sacred Heart Catholic Church with interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery. He died Monday.

A native of this city, Mr. Reid did his first work on the Library of Congress Building 50 year ago. He had charge of the granite work on the new House Office Building, and had worked on many other Washington buildings. He was a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah B. Reid; three sons, Donald, Joseph and William; two daughters, Miss Dorothy Reid and Mrs. Ruth Litteral; two sisters, Miss Agnes Reid and Mrs. Helen McPherson, and four grandchildren.

Bill to Provide Sea Memorial Base Approved

Appropriation of $189,634 to complete the National Sea Memorial on the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard has been reported favorably to the House by the Committee on the Library and will be considered shortly, it was learned yesterday.

The funds would be used to provide a green granite base for the monument.

Religious Murals at Frisco Fair Draw Criticism

Associated Press Photos.

After hundreds of visitors to the World's Fair at San Francisco complained that his mural of Christ (left, above) lacked "spirituality and kindliness," Artist Franze Bergman agreed to change it. Similar criticisms were made of the mural of Moses (right), and the question was raised as to whether the Biblical figure was bald. Bergman agreed to alter Moses too.

Children Persecuted, Four Sent to Prison

Moscow, March 1 (AP).—Four officials today were sentenced to prison for fraudulently prosecuting school children as "counter-revolutionaries" and of imprisoning even some children under 12 years of age.

Witnesses said A. I. Savkin, a former operative in the N. K. V. D.—secret political police—had been so overzealous that he read espionage and terrorism into every juvenile misdemeanor.

Woman Warns School Of Bomb, Pupils Romp

Wilmington, Del., March 1 (AP).—A woman's telephone warning that a school building would be blown up, gave 600 pupils a 15-minute recess today and mystified police.

The woman caller said in a deep voice:

"I'm calling to let you know two bombs will go off in the school at 11 o'clock today."

There was no explosion. Police found a small box in a closet—but it contained only mud and concrete.

British Spinners to Protest Against U. S. Cotton Policies

Delegation Coming to Washington To Assert Accumulation Here Has Created European Shortage

By the Associated Press.

London, March 1.—Delegates of the British Federation of Master Cotton Spinners' Associations today were preparing to make a protest in person to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace in Washington on March 13 against United States cotton policies.

The delegates are expected to sail March 4 on the Queen Mary to present their contention that Washington's handling of cotton problems is injuring both British and American industries "artificially and excessively" and bolstering prices.

The federation yesterday passed a resolution asserting that the United States was creating a "shortage of American cotton, compelling British spinners to buy elsewhere." This already has been mailed to Washington. It is to be followed up by the personal representations in Washington of H. S. Butterworth and J. Walsh, vice presidents of the federation.

The resolution stated the United States policy caused the accumulation of large stocks of cotton in the United States, creating a European shortage of supplies of spot and forward cotton.

The delegates will suggest that the United States release weekly or monthly fixed quantities "so as to not unduly affect the market" to produce a normal carryover.

A federation official said that the 350,000 bales of American cotton now held in Liverpool were "well below" the normal figures.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace said yesterday the power of ordering release into market channels of surplus American cotton now tied up under Government loans was one that rested with Congress alone.

Exports to the United Kingdom during the first six months of the current season totaled only 297,000 bales compared with 1,272,000 bales in the corresponding period last season.

Relicensing Fee Opposed by Club

Collection of a $2 licensing fee from motorists will cost Maryland approximately $442,000 in Federal funds, Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor was told yesterday by the Keystone Automobile club.

The proposed action would cause reduction in Federal appropriations now granted to Maryland to match State income from motor vehicle taxes, since the relicensing fees would be credited to the general revenues of the State rather than to highway funds.

The Keystone Cub added the proposal "obviously was made for the purpose of raising revenue."

Orchestra Fund Drive Again Prolonged

With $91,514 in hand or pledged after extending its sustaining fund drive for a week, the National Symphony Orchestra Association yesterday again prolonged its campaign for $111,000.

The announcement was made at the final report luncheon of the drive at the Carlton Hotel. The amount reached at the meeting was 81.4 per cent of the goal.

The problem of the additional sum, approximately $20,000, will be placed before the association membership at a special meeting next Tuesday night in the United States Chamber of Commerce Auditorium.

Emergency action will be discussed at that time, drive leaders declaring that if the full $111,000 is not obtained the Symphony will be unable to operate after the end of this season.

While the campaign did not achieve its goal, the volunteer workers were congratulated on their efforts by L. Corrin Strong, drive vice chairman.

Two teams reported more than their quotas yesterday. The women's business team, including Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. C. Stanley Thompson, Mrs. Harold Spivacke and Mrs. Thomas O. Connett, reached a total of $7,265.35, or 112.4 per cent of its quota. And the Army group, headed by Mrs. H. H. Arnold and Mrs. Howard C. Davidson, brought in pledges totaling $1,992.03, or 102.5 per cent of its goal.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

On Monday, February 27th, by understanding with the Union representatives, the Ambassador, Carlton, Continental, Harrington, Lafayette, Lee House, Mayflower, New Colonial, Raleigh, Roger Smith, Shoreham, Wardman Park and Willard Hotels met with the Union representatives for the purpose of negotiating an agreement.

The only issue raised by the Union representatives was that of a closed shop and the Union representatives left the meeting with the statement that unless we consented to a closed shop they would not negotiate further.

Without any notice whatsoever to the Ambassador Hotel a strike was called.

OUR CONCLUSION IS THAT THE ONLY ISSUE IS THAT OF A CLOSED SHOP

We have no objection to our employees belonging to a Union and we are entirely willing to recognize and bargain with any Union which represents our employees. Therefore, there is no question of Union recognition involved.

We believe it is wrong to force our non-union employees to join the union under penalty of losing their jobs.

We believe that the service character of the hotel business and the duty and responsibility of hotels to the public is such that it would be improper for us to consent to a closed shop which would take out of our hands supervision of our employees.

Civic Group Asks Overton Plan Changes

Urges U. S. Extend Further Assistance In Contributions To District

Three proposals for amending the Overton formula for determining the Federal Government's contribution to District expenses were made last night in a resolution adopted by the Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

They recommended that the property of foreign governments and tax-exempt institutions be included as Federal property in applying the formula, that the Federal Government should contribute not only to the general fund but to all District appropriations except the water fund, that the Federal Government should pay for the water it uses at the usual rates; and that the District should be relieved of all share in supporting the National Zoological Park.

Location of the proposed Washington auditorium at the end of East Capitol street instead of at John Marshall place was urged in another resolution.

John J. Crimm, of the District Liquor Dispensary Association, spoke briefly in favor of the proposal to investigate liquor dispensaries in the District with a view to replacing them by Government agencies, and John Clagett Proctor, vice president of the Oldest Inhabitants Club, spoke on the history of Pennsylvania avenue.

Quinn Voices Views

Opposition to the provisions of the Griffenhagen report concerning the school board, the library board and the traffic department was expressed by the Friendship Heights Citizen Association after hearing I. Quinn, former member of the school board, discuss the harmful effects of political appointments to the board.

Conditions revealed in the Congressional investigation in 1906 would be repeated if the Griffenhagen proposals were carried out, Quinn asserted.

The association favored the report in principle, however.

Other resolutions passed by the association commended Prosecuting Attorney David A. Pine and Justice Bolitha Laws for their action in the numbers racket case; opposed the House resolution to investigate liquor retailers in the District; urged that trucks and unsightly vehicles be prohibited from parking opposite parks, and called on Parent-Teacher associations to take all possible action to reduce the damage done to school buildings.

The proposal for a general council of civic associations in the northwest area was approved in principle, and the executive committee was authorized to take necessary steps to work out the details. A committee to help raise funds for the Metropolitan Police Boys Club was appointed, consisting of J. L. Cornwell, James Galvin, Charles Dorman, J. W. Brogden and R. J. Young.

Oppose Report

Opposition to the Griffenhagen report because it fails to recommend suffrage for District citizens was voted by the special committee of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association appointed to study the proposed changes in the city government.

The special committee was composed of George H. Brown, A. B. Carty, Walter I. Swanton, Mrs. Ernest Howard, Dr. A. V. Smith, Miss Lillian Chanowth and L. R. Maddox, president of the association.

Public Support For Palestine Home Urged

Irish Legislator Asks Jewish Union To Seek Moral Aid

Union of all Jews in a campaign for America's moral support in their demand for a homeland in Palestine was urged last night by Robert Briscoe, sole Jewish member of the Irish Free State Parliament, as the only solution of the Jewish problem.

Speaking before Argo Lodge of B'nai B'rith in the Jewish Community Center, Brisco declared that a Jewish Free State was no more a "fantastic dream" than the Irish Free State had been a generation ago. As the Irish had found in their struggle for freedom, he declared, the Jews would find the moral support of American public opinion "90 per cent of the battle." It is "the only force for good still left in the world," he added.

Although the moral and legal right of the Jewish people to the possession of Palestine is antecedent to the refugee problem, he continued, that right must now be exercised as the Jews cannot go elsewhere without giving rise to anti-Semitism in countries where it never had existed before.

"Who gave Palestine to England?" he asked. "Palestine was entrusted to England to hold for the Jewish people, and if the British find that too costly or impossible because of circumstances over which they have no control, we should ask some other nation to take over the mandate, or take it over ourselves."

Urging all Jews to unite and forget their differences in order to present a solid front to England, he proposed that when the Jews are gathered in Palestine their conflicts could be resolved there. "Even if that means civil war," he said, "at least it will be in our own homeland."

Answering the objection that the Jews could not live in Palestine without reaching an accord with the Arabs, he pointed out that the Arab nations would be neighbors of the Jewish state, and would be afforded "the same recognition as we ask for ourselves.

Poem in Lincoln's Own Hand Shows Nostalgia He Felt at 35

That Abraham Lincoln, as a young lawyer in Illinois, looked back wistfully on his boyhood in Indiana is borne out by a 24-verse poem in his own handwriting now in possession of the Library of Congress.

Without a title, the poem was written about 1844, when he was 35, two years after his marriage to Mary Todd and one year after formation of his law partnership with William H. Herndon. At that time the future president had passed through a long period of poverty and failure.

Though Lincoln's poem looks back toward scenes and places of his childhood, only one person is mentioned. This person is one Mathew, the village madman, of whom Lincoln wrote: "I have ne'er forgot when first with maddened will yourself you maimed, your father fought, your mother strove to kill." The poem begins:

"My childhood home I see again
"And gladden with the view,
"And still as mem'ries crowd my brain
"There's sadness in it, too."

Of the poem's 24 verses, 12 are devoted to Mathew. In the others, the young lawyer wandered "the field with pensive tread" and paused to "pace the hollow rooms" of memory. The poem ends:

"The very spot where grew the bread
"That formed my bones I see.
"How strange old field on thee to tread
"And feel I'm part of thee."

The poem was presented to the library in 1937 by the late Mrs. Mary Lincoln Isham, Lincoln's granddaughter. It is one of the few he ever wrote.

Capital News In Brief

Gompers Honored in Broadcast

The work of Samuel Gompers, one of the founders and first president of the American Federation of Labor, in bringing about the establishment of the Department of Labor, was recalled last night by his son, also Samuel Gompers, who is now chief clerk of the department. The occasion was the twenty-sixth anniversary of the foundation of the Labor Department, which was celebrated by the National Broadcasting Co., with an interview of Gompers by William Coyle.

Declaring that he was "71 and still going strong, "Gompers said his work was his hobby, but admitted being an ardent Mason and president of the National Masonic Fishing Club. A native New Yorker and vice president of the New York State Society, he said he had lived here so long he feels he "ought to be" a Washingtonian.

Rare Covers Seen

Three stamped envelopes marked transpacific," dated 1925, were stared at reverently by a group of Washington philatelists last night while their owner told how they had been acquired.

Capt. Wilbur Van Auken, U. S. Navy, told members of the Washington Philatelic Society, the covers were carried by Commander John Rodgers on the first flight from San Francisco to Hawaii.

Within 100 miles of his destination, Rodgers' plane ran out of fuel and drifted at sea for nine days until Capt. Van Auken, commanding the U. S. S. Aroostock, picked up his old college chum and thereby acquired the three envelopes addressed to himself and unique in the world today.

Hoover to Aid Boys' Club

J. Edgar Hoover, Federal Bureau of Investigation director, yesterday became honorary general chairman for the $75,000 drive of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club, it was announced by L. Gordon Leech, campaign director.

Leech said that today the first of 125,000 envelopes would be sent out bearing a campaign contribution appeal from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent and club founder.

Leech said Gen. Albert A. Cox, general chairman, hurt Tuesday night in an automobile accident, may be able to preside at the pep luncheon of campaign captains and workers at the Cosmos Club tomorrow at 12:30 p. m.

One-Man Lobby

A new one-man lobby descended on Washington yesterday to seek Federal aid for inventors. "All we ask," said 74-year-old W. M. Edwards, of Miami, "are Federal loans to help develop our inventions. Inventors on WPA? Never!"

Absently pulling from his pocket a combination pencil, ruler, compass, caliper and straightedge, he discussed a doctor who makes eyeglasses for horses, "but these Legislators . . . they seem to think their ideas are the only ones worth anything."

Taft to Speak

Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), of Ohio, will speak tonight at the annual charter day banquet of Howard University in the university gymnasium, in celebration of the seventy-second anniversary of the founding of the institution. Dr. C. C. Spaulding, university trustee, of Durham, N. C., will make an address incident to the celebration this morning in Rankin Memorial Chapel.

Orme to Take Office Today as Police Chief

Charles M. Orme will take office today at Rockville, Md., as chief of Montgomery County police, having been sworn in yesterday by the clerk of court. His first official job will be a tour of inspection of county police stations.

Orme has been a law enforcement officer in Montgomery County since 1920, when he left the State's attorney's office to become a member of the new county police force.

WPA to Drop 75 Aliens, One a Veteran

Canadian Thought U. S. War Service Made Him Citizen; Wife Is Ill

Seventy-five aliens, nearly all of whom have taken out first papers, will be dropped from the local Works Progress Administration roll at the end of this week, Otto J. Cass, first assistant director of the District WPA, revealed yesterday.

This action, he explained, is made necessary by the provision of the $725,000,000 deficiency relief bill denying work relief to aliens.

Cass said affidavits of citizenship had been obtained from about 13,000 local WPA workers as required by the bill. This process disclosed that 75 relief workers were aliens.

Two of those to be dropped did not know they were aliens, Cass declared. One of these is a World War veteran whose wife is ill, and the other is a deaf and dumb male worker.

The World War veteran was born in Canada and was brought to this country by his parents when he was 2 years old. He was under the impression that his service in the United States Army made him a citizen.

The deaf and dumb worker likewise was brought to the United States as an infant. His father died. His mother remarried in 1926, while he still was a minor, and his stepfather acquired citizenship. This, he thought, made him a citizen. An act passed by Congress in 1922, however, provides that the husband's citizenship does not automatically make the wife a citizen.

Peace Must Start in Home, Rector Says

Lenten Speaker Avers America Is in Need Of Moral Rearmament

If America is to find the moral rearmament she needs, that moral rearmament must begin in the homes of our land, declared the Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker yesterday at Epiphany Church, addressing the daily noonday Lenten services.

Rector of Calvary Episcopal Church, New York City, and outstanding leader in the Oxford Movement, Mr. Shoemaker also spoke before the monthly meeting of the Epiphany Laymens League in the evening, with Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, pastor, and chaplain of the Senate, giving devotions and Randolph Cocke, league president, presiding.

"As our world is drawn closer together, through business and instantaneous communications, the problem of living together peaceably in the world is made more acute," Mr. Shoemaker told the noon-day audience.

In his later address, Mr. Shoemaker, describing the scope and purpose of the Oxford movement, said that its basis was "changing the individual."

Executive Session For Questioning Alldredge Slated

J. Haden Alldredge, of Alabama, one of President Roosevelt's two appointees to the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be called before a Senate sub-committee for questioning in executive session, Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, announced yesterday.

Johnson, chairman of the sub-committee, said Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, wants to examine Alldredge, who was appointed to fill the expired term of Frank McManamy. The railroad brotherhoods had urged reappointment of McManamy.

The same sub-committee is considering the appointment of Thomas R. Amlie, Wisconsin Progressive, to an I. C. C. vacancy, but Johnson declined to say when the committee will act. A recent poll of the Senate, for the leadership, reputedly showed Amlie cannot be confirmed.

Driver Sentenced To Six Months In Hit-Run Case

A six-month sentence for hit-run driving was pronounced yesterday by Judge Newman in Traffic Court on Roosevelt Joseph, 28, colored, of 118 Pierce street northwest. Joseph was found guilty of leaving a colored pedestrian lying severely injured at New Jersey avenue and O street northwest Sunday.

The victim, Walter Wilson, 47, of the 1200 block Seventh street northwest, is confined to Freedmen's Hospital with a fractured skull and leg and body injuries.

Joseph was arrested a few hours after the accident by Private W. J. Webb, of the Second Precinct, who obtained the license number from a witness.

U. S. Noteholders Offered Choice

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday that holders of the $1,293,714,200 of 2¼ per cent notes to be refunded March 15 would be offered their choice of a 2¾ per cent 1960-65 bond, a 2½ per cent 1950-52 bond or a 1⅛ per cent note maturing December 15, 1943.

He revealed that these securities, now selling at substantially above par, probably would be offered at a premium.

JAMES KIMBALL

He Has Nothing Against Jazz, but There Wasn't Any When He Adopted The Odd-Looking Horn in 1879

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

One of the busiest saxophonists in town today is a chap of 81 who has been playing the same instrument since 1881. Both musician and horn were never "hotter," though their combined age is 139 years.

But James M. Kimball professes to be no answer to a jitterbug's prayer, even if the instrument of his choice happens to be an indispensable ingredient of swing music. When he goes to town it is on nothing more violent than "Headin' for the Last Roundup," rather than the dementia praecox variety of number involving fish, flat feet or a patriarch named Mose.

"It isn't that I'm prejudiced against jazz," says Mr. Kimball, who, in point of continuous service, is probably this country's oldest player of an instrument which fairly epitomizes the thing he says he is not prejudiced against.

"When I took up the saxophone back in 1879 there was no jazz. In fact, there weren't any American-made saxophones. When jazz came along I stuck to the kind of music I'd been playing for years. But I don't have anything against it, no indeed."

Plays at Religious Services

Mr. Kimball is a member of the five-piece orchestra that plays at religious services every Sunday for railroad men at Union Station. He is a member of the Rebew orchestra, which plays regularly at church services. He reckons he has played in more churches and Y. M. C. A.'s throughout the country than any other saxophonist, past or present. What with rehearsals, concerts and home solos for visiting friends, it's got so he looks half-dressed when that good old faithful sax of his isn't raised to his mouth.

Born into a musical family, he was well grounded in the fundamentals on that day nearly 60 years ago when he and his father visited an instrument exhibition in Boston. They listened in curiosity to a man playing a French-make, odd-looking curved horn with a reedy sound that they had never seen or heard before.

"Father, I am going to learn to play one of those things," said young James, even before he had found out the name of the contraption.

He did, on a rented model. Two years later he bought the B-flat tenor, also of French manufacture, which he is still using today. That is what he's tooting on in the accompanying picture. In the same year—1881—he played in the first saxophone trio ever to tickle the ears of the Back Bay country.

A Lumberman by Trade

A lumberman by occupation—he has never attempted to make music his livelihood—Mr. Kimball has lived in many places and in all of them he joined a local band or orchestra. If one did not exist, he organized his own aggregation. A mere 25 years ago he acquired a baritone saxophone, much larger than the tenor, on which he still doubles.

In 1926 he moved to Washington and he had scarcely got unpacked when he was rehearsing with an orchestra. A member of the Odd Fellows, he plays at lodge functions occasionally.

Mr. Kimball, who lives at 2026 Evarts street northeast, spends the summers at his old home in Massachusetts. The local band would not be complete without his cadenzas.

Second Hotel Picketed in Row With 13

Over 100 Walk Out At Roger Smith; Unionists Threaten Further Action

Striking bartenders, cooks, bellboys and waitresses yesterday threw picket lines around a second Washington hotel as their leaders threatened "further action" unless 13 leading hotels meet union demands.

More than 100 employes walked out from the Roger Smith Hotel early in the dinner hour. Dining room service was suspended 45 minutes, but later last night Daniel Wathe, manager, said the hotel "is doing business as usual."

At the Ambassador Hotel, where 140 employes struck Tuesday, the management asserted that "service is absolutely normal." Police details were assigned to both hotels.

Representatives of employers and strikers—who established no contact during the day—both told The Post that all 13 hotels are equally involved in the dispute. The strike began at the Ambassador, according to James McNamara, vice president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance and Bartenders League of America, "because it had to begin somewhere."

Asked whether he expected more walkouts, a hotel spokesman said, "How do I know? The only notice the Roger Smith had was the Ambassador strike. I suppose we've all had that much notice."

McNamara said that nearly 1,000 hotel employes, attending a meeting last night at 429 Eleventh street northwest, pledged support to the union leadership in its threat to "pull out of more hotels" if employers refuse their demands.

A statement by the 13 hotels that "the only issue is that of a closed shop" was termed misleading by McNamara, who said, "They want the uncontrolled right to hire and fire and you see we can't give in to that."

Other demands include wage increases, vacations on pay and time-and-a-half for overtime, he explained, adding, "some of them want to give us time-and-a-third for overtime—you'd think we were living 20 years ago."

Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the hotels, asserted that "negotiations never went beyond the question of a closed shop. The other points never came up because the union representatives simply left the meeting Monday when we said we didn't feel we could consent to a closed shop. They gave no notice of a strike. We came prepared to negotiate, but they demanded a closed shop and were not willing to discuss anything else."

Possible C. I. O. support for the striking A. F. of L. unionists was hinted in the reply to a telegram sent by McNamara, appealing to "our brothers in the C. I. O. for whatever help they may be able to give."

Sidney Katz, secretary of the Washington Industrial Unions Council, promised that "the C. I. O. will take action, and I feel it will be supporting action, at the forthcoming council meeting" on Monday. Stating that this was the second request received from A. F. L. unions in the past two weeks, Katz viewed it as "a good sign."

100 Delegates To Attend Diocese Convocation

More than 100 delegates from Episcopal churches in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties will attend the annual northern convocation of the Washington Diocese tomorrow at the All Saints Church, Chevy Chase.

The Rev. Richard W. Aselford, of Grace Episcopal Church, Silver Spring, will be dean of the convocation. The program will include addresses by Canon Precentor William M. Bradner, of the Washington Cathedral; Mrs. Francis C. Wallace, vice president of the Women's Auxiliary of Montgomery County, and the Rev. Vincent H. Gowen, former missionary to the Philippines. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, rector of the All Saints Church, will welcome the visiting delegates.

Between the afternoon and night sessions, a supper will be served by ladies of the church.

Pan American Union to Choose Women's Leader

The governing board of the Pan American Union took formal action yesterday which apparently paved the way for ending after May 31 the ten-year chairmanships of the Inter-American Commission of Women held by Miss Doris Stevens.

The resolution requested the 21 American republics to transmit to the union by that date the names of their representatives on the commission, and provided that the governing board thereafter name one of the members chairman.

The State Department is expected to submit the name of Miss Mary Winslow, whose selection by President Roosevelt has aroused a controversy among groups of women.

George Abbott Leaves Record on Broadway

Goes South With Four Hits Running at Once; The Barrymores Are Coming to Washington; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

FROM TIME TO TIME this column has celebrated the peculiar acumen that seems to characterize George Abbott's activities in the theater. It has pointed out that he has an "acting company" that includes a surprising number of players who never have appeared under any other auspices and that he seems able to keep an unprecedented number of attractions running successfully on Broadway and throughout the country simultaneously. Now the thing seems to come to a head, in a manner of speaking.

BELL

Mr. Abbott, as is his wont at about this time of year, has hied himself off to Florida for a vacation. In his wake he has left a remarkable record of achievement for the current season. He has left four substaptial hits running on Broadway all at the same time—"What a Life," at the Mansfield Theater; "The Boys From Syracuse," at the Alvin; "The Primrose Path," at the Biltmore, and "Mrs. O'Brien Entertains," at the Lyceum. Some 400 people are employed in the casts and staffs of the four productions. Nobody is kicking, except the office staff, which has to make up the social security returns.

It will be recalled by those who saw it that one of the major dramatic "punches" of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film revelation of the life of "The Great Ziegfeld" was that, after having been stigmatized by Broadwayites supposedly "in the know" as a producer who was "washed up," he confounded their joint judgment by having three successful musicals running on Broadway at the same time. That was, of course, true. It was looked upon as a sensational achievement. Mr. Abbott now seems to have gone that record one better.

Quite a fellow in the theater, this Mr. Abbott.

We had something to say here yesterday concerning the "comeback" of Anotonio Moreno in "Ambush," at the Metropolitan, beginning tomorrow. He is not the only one who is hitting the comeback trail. Polly Moran, twice a star on her own account and remembered for her co-stellar appearances with the late Marie Dressler, also is importantly cast in this subject, starring Gladys Swarthout—songless on the screen for the first time—and Lloyd Nolan, recently seen to high advantage with Dorothy Lamour in Paramount's "St. Louis Blues." And more surprising than either of these "comebacks" is the fact that in the same picture—meaning "Ambush"—Ernest Truex appears as a "heavy." Mr. Truex, as everybody knows, was for decades known as the theater's "perpetual juvenile." He never aged a minute from the days of "The Dummy" and "The Good Little Devil," with Mary Pickford under the management of the late David Belasco, until he appeared at Loew's Capitol not so long ago in one of Gene Ford's musical comedy productions. So now he is a "villain." Maybe tempus does fugit, but it has taken a long time getting about it!

Kay Kyser, his famous orchestra and the "Kyser College of Musical Knowledge" will be presented at the Earle Theater as headliner of the stag bill for the week of March 31, according to announcement made yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette of the Warner Brothers' interests in the Washington territory.

Prof. Kyser and his faculty will conduct sessions of the "Kyser College" on the Earle stage for seven days, with a group of students being quizzed at each performance. It should be fun.

Still another distinguished name is added to the notable list of guests who will be present at the world premiere of "The Spirit of Culver," at RKO-Keith's Theater tonight. Col. Frederick Lee Hunt, who has just retired as chairman of the faculty and head of the academic department of Culver, after 38 years of service at the Indiana Military School, is in the National Capital visiting his brother-in-law, John H. Edwards, former assistant secretary of the Treasury. Col. Hunt has accepted Manager Hardie Meakin's invitation to occupy a place of honor among the guests who will be in attendance tonight when Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew demonstrate on the screen precisely what "The Spirit of Culver" is.

And there comes a letter from Howard Herrick, one of the most erudite of the theater's stentors, whose talents are invariably devoted only to the better things of the stage, saying that John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie will play the National Theater in this city the week of March 27, in "My Dear Children." Mr. Herrick has had the characteristic thoughtfulness to send along clippings to indicate that "My Dear Children," now in rehearsal, is going to be quite a play, with Mrs. Barrymore playing the part of her husband's daughter—speaking in terms of private life, of course.

"This should be one of the outstanding attractions of this season and I feel sure that Washington will extend a very warm welcome to John Barrymore on his return to the legitimate stage," says Mr. Herrick. Quite so.

The Washington engagement of "My Dear Children" will follow preliminary performances at Princeton and in Wilmington.

So the Variety Club of Washington is stepping out tonight with another bingo party in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel. Admission will be free, with tickets available from practically any member of Variety or at the door—or maybe you won't need any at all. Door prizes, cash prizes, surprises and all manner of unusual entertainment are held out as inducements for those who enjoy an evening of fun, mixed with a chance to make a profit.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 1 (I.N.S.).—Producers can stop now casting Gary Cooper in their best pictures because Sam Goldwyn has taken steps to see that the former Montana cowboy stays right on the home lot. After reading that Gary was wanted for "Triumph Over Pain," at Paramount, "The Wright Brothers" at Warners, "Mr. Deeds Goes to Washington," at Columbia etc., etc., the dynamic Sam got on his high horse, called Gary into his office and gave him a new contract which prevents his going to any other studio.

LOUELLA PARSONS

So come the twenty-third of March and "Beau Geste" all finished, Gary starts work in "The Real Glory," (alias "The Last Frontier") with Andrea Leeds as his leading lady and Henry Hathaway, who directed so many of his Paramount pictures, megaphoning. While on the Goldwyn lot, I dropped in to see James Roosevelt, who was working as hard as if he didn't have a father in the White House.

Wandering further about the Goldwyn Studio, I dropped into a projection room where Willy Wyler was editing "Wuthering Heights." I happened in on the death scene played by Merle Oberon and I tell you she gives a performance that is breathtaking. The story is a daring one to attempt, and thank goodness it is different. Laurence Olivier is terrific. Wonder why we ever thought he looked like Ronald Colman. And Geraldine Fitzgerald is certainly the answer to the producers' prayers. She has a Katharine Hepburn quality plus a much warmer personality. David Niven is good, too. Sam must have thought so for he is giving him co-starring billing. David today was loaned to RKO for Ginger Rogers' next movie, "Little Mother."

Surprised today when I learned that Paulette Goddard is checking in at Paramount on a loan-out from G. W. T. W. Selznick. Paulette, who has had more ifs, ands and buts in her brief career than any other Hollywood actress, has been signed to co-star with Bob Hope in "The Cat and The Canary," which Arthur Hornblow is getting ready to produce. I talked with her immediately after she signed and she tells me that this doesn't mean she won't be in Charlie Chaplin picture, "The Dictator." That won't start before May, nad unless we have earthquakes, high winds or other acts of God, she should be through at Paramount by that time.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Dick Forans have again dated the stork and are looking for him in five months; Jack Benny's little Joan has gone into the hospital for an adenoid and tonsil operation; Lupe Velez, forgetting her socialite boy friend for the moment to dine with Shipwreck Kelly at the Beverly Derby; Edgar Bargen and Don Ameche are roughing it at the palatial El Mirador in Palm Springs; Nancy Carroll and Charles Grayson are again seeing eye to eye; Wally Beery, according to his pals, is carrying the torch for his wife. Inside information is that he doesn't want a divorce and is really sad about the whole thing; nice gesture on the part of Spencer Tracy to send Father Flanagan the gold "Oscar" he won at the academy dinner; Mary Taylor, Countess di Frasso's niece, set for a role in Norma Shearer's "The Women;" Sorry to hear that Joan Crawford's songs have been cut out of "Ice Follies;" Tyrone Power never misses a day telephoning Annabella on the set at M-G-M; Jean Parker and her bridegroom, George McDonald, celebrate three years of married life in Phoenix, where they were wed; Myrna Loy back on the Metro lot after being absent with a cold; ran into Sylvia and Doug Fairbanks visiting Doug's brother, Robert, on the Twentieth Century lot.

Sylvia and Virginia Zanuck, who had been shopping in Westwood, stopped in to call on Darryl, who stopped work to greet them, and Sir Adrian and Lady Bailey and her daughter; Dorothy Lamour showing her house guests, the Metzgers, of Chicago, the Hollywood night spots; Stanley Rose's friends are glad he was able to open his book shop again. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 1.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY DEWEY'S associates have confided that the sentence he'll recommend for Jimmy Hines will depend upon Justice Pecora's sentence of Dixie Davis . . . Before his arrest Davis had sent an emissary to Dewey, offering to surrender in return for a sentence of five to ten years. At this time, the story goes, Davis was plotting to get the $5,000 reward offered for his capture, by using an intermediary . . . There was a mixup, however, and the lawyer was apprehended before the arrangements were completed. Dewey will recommend a suspended sentence for him and Schoenhaus. And if Pecora extends leniency to them, Dewey's recommendation for Hines will be a three to six year sentence on all counts.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON N. B. C. conducted a television broadcast for the American Physics Society . . . Prof. Tate, head of the society, addressed his colleagues via television . . . The distinguished pedagogue stationed himself before the mike and the other apparatus and addressed himself to his medical colleagues: "I've heard of mike fright, but now, gentlemen, I'm tellivied."

PHILIP CHALEFF, who was spared from electrocution at Sing-Sing last month because he was a diabetic about to die a natural death, already is out of the hospital there—and is working at a prison job . . . Al Singer, the ex-lightweight champ who was reported by friends to be missing, is in New York, working for a dress firm . . . The New York Theater Authority halted entertainers from appearing as guest stars at the Casa Manana's $10-a-plate benefit show for refugees . . . Duncan McMartin, the Canadian multi-millionaire who had announced that he would sponsor an exhibit at the New York World's Fair, now has changed his mind.

MRS. PAUL MUNI visited the Rainbow Room Sunday night and started to sip some champagne . . . "I'd like to have some popcorn with this," she decided—but then was told that the Rainbow Room is one of the few New York night clubs where no popcorn is served . . . Undaunted, Mrs. Muni summoned a page boy, sent him to Sixth avenue for a five-cent bag of popcorn—and tipped him $1.00.

WASHINGTON'S BUREAUS are completing a uniform accounting system for all United States banks . . . The Citizens Crime Committee's report, regarding sex crimes, will be sensational, and no punches will be pulled. A supplementary report, which will follow, promises to be even more explosive . . . Joe Kennedy, jr., son of the Ambassador, was slated to be a member of the United States four-man bobsled team competing in the European championships. When he went off to Madrid, the other three Americans phoned the American Club in Paris and asked for any American willing to ride a bobsled in return for the trip. An impoverished artist volunteered, went to St. Moritz, and competed. The United States team finished fifth. The artist got a week's vacation.

DURING LAST WEEK'S cold spell, Sascha Gorodnitzki, the pianist, wearing white duck trousers, walked along Park avenue . . . "Hey, Sascha," a friend greeted, "Percy Grainger just got arrested in Wisconsin for wearing white ducks in zero weather. Do you concert pianists belong to a white duck cult?" . . . "Oh, no," the pianist confessed. "I'm just going to the armory—to play tennis."

ISAAC DON LEVINE, the newspaper columnist, is retiring from that field this week . . . Although William McC. Martin, head of the Stock Exchange, now is in Albany to protest against any increase in taxes on stock transfers, brokers still avoid the payment of any tax—when large blocks of stock are sold—by sending a messenger across the Hudson Tubes to Jersey City to make the transfers there . . . Prince Ibrahim of Egypt cabled to Charlie Lucas of the Midnight Sun asking him to forward a photo of the prince and Jack Dempsey . . . "As befits your station," Lucas cabled in reply, "am rushing photo first-class, special delivery mail" . . . "As befits my station," Prince Ibrahim directed, "put photo on fastest boat—and you accompany it across."

HARRY COHN, head of Columbia films, held another consultation with Rouben Mamoulian, who will direct "Golden Boy," and Lewis Meltzer, who will write the screen play . . . "Don't judge the scenario by the boxoffice standards to which all you producers are accustomed," Meltzer pleaded. "Look ahead and think what this new departure will mean. Mr. Cohn, be perspicacious." "My answer is no, for two reasons," Cohn replied. "Because, first—I don't agree, and, second—I don't know what it means."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 1.—I think we ought to straighten out the little matter of "I Take This Woman" once and for all. The impression seems to have gone out that Hedy Lamarr can't act. Also, that Spencer Tracy didn't want to play with her. The fact is Spencer would love to do another picture with her. But he never did like the story, or the part. Nor did Ina Clair or Hedy.

HEDDA HOPPER

If the picture had been released, it might have hurt the careers of each of them, because the story made each one a heavy. Hedy, because she made Tracy—a doctor helping the poor on New York's East side—give up his practice there for a Park avenue clientele.

Ina, because she wouldn't give Hedy a job when she needed it.

And Spencer, because he refused to make love to Hedy—because he thought she loved another man. Imagine that!

And that, my friends, was "The New York Cinderella," renamed "I Take This Woman." It was dreamed up, I actually believe, by Charlie MacArthur's diabolical sense of humor as a joke on Hollywood. Now his side-kick, Ben Hecht, is trying to make something out of the mess. But I give Metro credit for keeping it off the screen!

And Hedy, who only gets $750 a week, after all this, hasn't even asked for a raise.

In many quarters, the feeling persists that "Gone With The Wind" still may not be finished. Sidney Howard did a perfect script, Selznick approved. Then, after months, they thought it too long. Wanted Howard to cut it down. But Howard, who was about to become a father, said his mind wouldn't be on it, and declined.

Then Oliver Garrett was called in to cut it. He started a rewrite job instead. Then he was joined by Scott Fitzgerald, Ben Hecht and Johnnie Van Druten. Which seemed to frighten Cukor.

Gable was talked into it; also Leslie Howard (who hasn't yet read the book.) Vivien Leigh wanted "Scarlett" but now realizes she'll be here months—(maybe years.) And she'd like to go back to Broadway to be near Laurence Olivier, who's going into the Katherine Cornell play, "No Time for Comedy." You'll remember that's the part Kit Cornell wanted Bob Montgomery for. He had permission from his studio to do it, but it was later canceled.

Yes, Hollywood is wondering—also about Belle Watling. Why not Mae West—she's rehearsed that part for years, and good, too.

Hear that Leo the Lion is working on his Southern accent.

The passing of Tom Patten leaves a great void in Hollywood. Tom, whose father started the Patten Steamship Line, was himself a former Postmaster of New York. Brought out here years ago by Will Hays to help on the Fatty Arbuckle case—when they were in hot water with all the women's clubs. He did his job so well that, when finished, he was no longer on the Hays staff. Doug Fairbanks, jr., and many of our young players will miss his clear thinking, wise counsel.

Tomorrow night, blue blood will run riot at the Las Palams theater. Not only on the stage, where Florence Ryerson and Colin Campbell's newest comedy, "June Mad" holds forth, but in the audience as well. Among those present will be Mae Robson, Olivia de Havilland, Edgar Allan Woolfe, Bob Wagner and Gilmore Brown.

Among Henry Duffy's pupils and players, there's Shelly, son of Henry Hull, Bob Stack, Richard Bonelli's nephew; Bill Farnum, jr., Lawrence Tibbett, jr., Nina Clements, Mark Twain's granddaughter; Phyllis Brooks' brother Norman, and the author's son, Hal Clements.

Can you imagine the rush for autographs, when those proud parents turn out?

Within one week of an all-time local record for foreign films, "Ballerina" yesterday entered its fifth consecutive week at the Little Theater. One must go back 11 years to "Potemkin," which played at the old Little for six weeks, for the record engagement of a foreign film in this city.

Highly praised by local and national reviewers, "Ballerina" was filmed entirely with students and stars of the National Opera Ballet as the performers. Mia Slavenska, of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe; Yvette Chauvire, premiere danseuse of the Paris Opera, and Janine Charrat, a student of the ballet school, play the pivotal roles. The music is from Chopin and Gounod and is played by the orchestra of the opera.

Shaw's 'Pygmalion' Fulfills Prophecy of Sure-Fire Hit

Two Showings Required to Accommodate Crowds at Reserved-Seat Premiere; Begins Regular Palace Run Today

By Nelson B. Bell.

"PYGMALION." Gabriel Pascal picturization for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release of George Bernard Shaw's stage comedy, with original story and dialogue by Shaw, filmed from scenario by W. P. Lipscomb and Cecil Lewis, costarring Leslie Howard and Wendy Hiller, with Wilfred Lawson, Marie Lohr, Scott Sunderland, Jean Cadell, David Tree, Esme Percy, Violet Vanbrugh, Iris Hoey, Viola Tree, Irene Brown, O. B. Clarence, Wally Patch, P. H. Maltby, George Mozart and Ivor Bernard.

Directed by Anthony Asquith and Leslie Howard. Reviewed Wednesday night. At Loew's Palace Theater.

Every expectation of superlative diversion was realized by the capacity audience that packed Loew's Palace Theater last night for the reserved-seat Washington premiere of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of George Bernard Shaw's famous stage play of "Pygmalion."

Not only did one capacity audience enjoy the film version of a pungent and scintillant comedy. The house was so far oversold for the first performance that a second screening of the picture was projected at approximately 11:30 p. m., to accommodate those who refused to be disappointed on the night of one of the Capital's most noteworthy premieres. It would be a fair estimate, I think, to say that approximately 3,000 patrons viewed "Pygmalion" last night and reveled in its unique and numerous virtues.

"Pygmalion," as we have exhorted the public to believe for several weeks, is primarily humorous, exciting and frequently hilarious entertainment. For the most part, it moves rapidly. It is crystal clear in its characterization and both literate and philosophical, in a genial and understandable way, in its every line of dialogue. There are intervals, to be sure, in which Shaw becomes just a bit verbose and stodgy in his dialectics, but these periods of sustained verbal dueling are so rich in logic, flashing wit and dramatic value that the momentary abatement of physical action well may be condoned.

Variation on an Old Theme

The theme of the picture, as well as its title, is derived from the familiar myth of Pygmalion and Galatea, in which a sculptor fell in love with the statue he had hewed from marble. In the present play, a professor of phonetics falls in love with a guttersnipe he has transformed from an unkempt flower-girl of the London streets into a "lady," accepted in the highest circles of English society, because he has given her the accents of culture and the drawing room.

It all comes about when a miscellaneous group of Londoners are marooned under a convenient portico by a downpour of rain. One of these seeking shelter from a drenching is the bedraggled flower-girl. Another is Prof. Higgins, the master of phonetics, and still another, Col. Pickering, just back from India and a great admirer of Prof. Higgins' work. The flower-girl intrigues them both and Higgins makes a wager that within six months he can so disguise the lowly origin of the girl that she will be accepted in the highest strata of British society, on the sheer and single basis that she will sound like a lady.

It is upon that premise that one of the most engaging and most satisfying screen comedies of the season is formulated. The film play, as a matter of fact, is to all intents and purposes a carbon copy of the original stage version in which we reported Mrs. Patrick Campbell, at the National Theater, some 25 or 30 years ago—making allowance for the expansion of scene and the flexibility of which the cinema is capable. The amplification of scene is only an embellishment and in no sense an alteration of the Shaw script as written for the boards.

Flawlessly Produced

"Pygmalion" has been impeccably produced, directed and acted. Gabriel Pascal is resonsible for the production and will bring more of Shaw's plays to the screen. Anthony Asquith, Leslie Howard and Ian Dalrymple did the directing. The acting takes care of itself, thanks to one of the most judicious bits of casting that has come to American notice from the other side in recent years. By this, needless to say, is meant the inspired assignment of Wendy Hiller to the role of Eliza Doolittle and the selection of Leslie Howard to play Higgins. These two do a perfect job that should please even Shaw himself.

Wendy Hiller is a young woman with an amazing capacity for emotional and comic variety of expression. There seems to be no delicate shade of feeling that she is unable to express naturally and convincingly. Her facility extends even to the complete harmony of appearance and speech as her gradual emergence from the gutter to the salons of the elite is accomplished. By no means a screen beauty, Miss Hiller still possesses finely wrought features, a little on the rugged side; a deep intelligence and a complete command of the arts and artifices of acting that make her an ideal choice for the role in which she appears.

Howard at His Best

Leslie Howard storms and blusters through the full length of the picture with a vigor that he has not often before betrayed before the cameras. There are times when Mr. Howard portrays a totally unsympathetic character—as contrasted with the pathetic figure of the girl upon whom he has tried a slightly cruel experiment—but his performance must be set down as one of his best.

Scott Sunderland, as Pickering; Marie Lohr, as Mrs. Higgins; Wilfred Lawson, as the philosophical dustman, father of the heroine of the play; David Tree, as Freddy, and Esme Percy, as Count Aristid Karpathy, present sterling characterizations that place them far in the van among the supporting players.

"Pygmalion" is—or was last night—augmented by a Pete Smith short-reel, "Double Living;" a Franz Lizst musical romance, "A Dream of Love," and a new issue of "News of the Day." "Pygmalion" is a "must" for any discriminating theatergoer.

'Watched Pot' Affords Civic Lively Vehicle

Epigrammatic Comedy Amuses First-Night Audience at Wardman

"Brevity is the soul of widowhood" and "A fool and his hair are soon parted" are two of the briefest of the hundreds of epigrams that whistled as engagingly as a March wind through the Wardman Park Theater last night, where the Civic Theater opened its run of "The Watched Pot," Saki's only play.

The master short-story writer should have been writing plays yet, if last night's amusement were any divining rod. The world-weary found it a zestful relief from "social significance" and the worldly enjoyed the pithy cracks of a quarter of a century ago as though Oscar Wilde himself had written them.

Trevor Bavvel is "The Watched Pot" and watching him is a quartet of pompadoured schemers hopeful for a moneyed husband. Urging them on is a parliamentary-minded uncle. In their way looms a Victorian-minded mother, tightly gripping the silver cord.

While this gorgon is away, traps are sprung to settle this too-lengthy bachelorhood permanently. A clothes conscious young fop drops in, also anxious to settle the marriage so that he may become a somewhat langorous secretary to the politically-minded oldster. How it turns out is worthy of W. S. Gilbert himself.

It is the repartee which delights the audience and for which Saki very likely thought up his plot.

Your reviewer found the delivery generally excellent, but it is possible that in other parts of the theater some of the lines were not caught. On the whole the cast was fine, particularly Mannix Walker, as the would-be politico and Charles Grunwell, as the epigrammatic fop whose prodigal mother took too long a motor ride. Their parts had many laughs, and with trigger-like certainty they got him.

Anne Ives was the shocked grande dame, a part which did not seem as amusing as such stock roles frequently do, largely because of the refreshing depravity of some of the other figures. Elizabeth Seibert made a dither-headed lass of the vine-trailing Agatha and Natalie Core was an angling Mrs. Vulpy. Lansing Hall and Mary Jo Day completed the plotting foursome and Allan Squire was the smooth fish that was so hard to land.

The settings by William M. Girvan were unusually solid looking. On the whole, the Civic revival has shown that while daffy, comedy is nothing new, it is always amusing.

Richmond Is Cast With Cisco Kid

The brand-new long-time contract recently bestowed on Kane Richmond for his work in the studio's air epic, "Tail Spin," was put into use this week with the casting of the young actor in "The Return of the Cisco Kid," starring Warner Baxter.

Richmond, who plays the part of Alan, joins a cast which includes Baxter, Cesar Romero, Lynn Bari and Joseph Schildkraut, with others yet to be announced.

Herbert I. Leeds will direct "The Return of the Cisco Kid," which is an entirely new story of the escapades of the romantic Mexican bandit, the characterization which first earned stardom for Warner Baxter.

Belasco

Oh! La! La! Those cynical Frenchmen! In a slyly wicked morality tale, Maurice Chevalier returns to the local scene at the Belasco Theater in a film that has an even more decadent ending than Sacha Guitry's recently seen "The Story of a Cheat."

You may recall that the wily Guitry wound up not exactly flush in his delectable fable of the cheater who was successful when he was dishonest and a flat failure when he followed the paths of rectitude. But the charming Maurice never once bothers to do anything other than employ his unfailing charm and expert dishonesty to net him the plums of fortune.

He comes to Paris no less than a beggar, but by stealing a dog and later returning it to its rightful owner, he gains enough reward to pay some rent and phenagle a position as doorman at one of the music halls. From then on his ambition fails him no more than his far-flung smile—a smile which he flings at everyone with whom he comes in contact—and he winds up as M. le Directeur de l'Opera with his erstwhile boss—a scrupulously honest soul—as his secretary.

Chevalier Still Sings

While Maurice does sing (in fact his sung instructions to the little leading lady are one of the best features of the film), it is this irreverent treatment of the fates that makes "With a Smile" a typically Gallic film. The filming and the lighting are inferior, even for the allowance generally made for the less expert films of Joinville.

Besides Chevalier, "With a Smile" also boasts the presence of a piquant leading lady, Marie Glory, and the expert grimacing of the familiar Andre Lefaur. To the film-goer who indulges in pleasant nostalgia over the memory of the personable Maurice and who relishes once again the cunning thoughts of a slightly bitter Cinderella tale, "With a Smile" will be a pleasantly bright, if unimportant, film.

"C'a c'est Paris" in truth, at the Belasco this week, for the major short feature, is an interesting, slightly antiquated, visit to Paris. "La Ville Lumilere" is the title.

Lamarr 'Lost' On Studio Ride

After a scene with Spencer Tracy for "I Take This Woman," Director Frank Borzage told Miss Lamarr she could return to her dressing-room for an hour.

She vanished from the set and, a little later, a truck was hitched to her portable dressing-room and it was towed over the asphalt streets to another corner of Lot 2, where the company was to shoot later in the day.

Some time later Miss Lamarr emerged from the portable room and found herself marooned in an isolated forest of movie buildings. She had fallen asleep in the portable dressing-room instead of retiring to her suite in the Star Building.

Fields Nimble In Hoofing Bee

Although he's one of the real veterans of the stage and screen, W. C. Fields hasn't lost any of the agility for which he was noted 20 years ago.

Returning after lunch to the set of "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," in which he is starring, Fields found the entire company gathered around a piano which one of the extras was playing.

It was a hot tune that sent the comedian back to his old Ziegfeld days when he was quite a hoofer. So he grabbed Director George Marshall and started doing a fancy dance routine with him. When they finished amid great applause, Fields exclaimed, "I haven't danced like that for 20 years."

"Well you still have too much energy for me, Bill," laughed the younger Marshall.

Raft Former Pugilist

Legs, Hands, Teeth All Aids to Claire

Recently, Fred Datig, casting director, began a search for a girl with shapely legs to play a small but important part in "Woman Against Woman." Miss Owen won in a walk.

During the filming of "Dr. Jenner," last week, a call was sent out for a woman with beautiful hands to play the leading feminine role. Miss Owen, who used to be a glove model, won hands down.

Then yesterday Director Sammy Lee needed a girl with perfect teeth for an important part in the musical, "Somewhat Secret." Miss Owen simply smiled her way into this newest role.

G. U. FIVE HUMBLES PENN STATE, 42-29

Hoyas Sure Of Tie for League Title

Lions Appear in Confusing American U. Jerseys After Loss of Suits

By Jack Munhall.

Taking full advantage of Penn State's confusion at playing the first half in the uniforms of American University, Georgetown's determined Hoyas last night assured themselves of at least a tie for the Eastern Basketball Conference championship by scoring a decisive 42-29 upset victory over the invaders before 2,500 fans at Tech gym.

The victory was the sixth in nine conference games for the Hoyas who need only to beat Pittsburgh here Saturday to clinch the title. Carnegie Tech's surprising 54-50 defeat by West Virginia at Morgantown last night left the Tartans and Penn State in a tie for second. If Georgetown loses to Pittsburgh, either second-place club could deadlock the race by winning its final two league engagements.

No Jerseys Anywhere

American University played an unexpected role in the Georgetown-Penn State game when the visiting players showed up at Tech without jerseys and pants which had been left in the rear of their cab. Staff Cassell, A. U. basketball coach and athletic director, came to their rescue from his place in the stands and sent an urgent call for the needed equipment which was used until the missing goods were returne in time for the second half.

So, to the amazement of the impatient fans, the Penn State boys appeared on the floor, the rich blue and white of their own sweat suits clashing with the yellow jerseys with 6-inch letters that spelled American.

The poor satorical taste of the invaders shocked Georgetown's well-groomed team but had no other noticeable effect, for the Hoyas jumped into an early lead and easily chalked up their thirteenth victory against six defeats to push ahead of George Washington in their battle for city honors.

—Capt. Joe Murphy, of Georgetown, one of two players who were nearly rendered hors de combat in the rough game, paced the Hoyas to their surprisingly decisive triumph by pumping through five field goals and five of six free throws for a total of 15 points.

Knockouts Feature A. A. U. Bouts

To the customary accompaniment of blood and thunder, the annual District A. A. U. boxing tournament got under way last night at Turner's Arena before some 500 of the faithful.

Eleven bouts, fought at a lively tempo, accelerated by three knockouts, made up the card, and it was well received. All bouts were in the novice class, from 126 pounds through the lightweight class into the welterweight division.

The most peculiar knockout recorded was credited to Mike Blaso, of the Merrick Boys Club, who flattened Jake Kramer, of Pete's A. C., after 1 minute and 52 seconds of the first round. Kramer, after a fast start, slowed up and suddenly took a stiff left to the chin. The blow appeared to daze him, but he shook his head and apparently was ready to continue when he suddenly toppled—face forward—to the canvas. He was revived after several min-

Two D. C. Boys Win Jobs With Nat Farm Clubs

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—Sixteen-year-old Joe Lewis from the Washington sandlots, and Lefty Stockwell, Eastern High School youth, have won jobs on minor league league clubs belonging to the Nats, President Clark Griffith stated today.

Lewis, rated as a promising pitching prospect, will be sent to the Nats' Salisbury, Md., team, in the Eastern Shore League. "I promised his parents that I would send him to a club nearby Washington so that he could come home over the week-end," explained Griffith.

Stockwell, who came to the Nats' camp as a pitcher, so impressed Manager Harris with his all-round ability that the Nats will attempt to convert him into an outfielder or a first baseman. He will be signed to a contract with the Nats' Shelby, N. C., club in the Tarheel League.

Schmeling Sails, But He'll Be Back

New York, March 1 (AP).—Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, sails for home on the Deutschland tonight, but says he'll return to fight the winner of the May 25 fight in San Francisco between Max Baer and Lou Nova.

"I was promised that fight by Mike Jacobs before he went to Florida," said Schmeling. "It probably wil' be held in September."

Schmeling said he might come back in May and go to the coast to see Baer and Nova fight.

Asked if he was disappointed at not getting a match with Tony Galento, the German said:

"Yes. I like an easy fight, just as the other fellows do."

Stagehand Choice With Admiral Out

Riddle Star Officially Scratched From $50,000 Widener 'Cap

By the Associated Press.

Miami Fla., March 1.—War Admiral, recovering from a fever and throat inflammation, was officially withdrawn today from the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup Saturday at Hialeah Park because he could not be conditioned in time.

The announcement, forecast yesterday when the Admiral's illness became known, was made by Trainer George Conway today at almost the same time Douglas Geddes, supervisor of admissions, was announcing that all reserved seats in the grand stand had been sold.

With Stagehand, Bull Lea and Pasteurized still in the running, along with others, however, track officials expected a banner crowd and hoped the luster of Florida's leading turf event would not be dulled by the scratching of the horse whose picture adorns the covers of the programs.

Maxwell Howard's Stagehand, installed as the early favorite on the basis of his victory in the McLennan Memorial Handicap February 18, took a rest today but other Widener candidates were on the tracks for tuneups. Sir Damion, with Don Meade up, worked a mile in 1:38 2-5 and B. F. Whitaker's Mythical Wing went the Widener distance of a mile and a quarter in 2:08 handily.

Boston Bees Likely Neighbors of Nats

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—The Boston Bees will share Orlando with the Nats as a spring training base in 1940, it was virtually assured today by action of the city council.

The council voted to construct a new clubhouse at Tinker Field opposite from the Washington dressing room, and Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, predicted that the Bees would move into Orlando next spring.

Griffith has been in communication with Bob Quinn, president of the National League team.

Rookies May Displace Three Nat Hurlers

Kelley, Weaver and DeShong Uncertain Of Keeping Positions as Nationals' Pitchers Due to Poor Season

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 1.—The security of former years is missing for three veteran members of the Washington pitching staff (1) Jimmy DeShong and (2) Monte Weaver and (3) Harry Kelley, whose jobs are threatened by ambitious rookies in the Nats' camp.

The Nats' bosses, Bucky Harris and Clark Griffith, have already declared that six of the ten jobs on the Washington pitching staff are open, implying that the veterans must compete with newcomers for vacant berths.

Four Conceded Jobs

Manager Harris has not named the four pitchers to whom he has conceded jobs, but their identity is apparent. They are Joe Krakauskas, Ken Chase, Dutch Leonard and Pete Appleton. Krakauskas and Chase, the hard-balling left-handers are the pets of both Griffith and Harris who vision them as the nucleus of the Nats' 1939 staff following their performances last season.

Leonard is readily accepted as a pitching regular on the strength of his 1938 record, despite the fact that it shows 12 victories against 15 defeats. But there were times when Leonard and his knuckle ball were the only consistent winners on the Washington staff last year, and if allowances are made for the fact that the Nats rarely gave him hitting support, losing several games for him by the margin of a mere run, Leonard can be rated as the Nats' top pitcher last season.

Immune From Displacement

Appleton is immune from displacement because of his status as the best relief pitcher on the club. He won seven and lost nine last season, but his defeats were suffered chiefly when he attempted to start games. As a relief pitcher, however, he was a valuable asset, his yeoman work helping vastly to keep the Nats in the race during the first half of the season.

But DeShong, Weaver and Kelley must stage come-backs if they are to retain regular jobs with the club. DeShong, encountering his second dismal season in a row, won only five games last year against eight defeats; and for a period of weeks Harris dared not start him. Weaver, winner of seven and loser of six, may not be retained unless he learns

Notre Dame, Navy to Play In Cleveland

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, March 1.—Athletic directors of Notre Dame University and the United States Naval Academy agreed today to play their October 21 football game in Cleveland's 79,173-seat Municipal Stadium.

Capt. E. W. McKee, of Navy, and Elmer Layden, head coach as well as athletic director at Notre Dame, affixed their signatures to a contract sponsored by the Come-to-Cleveland committee.

The teams met here in 1934, and Navy won, 10-7. Layden said there would be a different story after this year's game, but added:

"We've got a lot of problems to solve between now and then. We've lost almost our full line. The first string backfield is back, but we are weak on replacements."

With Navy's coach, E. E. "Swede" Larson, the athletic directors then repaired to the wind-swept, lakeside stadium to visualize how many paying customers they could hope for this fall.

Griff's S. A. Hurler Enters U. S. (After Learning to Read)

Tampa, Fla., March 1 (AP).—Alejandro Carrasquell, 27, of Caracas, Venezuela, a baseball player who once was refused passage to the United States because he could not read, was admitted at Port Tampa today and left for Orlando where he will work out with the Washington Nationals.

William A. Reilly, chief of the Tampa Immigration Bureau, said the ball player was admitted after a $500 bond was posted to guarantee his return to South America. He said officials of the Washington club posted the bond.

Sabin Meets Tidball in N. Y. Title Net Play

Winner Will Tackle Bowden-Steele Victor For Indoor Crown

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 1.—Two aggressive, hard-hitting New Yorkers, with plenty of experience on the boards, scored straight-set victories today in the national indoor tennis championships to join two higher-ranking Westerners, newcomers to indoor play, in the semifinal round of men's singles.

The New Yorkers were Frank J. Bowden, beaten finalist the last two years, and Chauncey D. Steele, jr., former Columbia University captain. Bowden's greater experience and power enabled him to maintain the upper hand throughout in eliminating Morris Adelsberg, of Brooklyn, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4. Steele, behind a severe service and brilliant volleying, whipped John Shostrom, of Chicago, 6—4, 6—2, 7—5.

Tomorrow the Westerners, Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., seeded No. 1, and Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles, unseeded conqueror of Sidney Wood, will meet in the upper-half semifinal. Saturday the winner will tackle the victor in Friday's Bowden-Steele match for the title, which was taken last year by Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City.

The three top-seeded players and an unranked California "comer," Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, took over the semifinal brackets in women's singles, all with straight-set victories. Miss Betz put out the No. 4 seeded Barbara Nields, of Cleveland, 6—1, 6—1, while 27-year-ol' Norma Taubele, No. 1, beat her 56-year-old mother, Mrs. Rose Taubele, 6—4, 6—3; Helen Bernhard, No. 2, whipped Mignon Sommers, of San Diego, Calif., 6—1, 6—2, and Millicent Hirsch, No. 3, defeated Josephine Sanfilippo, of Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—2.

Richmond U. Beats N. C. State, 7 to 6, In Spring Grid Tilt

Raleigh, N. C., March 1 (AP).—The University of Richmond defeated the North Carolina State College Wolfpack, 7 to 6, in a six-period football scrimmage today.

Richmond scored as Quarterback Lew Fitzgerald passed from the 6-yard line to End Rip Collins in the end zone. Both members of the scoring combination were subs, and another sub, Clinton Moore, kicked the extra point.

Final Round Reached In Table Tennis

Archie Jones gained the final round in the upper bracket of the novice table tennis tournament last night at Chevy Chase Ice Palace, by defeating J. Stevens, 21—18, 21—17.

Caroline Wilson, 13-year-old entry in the women's division, reached the semifinal round in upset fashion. Finals and doubles will be played tonight.

Daughter Wins in Family Affair

Norma Taubele aids her mother, Mrs. Rose Taubele, after the younger member of the family won a quarter-final match of the National Indoor Tennis championships yesterday in New York. Miss Taubele, 27 years old, won 6—4, 6—3, over her 56-year-old mother

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 1.

I don't know where it's all going to end—the upshot of it all may be a berth in a lowly minor league—but it is a terrific build-up that Senor Roberto Ortiz is getting in the Nats' training camp here in the orange belt. Each day as he plummets his fast ball into the mitt of rookie catchers, the large Cuban is recruiting more hallelujah-singing converts to the belief that he is a genuine pitching gem and that it is the Washington club's great good fortune to have his name on a contract.

POVICH.

Fresh from the Cuban canebreaks, the big, unvarnished Ortiz has set astute baseball men gibbering wildly in their enthusiasm for his potentialities. Not a critic who has watched him has gone away unimpressed. He hasn't pitched a ball in organized baseball, in fact, he has never pitched any sort of ball game in his life, but he is being blithely compared to Walter Johnson and Bob Feller in the speed of his fast one, and today he was mentioned in the same breath with Dizzy Dean.

Ortiz, warming up in the bull pen, and pitching in batting practice, put on another one of his shows today. He was over the plate with a fast ball that literally sang, and he wasn't cutting loose. Visibly impressed was Rick Ferrell, the Nats' No. 1 catcher, spending his first day in camp.

Nats' Catcher Enraptured

Discreetly, Ferrell, with his catching hands still tender after a winter of loafing, did not volunteer to catch the Cuban, but he stood raptly on the sidelines as Ortiz wound up, uncurled and let fly. It was Farrell who discerned in the Cuban a pitching style that smacked of Dizzy Dean's.

"I don't know where he picked it up and it may be an accident," said Ferrell, "but he's a double for Dean if I ever saw Dizzzy. Look at his windup and delivery, same as Dean's. Look at the way he comes through with the pitch, same as Dizzy, Dean ought to sue him.

"If that delivery is natural with him, he's got a great start. No question about his speed. I can hear his ball hiss from 40 feet away. Only the really fast ones sing like that. And if he's green, you'd never know it from here. Looks to me as if he has swell "action." If he picked it up in the month he's been here he must be smart, and that won't hurt him. He doesn't need a curve ball if he can get that fast one over the plate. To the hitter, it shouldn't look any bigger than an aspirin tablet.

"No reason why he shouldn't have control. He's getting the ball over the plate right now. Downright amazing I'd call it for a kid who never pitched before. Look at the way he keeps his eye on the plate all the time. Even when he goes into his windup and his body is half turned, he's still got his eye on the plate. That's the right stuff. That's the way my brother Wes always pitches—never takes his eye off the plate, and no matter what they had to say against Wes they never could say that he didn't have great control."

Milan Adds His Praises

Came Ferrell's batting turn, and Ortiz was still in the box. "No, thank you Bucky," said Ferrell, I haven't seen a pitch since last September. If it's all the same to you, I'll wait 'till the Cuban's through. I don't want to go up there against him," the Nat's No. 1 catcher admitted frankly.

Seeing Ortiz in action for the first time also was Clyde Milan, veteran coach of the Nats, a big leaguer for 15 years, and one-time manager of the Washington club. He chimed in also with lavish praises for the Cuban's speed.

"What a guy to come up with," said Milan. "He'll handcuff the hitters in this league if he learns what to do with his speed. He has to learn a couple of things, though. His fast ball sinks, and that's bad. If he can get it to rise, he'll be awful tough. Every once in a while it does hop. That's when he gets in a way higher, that's all he needs to learn, starting his pitch higher when he lets go. Then he can't miss."

Clark Griffith already envisions Ortiz as another Marberry. There's nothing latent about this Latin, according to the Nats' owner. He already knows how to pitch, but such items as keeping runners on base may hamstring him. But because he can blow the ball past the hitter, Griffith is enthused.

Called Faster Than Marberry

"I don't know if he can go the route with the awful speed he puts on the ball, but he can be a great help as a relief pitcher," the Nats' owner was saying. "Marberry couldn't go the route, either, until he learned how to conserve his strength, but what a whale of a help he was when we needed a pitcher for two or three innings. This Cuban's faster than Marberry. He ought to be something to see when we put him in there late in the day after the sun goes down. He'll give those hitters fits with that bullet he throws."

There is no mention, ever, of farming Ortiz out to the minors for seasoning. The Nats' bosses want to keep him around on the theory that he can learn more about pitching in the higher-class environment of the big leagues, than in the minors. They are satisfied with his speed, his action and his delivery. They don't care about his curves. They are convinced that he learns readily. And today, to show his faith in Ortiz and to intimate that he will be around for a long while, Catcher Ferrell, at the outlay of a buck-fifty, equipped himself with a Spanish dictionary. Honest.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

We had the idea that the good old fashioned breakfast on which we were brought up and which we had been taught to believe was the very backbone of the Nation had become somewhat passe in these United States.

RUNYON

Probably the idea came of living in New York City and seeing the New Yorker make his breakfast off a cup of coffee and a piece of toast and then usually at a drugstore or lunchroom counter and always in a hurry.

Now that we think of it, it has been years since we saw a New Yorker eat what you could really call a breakfast. Indeed, we know many New Yorkers who do not eat breakfast at all, an eccentricity to which we have never become entirely reconciled.

We are speaking of course of New Yorkers who could afford breakfast, being well aware that there are many inmates of the big city who do not eat breakfast because they are unable to obtain any breakfast to eat and who would deem a cup of java and a bit of toast a matutinal banquet.

All for Naught

It has long been our theory that the willful skimping of breakfast could eventually bring about the decline of this country in that virility for which it has always been noted, but we learned at Jacksonville, Fla., the other day that our fears in that direction are needless. The old fashioned American breakfast still survives.

We got mixed up with a bunch of those hardy Florida crackers in Jacksonville and went to breakfast with them at the hour at which all breakfasts should be eaten, which is 7 a. m.—not p. m., as we sometimes practice it in New York. The reason we were up that early in Jacksonville was because our train pulled in at 6:30 and we were required to roll out of the feathers.

Right away one of the Floridians we were with said where will we eat, just as if it was the most natural thing in the world to be thinking of eating at that hour, and another suggested a well-known downtown Jacksonville restaurant. We went along figuring to do with a glass of fruit juice and a couple of cigarettes and rather feeling that it would have been more reasonable of those fellows to wait until at least noon before even mentioning breakfast.

The restaurant people knew the Floridians and as soon as we surrounded the table, a lady began bringing out great flagons of orange juice and platters of ham and bacon and eggs and grits and rolls and toast and brown piles of French fried potatoes and then tall stacks of wheat cakes with pitchers of maple and sugar cane sirup and pots of coffee and then we knew where we were. We were back among the home folks, mingling with the old-fashioned American breakfast that we thought had vanished forever.

Our Florida friends waded right in. It was obviously all just a matter of course to them, and as soon as we recovered from our first shock of surprise and repugnance at the sight of so much fodder that early in the morning, we started after them. There are some things that once a fellow learns he never completely forgets, like swimming, or skating, or eating. In ten minutes we had regained at least a suggestion of our youthful breakfast form and, going under the wire, we made it

Baer Facts

That's putting itself in the other man's place like the fellow who looked for the lost mule. He figured the place he would go if he was a mule and was lost. He went there. And there it was.

We are not only theoretical but practical. We'll get the right answer if we have to work until the blueprints turn old and gray.

Post Basketball Tourney Entries Close at Midnight

ON THE Line . . With Considine

Whizzer White, the Yank at Oxford, will return to professional football this coming season, we learned yesterday from an anonymous source named George Marshall. Davey O'Brien also will play.

CONSIDINE

The Rhodes Scholar is being snubbed at ancient Hertford College, a portion of the university, where he is taking l a w. The frost that is being put on him is not born of the fact that he is "in trade" as a pro football player. It is based on the presumption by his fellow scholars, that he insulted Oxford, and the importance of a Rhodes Scholarship, by delaying for a year his acceptance of the award in order to play football.

Like his brother Sam, who went to Oxford several years ago, the Whizzer is said to be suffering acutely from the combined ravages of homesickness and bad heating. His unhappiness and decision to return to football next fall—to play for the Pittsburgh Pirates—was first printed in a Swiss paper, for some reason or other. Since then the National Professional Football League, whose highest priced star he was last fall, has inquired into his case and satisfied itself that he will come back.

Davey May Turn Pro

Little Davey, who survived two months of traveling with Amon Carter to one testimonial banquet after another, is expected to announce his willingness to play pro ball in the near future. He has "permanently" retired from football in more than one statement, but his father has been making inquiries of late as to how much Davey (plus a ghost writer) could command as a syndicate sports writer, and Bert Bell's Eagles have been led to believe that he will indeed play—for $10,000 a year. The $17,500 offer from the American League is characterized by Marshall as being "a lot of bunk," a daring new phrase that is expected to be taken up popularly during the next few years.

Fred Perry, who next tackles Don Budge in that never-decided professional tennis finals, was in Washington recently to see about becoming a citizen. He is getting a little tired of paying taxes to both England and America, and he has never quite gotten over the shabby way he was treated by British tennis authorities when he returned to England as a pro. Certain officials who fought for the right to carry his racket, and who once offered him a fully furnished home in a swank section of London if he'd remain an amateur, no longer speak to him.

Von Cramm Next

We understand that Baron Gottfried von Cramm will be the next fellow to turn pro. That will be late this year. Professional tennis dies every year, and is resurrected only when a hot amateur joins the fold and plays the old pro champ. Even Budge's glamor will be peeling, after he beats Perry on this new tour. Next year they'll have to dig up somebody new for him to beat, and the plan now is to get Von Cramm built up as the next sacrificial offering.

It couldn't happen to a nicer fellow.

Tony Galento may become the first challenger in the history of boxing to be knocked out by a jab. It won't happen, of course, but it could. Joe Louis' jab—that orthodox trombone movement of the left arm—is actually a punch. It starts out as a kind of a push-off, but just at the end Joe manages to hook it a little. With that great, but unconscious, sense of co-ordination he has, his jab picks up speed and power in its last inch or two of travel. He actually "follows through" on it, subconsciously imparting hidden peace.

Anyone who has seen Louis fight will recall the strange jerk that now and then afflicts the heads of his opponents. He nearly floored Nathan Mann with a jab, catching him off-balance as Mann swung a punch. Max Baer told us once that his spine and neck muscles ached for two weeks after the Louis fight, from the countless shocking little jabs that Louis dabbed against his face.

Innocent Little Jab

Galento's face is an evil mass of scar tissue, badly mended cuts. Against an ordinary jab, which is nothing but a pillowed shove, Galento's face remains in one piece. But against Louis' innocent-looking but savage little jabs, Antonio's mush is going to spring more leaks than an American war-plane plant. He'll be bleeding, and listing to starboard, almost before Louis gets around to the business of fetching him the full-swinging punch that will close the career of the most pleasantly bogus build-up since the planned and regulated rise of the New York mob's fighter, Primo Carnera.

A.A.U. Clubs To Open Play On Monday

All-Stars Banned; Eastern Gym Scene Of Titular Battles; Facilities Are Best

If you are a basketball manager, coach, player or rooter and your favorite team fails to turn in a completed entry by midnight tonight, the club automatically will be eliminated from the biggest court competition ever staged in this section.

When the hands meet at the top of the clock tonight, all the teams that will play for the seven championships, plus the seven Washington Post Trophies and 14 A. A. U. medals, will be in line.

The A. A. U. office at the Boys Club of Washington, Third and C streets northwest, will be open for entries until the deadline. In addition, entries will be accepted at the sports department of The Post.

Due to the large number of teams seeking entrance, the supply of individual registration blanks has been exhausted. The basketball committee has announced, however, that clubs which have not been able to obtain those blanks will be eligible if they turn in their team entries.

New Supply Tonight

The new supply of registration blanks will be available tonight. They will be distributed to competing teams to be returned within the next few days.

Winfree Johnson, A. A. U. chairman, said last night that all-star teams would not be allowed to enter. Several teams have withheld their entry because of rumors that clubs of star players had been organized just for the tournament. Johnson brought out that the competition is only for organized teams and clubs and that the rules regarding college and high school players would be carried out to the letter.

Although a few teams have turned in their entries, the final line-up of clubs in the various classes will not be known until the entries are checked after midnight. More than 100 teams have received entry blanks and indications are that practically every one will see action.

The tournament schedule will be made with the co-operation of the managers of the teams. Clubs with league games or other contests that conflict will be booked on nights when they are free, as far as this is possible.

The best basketball conditions obtainable will mark the tournament. All games will be played at the Eastern High School gymnasium, the city's newest and most modern basketball court. With its indirect lighting, the court is ideal for both players and spectators. Dressing and shower facilities are the best and the location allows for almost unlimited auto parking.

The first tournament program will be conducted on Monday night. The tournament committee is arranging for a gala opening to which all holders of A. A. U. registration cards are invited.

At least three games and probably more will be on each program but the admission price of 25 cents will prevail throughout the tournament.

Facts on Post's A.A.U. Tournament

The Washington Post Trophy to each championship team. Official A. A. U. gold medals to every member of championship team. Official A. A. U. silver medals to every member of runner-up team in each class.

Scene of games—Eastern High School gymnasium, city's newest court.

Rules—Players must be registered in District A. A. U. Ten players to team. Players must have played two games before March 2.

Entry fees—Two dollars per team in the 90, 105, 120, and 135 pound classes; $3.50 in 145-pound men's unlimited and girls' unlimited classes.

30 Straight Games Won By Tavern

Frank's Tavern neared the all-time duckpin mark for consecutive league victories by winning a double-header, to make it 30 straight, last night in the Temple Minor League at Ollie Pacini's Northeast Temple alleys.

Frank's trounced Standard Brand in the first match, with Bill Greiner high, with 144 and 385, came back to down Stanton Barbers, paced by Harry Veihmeyer's 371. Ed Heller was the hero of the last game with the Barbers, with a spare and 5 count in the final box to win the game.

Senators gained second place, while Greyhound Liquor had high game for the night, 596, and Mario Kidwell one of the top sets, 373.

Lucky Strike Ladies

Edith Meredith accounted for a 139 game and 352 set to pace the Lucky Strike Ladies League, while M. I. N. had top-team game, 515. Social Security No. 1 lost the odd tilt to FHA but held first place on total pins.

Football Relay Features C. U. Track Meet

Frank Dobson, Maryland coach, blithely insists his Terrapins will walk away with the event. Dobson says he has so many fast men he can't yet decide among seven huskies. The Maryland entrants are Albaramo, Skotnicki, Brown, Krouse, Boyda, Smith and Brand.

Georgetown, which set the record of 1:14 flat for the 600-yard distance, is confident of repeating this year. There was a rumor that the Hoyas pulled a "fast one" last year by using spike shoes. The rules this year prohibit the use of spikes. The Hoya selections are Ghecas, Spencer, Harris and Kercher.

George Washington, a dark horse in the race, was designated as Nos. "336 to 339 inclusive" until the Colonials finally named their team. G. W. was planning to withhold its team and probably enter its choices as the "Masked Marvels." However, Bill Reinhart finally selected Vic Sampson, Ken Batson, Bill Richards and Paul Grady.

Catholic University's quartet is composed of "Wornout" Vidnovic, "Trick Knee" Shine, "Pistol Pete" Sachon, and "Pavlowa" Conlin. "Pavlowa" is a tiny gentleman of some 240 pounds, but they say he's very fast. Dorsey Griffith has decided to sink a couple of extra nails in the bleacher seats when Conlin starts flying around the curves. Dorsey doesn't want the seats blown from their moorings.

Sacred Heart's Midget Star Masters Coach

By Bill Burnett.

Like anybody who spends five minutes in the company of the fiery red-head, Coach Bob Dwyer is a whole hearted Pete Smith "convert." He's had a lot of husky 13-year-olds develop as rapidly under his basketball guidance at Sacred Heart School, but the minute cagemen is his favorite.

"Come here, roughneck," Coach Bob says. "You're going to have your picture 'took' whether you like it or not." The brutal talk doesn't fool anyone, however.

So Pete Smith, 42 inches of dynamic youngster, obligingly poses for the cameraman. The process interests him considerably, but his mind is on other things. In the middle of a difficult pose, he turns to Coach Bob and asks:

"Hey, we goin' to scrimmage tonight?"

Pete is the nearest approach to the funny paper's "Little Maxie" that Washington can boast. Alongside his buddies on the Sacred Heart five, he looks more like a mascot than a player, but he turns in points with the best of them.

Because of his size, Pete has a little trouble throwing a ball as high as the basket, but when it gets up there it's pretty certain of going in. On his real "hot" days, he beats his coach at a game of "21" from the foul line.

The public had its premier of Pete last Thursdya night when his team played in the preliminary to the St. John's-Gonzaga game. Had the feature clash not been so breathtaking the 4,000 spectators might have talked of nothing but Pete after the game. As it was, everyone remembered him as "that cute litle redhead who scored 5 points."

Pete plans to go to St. John's when his grammar school days are finished, as does his brother, another carrot-topped athlete who attends Powell Junior High. He wants to play basketball with the Johnnies, and if he keeps improving at the present rate he'll be one of their best drawing cards.

S. E. Community Title To Atchison Plumbers

Atchison-Keller Plumbers annexed the first half title in the Southeast Community Center Basketball League last night by defeating the Commissioners for the second time, 48 to 40. Wilson Earman, the league's high point scorer tossed through the hoop eight field goals and a foul shot for eighteen points. His brother, Charles, made eleven points.

George Smith, Center, Signs With Redskins

Cal. U. Star Was Regular Center in '37; Out Last Year With Injury

By Ken Harter.

George Marshall added the third name in three days to the 1939 Redskin roster yesterday when he received the signed contract of George Smith, who played regular center for the locals when they won the National Professional Football League championship in 1937.

George was unable to play last season because of a shoulder injury received in a game at Dallas, Tex., during the Redskins' exhibition tour after the 1937 season.

Smith, a hard tackler, is noted for intercepting passes and diagnosing the opponents' plays. In the championship game with the Chicago Bears at Chicago in 1937 he intercepted two passes at crucial points that material aided the Redskins in winning the title.

A graduate of the University of California, the coast lad will strengthen the Redskins in the center of the line no little. Together with Vic Carroll, who came along fast at the end of last season; Mickey Parks, of Okhlahoma U., who proved his worth as a defensive pivotman, and Bud Erickson, University of Washington star, who joined the team at the close of the season, the Redskins now have one of the strongest combinations at the key position of any team in the National Professional League.

The two newcomers added to the roster this week were Marcel (Red) Chesbro, Colgate tackle, who played with Don Irwin and Carl Brazell, Baylor University quarterback who will probably alternate with Frank Filchock in calling signals next fall.

Jack Espey indicated yesterday that the preseason ticket sale was advancing at a rapid pace. More than $2,200 were taken in yesterday and the Redskin bosses are confident the advance sale will reach $95,000. before the regular season opens.

St. Martin's Cagers Defeat PWA, 50-38

St. Martin's spirited young clubmen again scored in second half Heurich Amateur Basketball League play last night when they defeated PWA at Heurich gymnasium, 50 to 38.

D. C. Firemen upset Regal Clothiers, 43 to 33, while Hal Kiesel proved outstanding as Delaware and Hudson won over Trinity M. E. in an exhibition, 45-22. Kiesel scored 12 points.

PopWarner Named 'Advisory Coach' at San Jose College

San Jose, Calif., March 1 (AP).—Glenn Scobey "Pop" Warner, one of the "master minds" of football who recently resigned a lucrative post at Temple University, today accepted an invitation to become "advisory coach" at San Jose State College. Warner starts work next month during spring practice.

WARNER

The announcement was made by Dr. T. W. McQuarrie, president, who expressed delight at his college having acquired the services of a veteran of 45 years of teaching gridiron tactics.

Warner, who will have charge of the offense, will be associated with a former player of his, Dud De Groot. The latter played under Warner at Stanford.

Tournaments Top Saturday Pin Program

Handicap duckpin tournaments for men and women feature the week's card with three events listed on Saturday, the 'Dutch' Sherbahn, Lucille Young and 'Dub' affairs.

The fifth annual 'Dutch' Sherbahn sweepstakes at Takoma is expected to draw a field of at least 50 to battle for the top prize of $75. Entrants will receive two-thirds of the difference between their highest current average and scratch of 124. Entry fee is $5, including cost of games.

William 'Flick' Hurd won the ten-game tourney last year with a record 1303 total. Shifts in the two five game blocks will start at 2 and 7, and 4 and 9 p. m. Entries are being accepted at Takoma Queen Pin and Northeast Temple.

Kingston Downs Brewers, 52 to 28

Kingston, N. Y., March 1.—The league leading Kingston Colonials turned back the Washington Brewers, the circuit's trailers, here tonight by a 52-to-28 score. The victory was the twenty-sixth of the season for the locals in the American Basketball League. It was the Brewers' twenty-first defeat.

Frankel, leading scorer for the Colonials, put up his usual stellar game. The Brewers visit Wilkes-Barre's Barons Friday night.

Undefeated Army Boxers Face Terps

Visitors Boast Two Eastern Champions In Starting Line-up

The University of Maryland will have its own "carnival of champions" Saturday night at Ritchie Coliseum where the triumphant Terps—1939 Southern Conference champions—engage a squad of Uncle Sam's West Point pupils in the final match of the season.

Three champions will appear in Maryland's line-up in the persons of Ben Alperstein, Frank Cronin and Newton Cox, and Army will counter with two champions and one runner-up. Walter Lavendusky, 120-pounder, and Tom Shanley, 145-pounder, are Army's champions. Capt. Don Hull, 165-pounder, gained the finals of last year's Eastern championships. West Point, incidentally, is champion of the Eastern conference.

Maryland supporters will not have the opportunity of seeing West Point's outstanding heavyweight, Stella, inasmuch as Herman Raisin's illness has forced the Terrapins to forfeit in this class, but the remainder of the line-up will be intact. Army, as has been printed before, is undefeated and owns the most impressive record of any school in the East. Syracuse, Cornell, Yale and Penn State have fallen victims to its ability.

Others scheduled to fight for West Point are Walter Clement, 127-pounder; Harry Rising, 135-pounder; Dick Negley, 155-pounder, and Tom Ward, light-heavyweight. Clement, Shanley, and Ward are the only ones on the list who have met defeat this winter.

Greensboro Five Defeats Howard U.

Greensboro, N. C., March 1.—Howard University lost a hard-fought game to North Carolina A. & T. tonight, 47 to 39. The visiting Bisons were leading until the closing minutes, when the locals put on a spurt, to take command.

Cisernos' Terrific Rush Brings Hialeah Feature Victory

Sandy Boot Is Failure As Favorite

Warlaine Nosed Out As Wright Brings Winner From Far Back in Handicap

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., March 1.—Coming from far out of it with a cyclonic stretch rush, the Argentine veteran, Cisneros, got up in time to score a nose victory for Owner Nat Clyman in the Indian Lake (Grade C) Handicap here this afternoon. Saddled by Hirsch Jacobs and piloted by Wayne Wright, the invader was a well-backed second choice, paying $8.30 for $2. He completed the mile and a furlong in 1:50 2-5.

W. W. Adams' Warlaine, running one of his best races, surprised by holding on for the place, a half length better than J. D. Norris' Sandy Boot. The latter, which had no chance against such as War Admiral and Pasteurized and merely made up the three-horse field in that event, was a strong favorite. He had no apparent excuse.

Cisneros left the gate very slowly and was last of the seven starters for almost 6 furlongs of the journey. Warlaine meanwhile had broken away to a long lead and was going easily in front of Our Willie, Pompeys Pillar and Sandy Boot. Cisernos found his racing legs and began making up ground around the last bend.

Warlaine in Front

Warlaine remained well clear of the field as he entered the final furlong. He had disposed of Our Willie and Pompey's Pillar and Sandy Boot was making a desperate bid. Then, before the crowd realized it, Wright has Cisernos eating up the ground like a wild horse. His task still seemed hopeless at the sixteenth pole, but Wright never gave up. Cisernos poked his nose in front right on the wire. Sandy Boot would have been second in another stride or two.

A disqualification occurred with the running of the 3-furlong test for 2-year-old maiden fillies that opened the card, but it did not concern the winner. After J. E. Widener's Welding, the favorite, finished a head behind Napping in the blanket finish, the stewards ordered the choice's number down, blaming her for the jamming and crowding that ensued shortly after the start. Last Rose was moved into second place and Toast was awarded the show.

CAUGHT NAPPING broke well, went forwardly on the inside and, responding courageously when the final test came wore WELDING down in the last strides. WELDING and LAST ROSE settled into their strides rapidly, moved to the front while crossing before the field, but were bumping each other and approaching the furlong pole Hanford struck Yarberry with his whip and his mount faltered in the final drive.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:40. Off 2:43. Winner, Mrs. L. Phillips' br. m. (5), by Challenger II—Imagination II. Trained by G. S. Preece. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:12 1-5, 1:25.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STORY TIME, $8.60, $4.70, $3.80; LADY ORCHID, $5.30, $4.20; GOODWINE, $5.80.

STORY TIME, well handled, followed the leaders under light restraint to the stretch turn where he saved ground and continuing determinedly, wore LADY ORCHID down in the final drive. LADY ORCHID, quickest to break, went in close attendance of the pace on the outside, assumed command with a rush when straightened into the stretch, but faltered in the last sixteenth mile. GOODWINE worked her way up gradually on the outside and disposed of LADY SARA. The latter, a forward contender from the start, slipped through on the inside and took the lead on the stretch turn, but weakened suddenly at the furlong pole. WOWO, under pressure throughout, finished stoutly.

Daily Double, Caught Napping and Story Time, Paid $67.10.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:11. Off 3:13½. Winner, P. L. Kelley's ch. m. (6), by Distraction—Aphie Dear. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:12 2-5, 1:25 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DISTRACTIBLE, $4.30, $3.40, $2.60; SHE KNOWS, $5.80, $4.40; ICY WIND, $4.20.

DISTRACTIBLE, lacked early foot but began to better her position on the extreme outside of the field in the last three furlongs, and took command through the stretch to win going away. SHE KNOWS, prominent all the way, made a game effort and outlasted ICY WIND. The latter, going in her best form, went close up the entire trip and held on gamely when the real test came. HARPEN BELLE responded to punishment in the final furlong and was gaining at the finish.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:40. Off 5:11½. Winner, Fanfare Farm's br. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TERPISCHORE, $6.80, $3.60, $3.00; PATSEY BEGONE, $5.10, $4.00; MARFEU, $5.90.

TERPISCHORE broke alertly, forced a steady pace the entire trip, shook off PATSEY BEGONE entering the stretch and held away the remainder of the trip to win with speed to spare. PATSEY BEGONE, nearest in pursuit of the leader all the way, continued gamely in the final drive, but was not equal to the winner. MARFEU, prominent throughout, was unable to better his position. BLUE MARVEL lacked speed in spite of vigorous pressure and intermittent punishment and ran a bad race.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. The Indian Lake Handicap, Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:10. Off 4:11. Winner, N. Ciyman's b. h. (7), by Hechizero—Cantarela. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:38 1-5, 1:50 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CISNEROS, $8.30, $4.20, $3.00; WARLAINE, $8.70, $4.70; SANDY BOOT, $3.10.

CISNEROS, under stout restraint and a trailer until midway around the lower turn, gained steadily when placed to pressure on the outside of the field and, responding to punishment when the final issue came, wore WARLAINE down in the closing strides. WARLAINE held his opposition safe for speed and rated in front while saving strength, held on tenaciously when challenged, but could not stave off the winner's bid. SANDY BOOT, saving ground and under restraint until straightened into the stretch, made a bold bid, closing gamely, but not with his usual dash.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:40. Off 4:42½. Winner, L. A. Pike's b. g. *Flying Horse Farm-J. R. Macomber entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHATTER WRACK, $78.40, $26.70, $12.00; GRIEWRACK (entry), $4.50, $3.30; MANY MOONS, $4.20.

CHATTER WRACK saved ground rounding the first turn, went forwardly under light restraint until straightened into the stretch, where he closed with determination when placed to a drive and wore GRIEWRACK down right at the end. GRIEWRACK, eased back going to the first turn, swung around the leaders midway down the backstretch, took command on the stretch turn, but faltered in the last strides. MANY MOONS, rushed to the front, displayed good speed for six furlongs, but faltered, yet held the others safe. HARRY'S DREAM closed stoutly. MERVIN B. pulled up lame.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:10. Off 5:11½. Winner, C. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WINGED VICTORY, $24.60, $10.50, $5.70; THAT ONE, $14.90, $8.30; BEAVER COUNTY, $4.30.

WINGED VICTORY, going in his best form, raced GRAND LIGHT into submission the first half mile, drew out rounding the lower turn and maintained his lead the remainder of the trip under brisk pressure. THAT ONE gradually worked her way up on the outside and outlasted BEAVER COUNTY in the final drive. BEAVER COUNTY, sluggish in the early stages, responded to punishment through the stretch and would have been second in a few more strides. CHATTERFOL, hard ridden and saving ground, could never get up.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:45. Off 5:47. Winner, Star Mount Stable's b. m. (6), by St. Germains—Afterthought. Trained by J. M. Milburn. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REMINDING, $5.70, $4.50, $3.40; HI-TIDE, $5.90, $4.30; FLAG SONG, $3.30.

REMINDING, easily the best, went around the field with a rush entering the stretch, opened up a good lead and won as her rider pleased. HI-TIDE, prominent all the way, finished stoutly and easily disposed of the others. FLAG SONG, outrun early, closed a big gap in the last three furlongs and outlasted DALAMAC. The latter, dropped back on the stretch turn, came again under punishment.

At The Post

Hialeah Park, March 1.

Dear Al:

Eddie Arcaro has been signed to ride Pasteurized in the $50,000 Widener Cup race on Saturday. Don Meade could have had the mount, but chose Sir Damion. Trainer George Odom, who holds first call on Meade, is in charge of both horses and gave the meeting's leading jockey his pick. As has been announced before, Jimmy Stout will handle Stagehand for Trainer Earl Sande. Irving Anderson is slated to pilot Warren Wright's Bull Lea, while Ruperto Donoso will be aboard B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King.

Teddy Weed, if he starts, will have Ira Hanford, who won the Kentucky Derby with Bold Venture, in the saddle. Ronnie Nash will have a mount if Sickle T. faces the starter, and Earl Steffen appears assured a riding job on Francesco. Wayne Wright lost his chance when War Admiral was withdrawn, but may yet see action in the classic. I don't expect more than nine to compete. It was a tough break that War Admiral had to develop fever.

The Widener will net about $46,950 to the winner and that amount would have sent the son of Man o' War up several jumps in the all-time winning line-up. A victory would have moved him from eleventh place to sixth with Sun Beau, Equipoise, Phar Lap and Gallant Fox ahead of him. Stagehand goes into the Widener in twenty-third position on the list and if he wins he will move to nineteenth. It took Sun Beau five years to pile up his $376,744 in earnings for an average of $75,350 a year. War Admiral has averaged $90,713 for three years while Stagehand has a mark of $95,035 a year.

I have a communication from the Havre de Grace press agent which calls attention to the fact that the closing date for the four stakes to be run at the spring meeting is March 20. Those on the lookout for Clocker Mike are reminded that he is a keen follower of winter sports—craps, card games and slot machines.

BILL.

First race—Blue Covert may be the right one in this juvenile dash. Meade will do the riding and I still believe this is a good one. Brilliant Gold is the probable favorite, but must give the top one 7 pounds. Real Flyer for the show end.

Second race—Franco Saxon, another Meade mount, could take the lead in this sprint and stay there on his best races. I'm going to string along with the combination. Candy Prince is fit now and should be close. Moss Gal is better than generally rated and probably will make the pay circle.

Third race—Tutticurio probably needed that last and I look for a lot of improvement in this field. This is another probable winner for Don Meade. Bellum has plenty of speed, but may not fancy the 122-pound assignment. Eli Yale could forget to stop and be a serious menace.

Fourth race—Escohigh has downed as good as these and seems nicely placed. The short sprint route suits and I see no reason for mistakes. Lenpola is good and will be in the thick of contention. Ghost Train, despite high weight, could take it all.

Fifth race—Sugarage is a fair 3-year-old and figures to do a lot of hot-footing in this company. I'm going to take my chances. Speedy Booker should take down a good-sized portion of the purse. Donna Lopez for the show end.

Sixth race—I'm going to take Dunade in this field. Gets in with 111 pounds, thanks to the appearance of Apprentice Nash in the saddle, and I expect the combination to click. Saunderstown is real good and should be prominent despite the 116 pounds. She's Right and Little Miracle are possibilities.

Seventh race—Would Dare and Bow and Arrow ran a dead heat here. I prefer them in the order named for this event. Melody Maid has all kinds of pace-setting speed and could stick it out long enough to be dangerous.

Eighth race—Passing Eve and Motley, teamed as the Medway Stable entry, appear capable of adding another purse to the stable's string in this affair. Caught should take the place award. Macmac is reported fit and has a fighting chance to be higher than third.

Best bet—Franco Saxon.

Jockey Yarberry Suspended at Hialeah Park

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., March 1.—Jockey Warren Yarberry was suspended for the remainder of the meeting, effective Friday, and his case referred to the Florida State Racing Commission with the recomendation this his suspension be continued to April 8, inclusive, for grabbing Jockey Ira Hanford by the knee during the running of the first race today. Yarberry's mount, Welding, was disqualified from second position. Hanford rode Last Rose. Yarberry is under contract to J. E. Widener.

Atlanta Trade Rises Above U. S. Average

Georgia City Enjoys Unique Position In the South

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Service Economic Commentator

Atlanta, Ga., March 1.—In spite of political shibboleths about the South's being the Nation's No. 1 economic problem, Trade at this center appears to be running somewhat above the national average thus far this year.

Spokesmen for the leading department stores, including Frank H. Neely, of Rich's, and Raymond A. Kline, president of Davison-Paxon Co., tell me tha. thus far this year they have been running sharply ahead of the corresponding weeks in 1938.

Of course, as the headquarter city for national corporations operating in the South, and as a commercial, industrial and distributing point, Atlanta has sources of wealth and income which run vastly beyond the immediate agricultural hinterland, which has serious problems.

On account of this special position, Atlanta, despite its steady growth in population, has witnessed its trade grow faster than the local population. A recent elaborate economic survey made for the Atlanta Georgian indicated that the Atlanta economic area includes 1,051,615 persons, a gain of 290,000 since the 1930 census. Likewise, it has been estimated that the city population is 100,000 above the 270,000 reported in 1930.

Banks Loan on Character

James D. Robinson, president of Atlanta's First National Bank, told me that chief emphasis was placed nowadays on searching for additional loans. In order to encourage the supplemen ing of farm income through improving the livestock industry, the banks are co-operating to encourage livestock loans. John K. Ottley, chairman of the bank, said that his institution was ready to lend funds to any young farmer qualified to care for livestock, and had been making such loans to those characterized as qualified by the county agents. Mr. Ottley told me that there had been no losses on such loans made largely on character.

I asked John Sanford, president of the Armour Fertilizer Works,

N. Y. Central Shows $20,154,357 Deficit

New York, March 1 (AP). — New York Central Railroad Co. had a net deficit of $20,154,357 in 1938, compared to 1937 net income of $8,352,612, equal to 99 cents a share on capital stock, it reported in a preliminary statement today. Net railway operating income in 1938 dropped to $15,582,476 from $36,028,267 in 1937.

American Tobacco Reports

New York.—The American Tobacco Co. reported today 1938 net income of $25,435,642, equivalent, after deductions for preferred dividends, of $4.89 a share on common stock, compared with $26,197,493, or $5.04 a share in 1937.

American Sugar Refining Co.

New York, March 1.—The American Sugar Refining Co. in its report for 1938 shows earnings of 90 cents per share on the preferred stock and no earnings on the common stock. Consolidated net income was $407,088, as compared with $4,143,138. Dividends of $7 per share were declared on the preferred stock and 75 cents per share on the common stock during 1938. No common dividends have been declared since May 18, 1938.

American Radiator Reports Profits

New York, March 1 (AP).—Preliminary report of American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation, and subsidiary and affiliated companies for 1938 showed today net loss of $424,077 after charges, depreciation, taxes, etc., compared with net profit in 1937 of $7,205,510, equal to 68 cents a share on the common stock.

Greyhound Corporation

Greyhound Corporation, operators of Greyhound Bus lines, reported for 1938, on a preliminary basis, and including equity in undivided profits of affiliated companies, net income equal to $2.05 a share on 2,875,122 shares of common stock after allowing for dividends on the preferred. This compared with net income in 1937 equal to $1.85 a share on the same basis.

Canadian Bond Issues Decreased Last Month

New York, March 1.—Total offerings of new Canadian bond issues for February amounted to $4,606,500, exclusive of $25,000,000 Dominion of Canada treasury bills, according to the Dominion Securities Corporation. This compares with $85,064,500 in January and $22,981,098 in February, 1938.

The only issue of any size sold during the month was a $4,000,000 loan of 4 per cent bonds, due March 1, 1959, of the City of Montreal. These bonds, payable in Canadian funds and Dutch guilders, it is understood, were placed entirely in Holland. There were no provincial, public utility or railway issues during February, and miscellaneous loans amounted to only $561,000.

Chicago Trade Board Cuts Operating Costs

Chicago, March 1 (AP).—Economies in operating expenses of the Chicago Board of Trade were in effect today in all departments because of reduced revenues resulting from the lowest volume of business in grain futures on record. No figures of the reduction were made public by the board of directors, which met last night.

The economy drive was reported to have been the result of pressure brought by members whose income had suffered from the lack of business. It was reported some members had advised discontinuing the cotton and stock trading departments. But it was decided to retain them and reduce operating expenses.

Board Members Questioned as to Membership Cut

New York, March 1 (AP).—The 1,375 members of the New York Stock Exchange were asked today whether they didn't think they were just a few too many, and what would they like to do about it.

It has been exactly ten years now that the membership roster has stood at the present size, and proponents of reduction say there is not enough business in Wall street to spread sufficiently thickly over 1,375 members representing 650 brokerage houses. Edward K. Bartlett, jr., chairman of the exchange board, sent the members a questionnaire asking suggestions concerning reduction.

Many leaders in "the street" say they would like to see the membership reduced to 1,100 at which it stood for 50 years—from 1879 to 1929. It was in 1879, under the influence of a bull market, that the exchange increased the number of memberships by 40. The same condition in February, 1929, caused the next enlargement.

Bartlett suggested a reduction might be made by the gradual retirement of membership through pro rata contributions by other members or by the compulsory acquisition by other members of fractions of seats as such seats were vacated. In 1929, the record price of $625,000 was paid for one membership while there were still 1,100 seats; today the average is about $60,000.

Robert Seidel Heads Advertising Agency

Robert Seidel returns to the advertising agency business, after 15 years of service in the Scripps-Howard newspaper organization. He resigned from the Washington Daily News as its sales promotion manager yesterday, to become president of the Seidel Advertising and Publicity Agency, with offices in the Munsey Building.

He has been closely associated with advertising in New York City, Indianapolis, California and Washington. He won national recognition as the creator of the famous "three dimension" retail style of advertising.

Wheat, Corn Advance With Active Trading

Increased Buying For Trade and Export Aids Rise

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 1.—In one of the most active grain market sessions of the year, wheat prices advanced ½ to ¾ cent a bushel and corn rose ⅝ to 1 cent today.

The improved market action reflecting increased buying interest in both pits resulted from a combination of bullish developments. Millers, processors and shippers were more active. Exporters also bought some corn from local grain handlers and the increased business in c n helped to stimulate wheat trading.

Constructive factors in the wheat pit included strength shown by Liverpool, which closed ½ to ⅞ cent higher and clearing weather over much of the grain belt, although there were reports of more snow in the extreme Southwest.

Both wheat and corn closed at the highs for the day, May and July wheat at 68¾@68⅞ and 68⅞@69, respectively, and May and July corn at 49½@59⅝; July, 51@51½. Oats rose ¼ to ½ cent; rye, ⅜, and lard closed unchanged to 2 cents lower.

Stocks Close Lower After a Firm Opening as Volume Dwindles; N. Y. Tractions Rise on Bond List

New York, March 1.—Perverse as the weather, traders shied away from the stock market today just when Wall Street had thought the stage was set for a continuation of the rally. With buoyancy gone from prices volume retreated to the levels prevalent for most sessions since the first of the year. After a firm opening shares backed and filled in narrow movements to a dull and somewhat lower close. Rails, however, resisted the lower tendency stubbornly, holding recent gains in the face of selling by the in-and-out crowd.

Most oils, laggard in recent markets, made small gains and utility stocks were a bit higher as a group. Rail equipments, steels and stores eased slightly. Aircrafts were on the downgrade for the third successive day though losses in the division were small.

Bonds paralleled stocks, speculative rails showing less opposition to the decline, however, than carrier shares. Local tractions boomed on announcement that the city will pay $175,000,000 for the B. M. T. system, a larger amount than had generally been anticipated in financial circles. B. M. T. 4½s were up 3¾ on turnover of 607 bonds while some of the subsidiary obligations turned in advances of as much as 6 points.

Other sections were steady. Guilders dropped a little more in foreign exchange dealings where nearly all other currencies gained a bit against dollar rates. Wheat ended ½ to ¾ cent higher at Chicago. Cotton was irregular, closing 4 points off to 1 up after several days of improved prices.

Some Highs Recorded

At the best levels of the day a few issues recorded new highs for the year or longer. One was Adams-Millis, one of that select group which has been able to show larger earnings for 1938 than for 1937. Others at new tops were Continental Baking preferred, Deere & Co., Greyhound, International Harvester, United Fruit, Sterling Products and U. S. Rubber preferred.

American Sugar Report Gloomy

American Sugar Refining preferred dropped 2½ points and the common eased fractionally on appearance of the 1938 annual statement showing poorest results since 1924 with net profit insufficient to cover preferred dividend requirements. American Telephone was firm following overnight announcement of Bell System's profit for last year in line with Wall Street expectations based on the parent company's return announced about six weeks ago.

Steels Generally Steady

Steel common and Bethlehem declined fractionally but closed in each case substantially above the day's lows. Motors moved narrowly and ended without much change. Retail sales of motor vehicles for January were officially reported as 37 per cent ahead of the like month last year with slightly less than the seasonal decline from December sales. Chrysler and General Motors, both in the active list, gave up ⅜ and ¼ point respectively. Metal issues were dull and a little lower. Aviations were back in the active division, but were unable to reverse the down trend which started Monday.

Peoples Gas was up better than a point, a rise of more than 3 in two days. Westinghouse finished 1 down. Brooklyn Manhattan Transit preferred, reflecting sale prospects, closed at 42½, up 3 on turnover of 6,100 shares. Pennsylvania and New York Central were carrier issues which remained in the most active bracket. The former added a fraction and the latter gave up ⅛.

B. M. T. Issue Jumps

In a generally firm bond market, local traction issues reflected particular demand today, owing to the announcement at city hall that terms on unification have been reached with respect to B. M. T. properties. Turnover was heavy in B. M. T. 4½s, which jumped 3¾ points to a new high for the year, while bonds issued by subsidiaries of that company moved up 3 to 6 points. Interborough bonds were moderately higher.

Rail Bonds Gain

The market otherwise displayed a long list of fractional advances and a few larger gains. Speculative railroad bonds continued their improvement, but on a more modest scale than in the preceding session. The better rated secondary liens were taken up readily, but borderline and default rail bonds hesitated. Alleghany Corporation issues were quiet, while utility holding bonds developed fresh strength. Communications bonds and other special groups showed fractional improvement.

Treasury Issues in Demand

United States Treasury bonds and best rated corporate issues were in fair request, under the continued stimulus of a lack of new money borrowing by the Treasury. The small fractional gains in long-term Treasury issues resulted in 13 further highs. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also were better. A scattering of highs appeared in the leading corporate bonds.

In the foreign section good inquiry developed for Australian, Canadian and Scandinavian obligations, indicating a resumption of ordinary dealings in the London market. French and Belgian bonds were quiet. Japanese bonds improved, but the Italian 7s dipped a little. German and other European default bonds drifted idly, while Uruguayans were the only prominent issues in the Latin-American section.

Steel Output Hits New High For This Year

Prices for Second Quarter to Reaffirm Present Quotations

New York, March 1.—Evidence of moderate improvement in the steel situation is afforded this week by a rise in the ingot production rate for the industry of a point and a half to 55½ per cent, highest of the year thus far, and continued strength in scrap markets, though prices have not advanced, says Iron Age today in its weekly reviews of the industry.

"While the volume of new steel business has not gained to a marked degree, some of the steel mills have benefited from the release of specifications against orders on their books, particularly for construction steel, ship-building requirements and railroad material. The two major producing districts have gained rather sharply, Pittsburgh having gone up 3 points to 51 per cent and Chicago 2½ points to 56 per cent.

"Steel price announcements for the second quarter, which are expected this week, probably will reaffirm present quotations on a majority of products. The only change in base prices in prospect is a $2 a ton advance on hot rolled sheets, which would equalize the prices on the more common widths and gages of hot rolled, single pickled annealed with cold rolled mill run sheets, which at present are separated by a differential of $2 a ton.

"No change in pig iron prices is expected. Some producers will open their books this week for second quarter contracts. A reduction of $3 a ton on all grades of pig iron in Canada has no bearing on the domestic price situation.

Auto Industry Buying Dips

"The automobile industry is still taking fairly good deliveries of steel, some of which is against low-priced contracts for sheets and strip placed last fall, but its new purchases are confined to fill-in lots. This policy of hand-to-mouth buying may be pursued until present inventories of steel and manufactured parts near exhaustion, which may not be until the latter part of March. Assemblies of motor cars are believed to have passed their low point of the season. A rising trend during March may result in a total output of about 350,000 cars in the month.

"Railroad purchases have dropped off rather sharply, but the week has brought the largest locomotive order in some time, 40 engines for the Southern Pacific, 28 of which will be built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works and 12 by the Lima Locomotive Co. The Lehigh & New England has ordered 100 hopper cars, and there have been some smaller equipment orders. The Maine Central will purchase 500 cars, and the Boston & Maine may come into the market for as many as 2,000 box cars.

"Following a few weeks of extreme dullness, fabricated structural steel contracts have gained a little, totaling about 19,500 tons for the week. New projects out for bids total nearly 18,000 tons."

Cotton Futures Dip 1 to 4 Points

New York, March 1 (AP).—After a moderate extension of Tuesday's rise, cotton moved down the scale under a little selling and closed off 4 points to 1 point up. The market's inability to push higher in the more favorable atmosphere that has been spreading in marketplaces in the last few days led professional operators to liquidate long cotton and brought selling from the South.

Some pressure also resulted from the issuance of 25 additional notices against March contracts, but later it was reported they had been stopped by spot firms. Early foreign buying of July tapered off when prices began to soften.

New season's highs were posted for the September and October cottonseed oil options today as the current recovery move continued. Closing prices were 2 to 5 points net higher, influenced by reports of good demand for cash oil and vegetable shortening, plus firm crude oil levels. Sales totaled 288 lots: March, *7.05; May, 7.21; July, 7.30; September, *7.39; October, *7.40. Crude oil sold at 6 cents in the Southeast and Valley and 5¾ in Texas.

100 Stocks Advance 3.1% in February

New York, March 1.—The market value of 100 representative common stocks advanced $560,784,000, or 3.1 per cent in the month of February, according to the regular monthly compilation issued by Frazier Jelke & Co. The 100 issues at the end of the month were appraised at $18,178,465,000 compared with $17,617,681,000 on January 31.

Eleven of the components of the index registered gains, while two showed small declines. The upward movement in stocks was most pronounced in the utilities, which rose 8.7 per cent, closely followed by the steels, which added 7.7 per cent, the foods, which increased 7.3 per cent and the rails, which gained 7 per cent. The smallest gain was recorded by the industrials, which rose but 0.9 per cent.

Rails Report Income Gains For January

Class 1 railroads of the United States in January had a net railway operating income of $32,890,711, which was at the annual rate of return of 2.40 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Association of American Railroads and made public yesterday. In January, 1938, their net railway operating income was $7,144,036 or 0.52 per cent on their property investment.

Gross operating revenues for January totaled $305,768,767 compared with $279,108,385 for January, 1938, an increase of 9.6 per cent. Operating expenses amounted to $232,946,450 compared with $232,565,356 for the same month in 1938, a gain of 0.2 per cent.

Retail Automobile Sales Gain 37 Per Cent

New York, March 1 (AP).—Automobile and truck sales at retail during January totaled 217,796 units, the Automobile Manufacturers Association reported today, a gain of 37 per cent over the like month a year ago.

The latest total, however, was 22 per cent under sales for December, a more than seasonal decline, according to the trade. Truck sales for January increased slightly over the previous month, passenger cars accounting for all of the dip.

Auto Output To Gain 33% Survey States

But Public Buying Power Expected to Show Decrease

New York, March 1.—If fundamental conditions which have prevailed since the beginning of 1939 remain unchanged, the normal amount of funds available for the purchase of automobiles this year will be slightly smaller than in 1938, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Not only will the consumers' total income be smaller but the proportion of their income which they normally use for buying automobiles will also show a decrease.

Only the development of some inflation will improve this outlook. Although the prospective continuation of Government deficit-spending suggests the possibility of such a development, the fact that there is yet no sign of it makes it too uncertain to look for improvement from this source. The only course to follow at the present time, therefore, in making an estimate of automobile production in 1939, is to assume that no inflationary movement will develop.

Automobile prices at present are below the 1938 average, but the reduction is too small to offset the indicated curtailment of funds normally available for the purchase of automobiles. The prospect is that current automobile prices will be relatively well maintained throughout the year, since there is little indication that prices can be cut to any great further extent.

Without a further drop in the prices of materials, it is apparent that automobile manufacturers cannot do much toward a further lowering of their costs since there is little indication that cheaper labor will be obtainable in the near future. This situation exists despite the fact that wage rates in the automobile industry are above the 1938 average and consequently at a record high level.

These conditions, which prevail at the present time, point to a combined export and domestic normal demand of 2,985,000 automobiles in 1939, or slightly less than the 1938 normal of 3,002,000 cars. The prospect is, however, that actual production in 1939 will be considerably larger than in 1938 since the output was subnormal last year, while this year it is likely to be abnormally high. A natural rebound from last year's subnormal level is not the only factor pointing to an output in excess of normal this year. Another factor is the prospect that replacement requirements this year will be unusually large.

The outlook is, however, that unless inflation develops, the highest figure which automobile production is likely to attain in 1939 is 3,312,000 cars. Although such an output would be 33 per cent larger than the 1938 production of 2,490,000 cars, it would represent a smaller volume than in any prior year since 1934.

Stock Seat $62,000, Advance of $2,000

New York, March 1 (AP).—Arrangements were made today for the transfer of a membership in the New York Stock Exchange for $62,000, a rise of $2,000 from the last transaction, which was the low r 1933.

Prices of exchange memberships reached a 20-year low last June 15 when one sold at $51,000.

to conceal his pitches. Five clubs in the league accurately "called" Weaver's pitches before he delivered them last season and that practice may be even more widespread.

The young men who will be pressing Weaver, DeShong and Kelley for their jobs are Arnold Anderson, big right-hander from Charlotte, who is florid, red-headed double for the Yankees' big Charley Ruffing, in appearance; Tom Baker, the rookie gained from the Giants in the Bonura deal, who needs only to develop his control to be a winner; Walter Masterson, the brilliant Philadelphia sandlotter; Joe Hayes, curve-ball artist of the Charlotte club and a 26-game winner last year; Bob Garner, elongated Eastern Shore Leaguer, and Bucky Jacobs, clever right-hander from Charlotte.

And not to be counted out is Roberto Oritz, the big Cuban, whose speed has intrigued everybody at the Nats' camp.

Police Stop 19 Using 1938 Auto Tags

Conflicting Deadlines Puzzle Those Moved From D. C. to States

Police began making arrests on a large scale yesterday of motorists driving with illegal license tags. They made an interstate haul of 19 that included a lawyer who was so mystified by conflicting District and Maryland license laws he hadn't been able to decide what to do; a Washington housewife who said she didn't know it was time to get new tags, and a Virginia motorist who was caught in a jam similar to that of the man from Maryland.

Many were like Edward J. Fruchtman, of Glen Echo Heights, Md., a lawyer employed by the Wage-Hour Administration. He hadn't been able to see the justice in buying 1938 Maryland tags to cover the period between February 28 and March 15, the date when 1939 Maryland tags can be used for the first time.

However, as motorist after motorist was required by the District police to post $10 collateral for driving with dead tags, Lyman M. Kelley, in charge of distribution of tags for Arlington, Va., reported there were 23 applications for 1938 tags yesterday and 68 applications the day before. Their average cost was $6.

Maryland Plans Arrests

Maryland reported 1938 tags would cost 8 cents per horsepower, covering any period from one day to three months. Motorists driving with dead District tags in that State will be arrested, the State police warned. Walter Rudy, sr., Maryland commissioner of motor vehicles, reported slight increase in applications for 1938 tags.

Sheriff Howard B. Fields, of Arlington County, Va., proposed the District Commissioners extend the time so as to make the expiration date uniform with Virginia and Maryland. There is nothing we can do here in Virginia," he added.

At the District building it was stated the time is set by Congress, and the Commissioners have no discretion in the matter.

The first person to be arrested was Mrs. Catherine E. Murphy, of 5618 Eighth street northwest. She said she did not know it was time to get new tags.

Ware Cattell, of 2414 Rodman street northwest, stopped as he was driving his children to school in Alexandria, made the same explanation.

Others Stopped

Others stopped by police were Grace Montieth, 5044 Hutchins place northwest; Charles C. Mayer, 2423 Tunlaw road northwest; Norman Fineberg, 11 West Leland street, Chevy Chase, Md.; Mrs. Nora C. Burbank, 3562 Macomb street northwest; George H. Odom, 1218 Potomac avenue southeast; Lenore Kelley Bartlett, 1109 Sixteenth street northwest; Frank W. Hardwick, 226 Third street northwest; John F. O'Lone, 1643 West Virginia avenue northeast; Frank J. Marion, Berwyn, Md.; Herbert F. McLaury, 2625 Rock Ford road northwest; Homer J. Fisher, 3900 Connecticut avenue northwest; Joseph K. Cheadle, 1567 Forty-fourth street northwest; Farris F. Kidd, 1712 Rhode Island avenue northwest; Florentin J. Lorin, 916 A street northwest, and Milton L. Wallace, Herndon, Va.

Francis E. Harrington, jr., 1 Eighteenth street southeast, was arrested by park police on the assumption that his Minnesota tags had expired, but they proved good to March 31. He was required to post $45 collateral, however, when he was found not to have a District driver's permit.

Chest Officers Will Be Chosen This Afternoon

Trustees to Meet In the Chamber of Commerce Building

Officers of the Community Chest will be elected by the board of trustees at a meeting in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building this afternoon.

The following names will be presented by the nominating committee, according to Newbold Noyes, committe chairman:

For president of the Chest, Coleman Jennings, for a second term; for vice presidents, Arthur Hellen, attorney; Charles B. Dulcan, department store executive; Miss Mae Schnurr, Bureau of Reclamation; John F. Victory, National Advisory Committe for Aeronautics, and Mrs. Wilson Lee, of the Community Chest League.

For the executive committee, to serve two-year terms, Dr. Borothy Boulding Ferebee, president of the Washington Welfare Association; Keith Merrill, formerly of the State Department, and H. L. Rust, jr., realtor.

A 36 per cent increase in the number of passes for clinical or hospital care issued during January, as compared with January of last year, was reported by the Health Security Administration, a Chest agency, at Tuesday's meeting of the board of directors. Between 400 and 500 persons are interviewed daily, the organization reported.

The chief problem of the group is not "so-called chiseling," said Ross Carretti, executive secretary, but the number of people who are too timid to apply for help.

Green Invites Support of Kelly Rival in Chicago

Chicago, March 1 (AP).—Republicans began a drive today to place Dwight H. Green in the mayor's office in the April 4 election, while Democratic chieftains moved to solidify their forces behind Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

Green, announcing his campaign would be based on a plea to "smash the Kelly-Nash machine," invited State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, who lost to Kelly yesterday to support him. Courtney made no reply.

Virtually complete but unofficial returns showed that more than 1,200,000 ballots had been cast, a new all-time high for a primary; that Kelly's vote exceeded the combined total of all other mayoral aspirants, and that Democrats had outpolled Republicans more than three to one.

Hazen to Ask $30,000 for Housing Survey

Sum Needed to Start $240,000 WPA Project Authorized for D. C.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday he would seek $30,000 from the United States Housing Authority for supervisory services in conducting the proposed city-wide survey on local housing facilities.

He revealed Mrs. Roosevelt had become interested in the survey which will be conducted by WPA workers under an allotment of $240,000. The $30,000 needed to begin the work has been holding up the project for some time.

Mrs. Roosevelt had written to Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the Park and Planning Commission for suggestions "as to funds which might be available." Attached to her letter was one from Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, of the Washington Housing Association, who said the organization had "exhausted every possible source or idea," in obtaining the amount necessary.

Commissioner Hazen said he would also approach the Board of Trade for any suggestions they might have to raise the necessary funds.

Mrs. Roosevelt's letter was referred to the Commissioner by Delano who said the matter was "really outside of my bailiwick."

Police Sergeant Haislip Retires After 20 Years

Sergt. William D. Haislip, 47, who joined the Metropolitan Police Department 20 years ago, was retired yesterday for physical disability.

A former ensign in the Navy, he is a native of Virginia and has been admitted to the bar in that State. Shortly after his appointment to the department he was on duty as a bicycle patrolman at the First Precinct. He was made a motorcycle man in 1925.

During his service in the department he has been attached to the First, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth and Twelfth precincts. He was promoted to sergeant nine years ago.

Haislip, who is an accomplished musician and a radio enthusiast, probably will be succeeded by Private A. S. Douglas, of the First Precinct, police officials said.

Zoning Board Denies School Moving Permit

Neighbors Object Child Pupils Are Too Noisy

The board of zoning adjustment yesterday denied an application of the Peter Pan School authorities to move their institution to 1615 Manchester lane from their present location on Park road.

Protests from residents near the proposed location, led by United States District Attorney David Pine, was the determining factor in the decision, it was disclosed. The school, which caters to children has an excellent record, but the residents "still believe children are noisy," it was stated.

At the same time the zoning board granted an application of the Skyland Apartments, Inc., requesting a variance in the building code in order to permit construction of the apartment development known as "Skyland" at Twenty-fifth street and Good Hope road southeast.

One Appeal Denied

The appeal of Cora E. Traylor and Leona K. Nash for a variance to permit construction of a rear second-story addition at 819 Tenth street northwest, was denied.

Appeal of Oscar and Pauline Weistock for permission to change a nonconforming use from a restaurant to delicatessen and grocery store at 6640 Georgia avenue northwest.

Other Appeals Approved

Appeal of George N. Bell for permission to erect semidetached and community houses on part of a parcel at Conduit and Reservoir roads northwest. It was pointed out there were several provisions to this approval.

Appeal of F. A. Blundon Co., agents for Harry and Ethel Bratt, owners, for permission to change a nonconforming use from a tailor shop to include a hand laundry, cleaning and tailoring shop at 215 Twelfth street southeast.

Appeal from Lorenzo Mims, 1728 Eighth street northwest, for permission to build a rear two-story addition at that premise.

Irish Suspected In London Blast

London (Thursday), March 2 (AP)—A terrific explosion in suburban Stonebridge Park damaged an aqueduct early today and police began an investigation on the theory it was a renewal of violence by the outlawed Irish republican army. There were no casualties.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Sometimes the card situation isn't really as hopeless as it appears.

South started sighing even before the bidding was concluded, and reached a new low in moans as his difficulties developed. When his partner leaped to three spades over the adverse two-heart bid by West, the first sigh was squeezed out. South sat and pondered.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable

NORTH DEALER

♠ A 10 4
♡ K 10 9
◇ K 6
♣ K 10 9 8 3

♠ 2 ♡ A Q 8 7 6 3 ◇ J 9 8 4 ♣ 6 2

WEST NORTH EAST SOUTH

♠ K Q 8 6 5 ♡ 4 2 ◇ Q 5 3 ♣ Q 5 4

♠ J 9 7 3 ♡ J 5 ◇ A 10 7 2 ♣ A J 7

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 4 ◇

He didn't want to pass after his partner's opening bid and force, not realizing, of course, that North had a rather weak opening in the first place and certainly no force in the second. But South didn't like to bid three no trump, indicating that he held only a four-card spade suit, as he had no stop in the hearts, which were bid by West. Finally, he decided that the least dangerous thing to do was bid four spades.

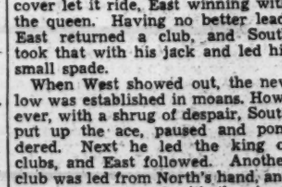
When North spread the dummy the second and more audible sigh came from South, and he started about his task with only a faint ray of hope. He took the opening diamond lead with the king in dummy and played back a diamond to his ace. Next he laid down the jack of hearts and West went up with the ace. At this point West wasn't feeling any too optimistic. He led a club more or less in desperation.

South let this ride around to his own hand and covered East's queen with his ace. At this point he perked up a bit as he saw possibilities of splitting the spades and running his club suit. He led the jack of spades, and when West failed to cover let it ride, East winning with the queen. Having no better lead, East returned a club, and South took that with his jack and led his small spade.

When West showed out, the new low was established in moans. However, with a shrug of despair, South put up the ace, paused and pondered. Next he led the king of clubs, and East followed. Another club was led from North's hand, and when East trumped with the six of spades South over-ruffed with the seven.

A diamond was led by South and ruffed with the ten of spades in dummy, and again East had to follow. Then the last club was led from dummy and when East, who had been sitting smugly by up to this point, studied his hand before playing, South suddenly realized that everything was going to be all right after all.

The situation was this:



If East ruffed with the king, South simply needed to discard his diamond. If East ruffed with the eight, South would over-ruff with the nine and win the heart trick. If East discarded the heart, South also would discard his heart and lead the king next. East finally decided on that course, but the hand was made, East and West winning only the ace of hearts and the king and queen of spades.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

Mostly of Jobs

Some top-notch jobs are open at the Railroad Retirement Board in line with the projected opening of 12 regional offices and approximately 60 district offices to conduct Railroad Retirement Board employment and claims business in the large railroad centers of the country.

Specifications for the 12 positions of regional director were made known yesterday. There will be two class 1 (CAF-14) directors at $6,500; six class 2 (CAF-13) directors at $5,600, and four class 3 (CAF-12) directors at $4,600. Rates of pay for the district offices have not as yet been fixed. The offices must be established by July 1.

The duties are:

Under administrative direction, subject to compliance with approved policies and procedures, but with wide latitude for independent action or decision, as director of a Class I, Class II, or Class III regional office of the board, to be responsible for the direction, control, and general supervision of all administrative activities of the regional office, and of the several district offices and free employment offices within the region, and the supervision of work performed for the board by employers, State unemployment compensation agencies, and other agencies designated by the board as claims agents or as free employment agencies; to assist in negotiating agreements with State unemployment compensation agencies and with employers and others for the provision of facilities for interviewing, registering, and placing workers covered by the railroad unemployment insurance act; to assist in negotiating agreements with State unemployment compensation agencies regarding workers covered by the railroad unemployment insurance act and by a State unemployment compensation law; to maintain constant contact with all co-operating agencies within the region for the purpose of promoting good working relations, explaining the provisions of the law and the rules, settling difficulties as they arise, and perfecting the organization and procedures of the field offices and agencies of the board; to supervise and direct the staff of the regional office engaged in the examination and adjudication of claims for unemployment insurance, the certification and payment of approved claims, the assignment of appeals cases to district boards of appeal, and the making of investigations and reports as required.

Minimum qualifications: Graduation from a standard four-year high school; at least four years of preliminary or background experience in full-time paid employment requiring the assumption of individual responsibility and the exercise of independent judgment in a large field of operations. In lieu of this experience there may be substituted, year for year, educational training in a college or university of recognized standing. It must also be shown that the personality is adapted to the particular field.

There must be "ability to secure the confidence and maintain the effective co-operation of railway officials, railway labor organizations and State unemployment compensation and other Government agencies."

The Civil Service Commission wants: Senior pharmacologist, $4,600; pharmacologist, $3,800; associate pharmacologist, $3,200; assistant pharmacologist, $2,600, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils and Food and Drug Administration, Agriculture Department.

Notes: Theodore Wesley Graske, formerly in the Legal Division, Home Loan Bank Board, has written an up-and-coming law book, "The Federal Reference Manual," which is being widely read now in the legal divisions. In his research and compilations, the author had the active assistance of Federal administrative and legal experts . . . The new medical practice of treating insanity with insulin shock will be dwelt on Sunday through the Office of Education's radio dramatization of "Modern Medicine" in the "World Is Yours" broadcast series. The hour is 4:30 . . . R. L. F. writes to find out how many persons have taken the C. S. examination for assistant messenger and how many of them were residents of Virginia. Answer: 25,900 took the examination, 900 being from Virginia.

Bob Burns Says—

I s'pose you heard of that farmer over in Italy who stole Widow Maria's 250-pound pig? She suspected him an' brought the police to look in his pig pen, but her pig wasn't there—just an old black hog. "I guess I was mistaken," she started to apologize, when all of a sudden it commenced to rain an' that black pig began changin' to a pinkish-white. It was her Michele after all, underneath a coat of paint! An' I'm here to tell you, old Mother Nature's sure wonderful! She wouldn't let that thievin' farmer get away with it. Since the pig wouldn't squeal on him, she saw to it that the rain did!

My Aunt Boo allus used to say that, sooner or later, your sins would find you out. I know I couldn't never git away with not washin' behind the ears. But then my Aunt Boo had the best eyesight of any woman in our county. It was so good that she could see a cinder on a person's nose half an hour before it lit! I remember once, I was over at Aunt Boo's when she had the parson to dinner. He commenced lecturin' me on bein' a good boy an' tellin' me about his own life bein' so spotless. But I'd been watchin' him close an' I had a come-back that floored him. "You ain't so spotless as you think," says I. "An' if my Aunt Boo wasn't bein' polite, she'd up an' tell you. You've got some gravy on your vest!"

Bèdtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

A Merry-Go-Round That Wasn't Merry

What thoughts Chatterer the Red Squirrel had I don't know. Probably he had none. He had no time for thinking. It was a time for action and action must be quick. I suspect that some folks would say that he acted from instinct. That depends on just what you call instinct. I think he acted through experience.

Chatterer was engaged in what might be called a merry-go-round, only there was nothing merry about it. He was going round and round the trunk of a big tree, but not for fun. Instead of merriment in that merry-go-round, there was a desperate earnestness. Chatterer was running around that tree for his life. Yes, sir, that is what he was doing—running around the trunk of that tree for his life.

He didn't keep going in the same direction. He repeatedly reversed his direction. Sometimes he moved up and sometimes he moved down. He wanted to get down to the ground and away from that tree. He wouldn't care if he never saw that tree again.

And all the time there were two others engaged in that merry-go-round. They were Hooty the Owl and Mrs. Hooty. They were trying to catch Chatterer and Chatterer was trying not to be caught. It had come about because Chatterer had been detected in mischief. He had been discovered by Mrs. Hooty at her nest up high in that tree, just as he was about to steal one of her pair of precious eggs. Then while Chatterer was dodging about on the under side of that nest Hooty had returned. Of course he saw at once what was going on and hurried to the assistance of Mrs. Hooty.

Such a hissing and snapping of bills as there was! It was dreadful to hear. It certainly would have added to Chatterer's fright had that been possible which it wasn't. Chatterer was as badly scared as a Squirrel could be, and with cause. Just dodging Mrs. Hooty was bad enough but now there were two to dodge, dodging the claws of one might easily bring him within reach of the claws of the other.

There was one thing in Chatterer's favor. As long as he clung to the trunk of the tree he was where it was difficult for those big birds to strike at him. They couldn't swoop at him as they could and would have had he been on the ground or running along a branch. It was awkward for them to strike at him on that tree-trunk. Their big wings seemed to be in their own way, and in the way of each other. So somehow, he really didn't know how himself, Chatterer managed to keep clear of those cruel claws. Once one of them just touched him. It tore his coat ever so little and it hurt. That is it hurt afterward. At the time Chatterer was too busy to even notice it.

Chatterer was getting tired and somewhat out of breath. One narrow escape followed another. They gave him no time to rest. It was fortunate for him that he was so small and that he could move so quickly.

Little by little Chatterer dodged his way down the tree until near the ground he saw a chance to jump and run when both of his enemies were on the opposite side of the tree from him. He ran right under them and by the time they had got out of the way of each other he had reached and whisked around the trunk of another tree. There the merry-go-round was resumed. Now Chatterer was climbing up instead of down. At last he saw a chance to run straight up that tree for a little way. You should have seen how fast he ran despite the running and dodging he had already done so much of.

Mrs. Hooty saw him and swooped. She was just too late. Chatterer had popped into a hole that was just big enough for him to enter. He was safe at last. He was safe in the old home of Drummer the Woodpecker from which he had done so much spying on those big Owls and their nest. He was out of breath, trembling with fright, and he had lost all desire for eggs.

Declares Church Has 'Lost One of Its True And Faithful Sons'

Tribute to the "excelling gifts" of the Very Rev. George C. F. Bratenahl, former dean of the Washington Cathedral, who died Tuesday at his home in Bethesda, was paid yesterday by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington.

He declared that in the death of Dr. Bratenahl the church had "lost one of its true and faithful sons."

Dr. Bratenahl, who had been closely associated with Bishop Henry Yates Satterlee in the building of the Cathedral on Mount Saint Alban, was termed by Bishop Freeman the "guiding spirit" in the development of the crypt chapels, the choir, and particularly the reredos.

Drew Up Plans

To the building of the cathedral, Dr. Bratenahl devoted the greater part of his strength and interest during the last 39 years of his life. He not only helped draw up plans and supervise the construction, but aided in working out a constitution for the cathedral. To this end he made several trips to England to study constitutions of cathedrals there, and to add to his knowledge of church symbolism; gained through lifelong study.

In spite of his close attention to the practical side of his work as chairman of the building committee, Dr. Bratenahl did not neglect his other interests. The Girls Friendly, the House of Mercy, the Home for Incurables and St. Ann's Home claimed his attention, as well as his spiritual duties. He was also keenly interested in mission work, serving at one time as secretary to the third department, and later as secretary to the Province of Washington.

Funeral in Cleveland

Funeral services will be held today in Cleveland, Dr. Bratenahl's birthplace, at 2 p. m., at St. Paul's Church. Officiating clergymen will be the Right Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, D. D., Bishop of Ohio; the Rev. Dr. Walter R. Breed, rector of St. Paul's Church, Cleveland, and the Rev. Dr. G. Freeland Peter, of Washington.

Honorary pallbearers will be:

Alexander C. Brown, Cleveland; Alexander C. Brown, jr., Detroit; Edward R. Brown, Cleveland; Henry E. Sheffield, Cleveland; Fayette Brown, Cleveland; Harvey H. Brown, jr., Cleveland; William Howard Prescott, jr., Cleveland; Chester W. Brooks, Cleveland; Elton Hoyt 2d, Cleveland; James R. Garfield, Cleveland, former Secretary of the Interior; Dr. Harry A. Garfield, Washington; Dr. Harvey Cushing, New Haven, Conn.; Dr. E. H. Cushing, Cleveland; Dr. Sterling Ruffin, Washington, and Charles H. Merryman, Washington.

Burial will be in Woodland Cemetery, Cleveland.
